INDONESIA BLOCKS PROPOSED ASEAN COMMON MARKET

HK291400 Hong Kong AFP in English 1330 GMT 29 Aug 86

[By Roberto Coloma]

[Text] Manila, Aug 29 (AFP) -- Strong objections from Indonesia at a meeting Friday of ASEAN economic ministers have blocked a proposal for a regional common market by the year 2000, a top official involved in the meeting said. The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) will instead adopt a gradual policy of trade liberalization among its six member countries, the official said. "There was one country that was really scared" of the common-market idea because of its economic problems, the official, who requested anonymity, told reporters. Asked if it was the largest country, the official nodded vigorously.

Indonesia, with a population exceeding 160 million, is by far the largest ASEAN member. The others are Brunei, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand. ASEAN has been seeking ways of fostering economic cooperation and protecting member economies from trade protectionism in the West and low commodity prices on the world market.

The Philippines and Malaysia took the initiative to propose a common market when the three-day conference opened Thursday. Philippine Trade and Industry Minister Jose Concepcion, the conference chairman, refused to comment after Friday's talks, saying the official ASEAN stand would be announced at a closing news conference Saturday. But the official who spoke to reporters said: "The result (of the meeting) is going to state that among the proposals was an ASEAN free-trade area, but that there were a lot of difficulties and it will be studied."

The compromise would merely amount to "steps toward" a free market in the region, where total trade among ASEAN members amounted to 27 billion dollars in 1983, according to figures released by conference organizers.

As a result of Indonesia's opposition, the proposal for a common market by the year 2000 may not even be brought to next August's summit of Asian leaders "if the difficulties cannot be ironed out," the sources said. ASEAN officials had earlier said that the Manila summit -- only the third in ASEAN history -- would chart "new directions" whereby economic cooperation could catch up with the political unity that has developed within ASEAN over Vietnam's military presence in Cambodia.

"ASEAN is really consensus," the official said. "If there is one country that objects, there is nothing that can be done. Everybody liked it (except Indonesia)." "They were afraid of being at the losing end. They have too many problems. It's very conservative," the official said. "We were asking for a definite time frame of 2000. It's not possible." Other conference sources speculated that Indonesia feared buying much more than it could sell to its ASEAN partners, due to its huge population.

The official said the "steps forward" to a freer ASEAN market would include a "definite time frame for liberalization, preferential tariff trade agreements (and) removal of non-tariff barriers."

Comparing the economic ministers' meeting to previous ones, the official said: "We are now directing the economic committees to have specific proposals with specific time frames, and to develop indicators that would allow us to measure our success."

Asked about the outcome of discussions on promises by ASEAN's chief allies -- the so-called "dialogue partners" -- to open their markets to ASEAN products, the official replied: "more dialogue." The dialogue partners are the United States, Japan, the European Community, Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

ASEAN MINISTERS END MEETING, COMMON MARKET SHELVED

[Text] Manila, Aug 30 (AFP) -- ASEAN economic ministers Saturday ended a three-day meeting here looking to the August 1987 Manila summit for breakthroughs in economic unity after shelving a proposal for a common market by the year 2000. The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), whose economic cooperation has lagged behind its anti-communist political solidarity, will meanwhile adopt a gradual programme of opening up their markets to one another, the ministers said.

Indonesia, the largest of the six-member ASEAN, blocked the common-market proposal, a top official involved in the talks said Friday and this was later confirmed by conference sources.

The other members -- the Philippines, Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore and Brunei -- were supportive of the idea, along with the ASEAN chamber of commerce and industry, which groups regional businessmen working closely with ASEAN, the sources said.

Philippine Trade and Industry Minister Jose Concepcion told reporters Saturday: "This discussion in a way is a preparation of the new initiatives, the new moves, the new dimensions that will be submitted to the ASEAN summit meeting."

Mr. Concepcion repeatedly evaded the common-market issue and stressed moves to lower intra-ASEAN trade barriers. But he finally said "yes," when asked if the ministers had failed to reach a consensus on the idea. The ASEAN requires consensus on all joint undertakings. Indonesian Trade Minister Rahmat Saleh refused to comment at the news conference, at which Mr. Concepcion spoke for the ministers.

Some conference sources said Indonesia might be wary of the common-market idea because it is by far the largest nation in ASEAN, with more than 160 million people, and might end up buying far more from its neighbors than it sells. Mr. Concepcion said the matter would be studied further.

ASEAN, whose political unity was forged by Cambodian conflict, has been criticized for shortcomings on the economic side, and is now seeking ways of protecting its members from western protectionism and low commodity prices.

The Philippines, with the weakest economy in ASEAN, had proposed a counter-trade system allowing kmembers to use their own currencies in intra-ASEAN trade, thus removing the need for dollars and foreign loans, but this was also shelved, Mr. Concepcion said.

But the economic ministers had "welcomed" Manila's initiative of allowing the use of ASEAN national currencies as a medium of exchange for trade of Philippine products with its partners, Mr. Concepcion said.

He said possible initiatives at the summit included improved preferential trade agreements, tariff liberalization, standstill and rollback of non-tariff barriers, such as quotas and permits, preferences for ASEAN investment, harmonizing investment laws and plans, and more industrial joint ventures. Also included were proposals for greater cooperation in commodities, shipping, banking, insurance and tourism, and the "development of indicators that will allow the effective monitoring of ASEAN economic cooperation," he added.

The ministers had directed senior economic officials to study the initiatives and come up with specific proposals for them to submit to the Manila summit, stressing that they must be based on mutual gain and be phased.

The ministers signed, at the news conference, agreements giving preference to ASEAN contractors in projects funded by International Financial institutions such as the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank, and increasing tariff protection for products of ASEAN industrial joint-ventures.

The Manila summit, only the third in ASEAN's history, will coincide with its 20th anniversary. The economic ministers will next convene in Singapore in February and again in Manila just before the summit.

KURANARI COMMENTS ON SDI, TIES WITH USSR, PRC

[Text] Karuizawa, Nagano Pref., Aug. 30 KYODO -- The Japanese Government will decide by September 10 whether or not to participate in the Strategic Defense Initiative, Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari said Saturday.

Kuranari, speaking at a Liberal-Democratic Party seminar here, stopped short of saying whether they would decide participation in the project.

A cabinet task force has studied the matter for the past half year after the United States invited Japan and other Western allies to participate in the research phase of the antimissile program.

One major hurdle lies in a Diet resolution limiting Japan's space research efforts to peaceful use only. Kuranari said the government is probing ways on how to resolve the Diet resolution so that a decision on Japan's participation can be reached.

Kuranari said the government is also working on the issue of fingerprinting requirements for foreign residents in Japan, which he said is aggravating Japan's ties with South Korea. He said he expected the matter to improve, and that the justice minister is "positive" about taking appropriate steps to achieve this.

On Japan's ties with the Soviet Union, Kuranari said Japan welcomes Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's proposed visit to Japan, noting that the visit reflects Gorbachev's policy of attaching more importance to Asia in Soviet foreign policy. He said the Japanese Government is hopeful that the visit will produce substantial results, and cited Japan's claim to four Soviet-held islands off northern Japan as a major thorn in bilateral ties. Also, he said Japan has no intention of separating politics from economics in its ties with the Soviet Union, and added that Japan's claim of sovereignty of the four northern islands "is an issue which can't be averted."

Turning to Japan's ties with China, Kuranari cited the "Yasukuni Shrine" problem as a major irritant in otherwise smooth bilateral ties. While Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's decision to avoid an official visit to the shrine August 15 has temporarily averted a confrontation with China, the issue will continue to haunt bilateral relations in the future, Kuranari said. The basic problem, he said, is that although the shrine is dedicated to the war dead, Japan's A-class war criminals are also enshrined there.

On Japan-U.S. ties, Kuranari warned that the Kansai airport project will turn into another aspect of trade friction with the United States if the project contracts are not open to American firms.

On Japan's ties with Southeast Asia, Kuranari proposed that Japan accept more students from the region as part of Japanese efforts to build closer ties with the region.

Overall, Kuranari advocated a more active part in foreign policy, saying that Japan should play a role that is more compatible with its economic strength in the world.

CABINET MINISTERS DISCUSS SDI PARTICIPATION

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 2 KYODO -- Cabinet ministers concerned with Japan's possible participation in the research phase of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), will reach a conclusion on the matter on Septemeber 9, government sources said Tuesday.

The ministers' confab, led by Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda, reviewed their past discussions in a fifth meeting Tuesday morning. They discussed whether Japan's participation in the SDI project would breach a 1969 Diet resolution over peaceful use of space. According to the sources, the Diet resolution is the biggest obstacle to Japan joining in research on SDI, a space-based antimissile system known as "star wars."

The ministers agreed that Japan's participation would not breach the Diet resolution because the project is being conducted by the U.S. The ministers also agreed that their September 9 meeting will finalize their report to be submitted to the cabinet.

Gotoda told reporters after the Tuesday meeting that the final decision is likely to be made within the first 10 days of this month. He added that he himself would announce the official decision.

In the Tuesday meeting the concerned ministers discussed how research might benefit Japan, Gotoda said. The United States will hold the final rights to any new technology developed in the SDI research, the ministers agreed. But they agreed that the result should be available to Japanese companies participating in the study, Gotoda said.

The ministers also concluded that their decision that SDI participation would not breach the Diet resolution must be explained to the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party through the Foreign Ministry. Gotoda said the ministers considered objections by opposition parties to Japan's joining SDI research. They will discuss the matter from "all considerable aspects" in the final meeting on next Tuesday, Gotoda added.

TAMURA LEAVES FOR TRADE MEETING IN PORTUGAL

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 31 KYODO -- Hajime Tamura, minister of international trade and industry, left for Portugal Sunday to attend a three-day meeting with his colleagues from three other major trading blocs to be held in a Lisbon suburb.

Joining Tamura at the so-called quadrilateral meeting, starting Thursday, will be top trade officials of the United States, Canada and the European Community (EC).

The meeting is designed to establish a common front toward a projected new round of multilateral talks for freer world trade. The trade talks are expected to be kicked off at a ministerial meeting of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) in Punta del Este, Uruguay, September 15-19.

GROUPS PROTEST KURANARI MEETING WITH BOTHA

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 2 KYODO -- Representatives from the Japan Socialist Party and four antiapartheid groups met with Foreign Ministry officials Tuesday to protest a scheduled meeting between Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari and his South African counterpart Roelof F. Botha.

Botha is due to arrive in Japan Wednesday for a five-day visit. The foreign ministers' meeting, tentatively scheduled for Thursday morning, will be the first high-level exchange between Japan and South Africa, which do not have full diplomatic relations.

In a prepared statement delivered by Chisato Tatebayashi of the JSP's International Bureau, the organizations -- including the General Council of Trade Unions of Japan (Sohyo) and the Japan Anti-Apartheid Committee -- demanded that the foreign minister retract permission for Botha's entry into Japan. If permission is not to be withdrawn, the activists demanded there be no contact between Botha and Japanese Government officials. The group also called for Japan to introduce more stringent economic sanctions against South Africa.

Kunisada Kume, deputy director general of the ministry's Middle East and African Affairs Bureau, explained that Botha is to visit Japan as a tourist and that the meeting with Kuranari was requested by the South African side. He said the request was accepted because Japan wants to "use this opportunity to tell (South Africa) about Japan's antiapartheid stance."

The consul-general of the Republic of South Africa in Tokyo said Botha, while on his private visit, will attend other unofficial meetings, but declined to disclose details.

Kume said Japan, which bans direct investment in South Africa, will cooperate with the European Community and the United States in introducing harsher economic sanctions.

1 KILLED, 8 WOUNDED IN ATTACKS AGAINST UNIONISTS

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 11 (AFP) -- One person was killed and eight others were wounded in attacks at six separate locations Monday against trade unionists favorable to ending the nationalisation of the Japanese railways, police said.

Police said they suspected a leading extreme left group, the Chukaku-Ha, of mounting the dawn attacks in Tokyo, Osaka and Kobe against the homes of the unionists, who belonged to a rival leftist union, the Kaku-Maru. They said members of the unionists' families were hurt in the attacks carried out by the groups of helmeted men armed with clubs and iron bars.

FISCAL 1987 BUDGET REQUESTS UP 6. 7 PERCENT

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 30 KYODO -- Government departments have sought appropriations totaling 57.70 trillion yen for the fiscal 1987 general account budget, up 6.7 percent from the current fiscal year ending next March, the Finance Ministry reported Saturday.

Requests for general expenditures -- the general ccount total minus debt-servicing costs and tax allocations to local governments -- came to 32.75 trillion yen, up 0.5 percent the ministry said. The minimal increase resulted from the ministry's five-year-old austerity policy. The ministry had urged all government departments to reduce budget requests from last year's levels. But some programs were allowed increased requests. They included defense spending, up 6.3 percent to 3.55 trillion yen, and official development assistance (ODA), up 7.4 percent to 316.9 billion yen.

The strong 6.7 percent rise in the total budget requests was due to a 24.9 percent surge to 14.14 trillion yen in the debt-servicing program (redemptions and interest payments on government bonds), ministry officials said. Debt servicing has become the largest single program, which accounts for nearly a quarter -- 24.5 percent -- of the fiscal 1987 general account spending. Outstanding government bonds are expected to total a whopping 151 trillion yen at the end of fiscal 1987 compared with 143 trillion yen a year earlier, the officials said.

The ministry is set to begin next week the painful job of paring down the requested spending to the 55 trillion yen level for the general account budget and to the fiscal

DPRK 'WILL NOT PARTICIPATE' IN SEOUL ASIAN GAMES

SK010204 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2150 GMT 31 Aug 86

[NODONG SINMUN 1 September commentary: "We Will Not Participate in Impure Games"]

[Text] It has been learned that the 10th Asian Games will be held in Seoul from 20 September to 5 October. In the past, the Asian Games, held once every 4 years, have helped to develop Asian sports and promote friendship and unity among athletes. The 10th Asian games should also be a sound sporting event that helps increase friendship between the Asian countries, peoples, and athletes and that promotes their unity in accordance with the Olympics.

However, this time the games are being used for impure political aims running counter to the ideals of the Olympics and sportsmanship. Taking advantage of the fact that the Asian Games are being held in Seoul, the South Korean authorities are using the games to instigate North-South confrontation and to foster division.

They are continuously fabricating and spreading rumors that we are attempting to launch armed infiltration and provocations with the approach of the games. Thus, they are using the games to instigate antagonism and a sense of confrontation against us by strengthening the anticommunist commotion and war exercises, and to aggravate tension.

Furthermore, they are accelerating troop reinforcements against us, raving that they are going to ensure the success of the Asian Games by force. At the April security consultative meeting held with the United States in Seoul, the South Korean authorities requested the assistance of the armed forces and protection under the nuclear umbrella to prepare for the Asian Games and the Olympics. They are continuously dragging various types of new military equipment, including F-16 fighters, into South Korea. Why are military aircraft needed for sports games? We need not explain that there is no relationship between troop reinforcements and sports games, between a nuclear umbrella and sports games, and between anticommunist commotion and sports games.

The alarming moves in South Korea are inconsistent with the lofty ideals of the Olympics and sportsmanship. The Asian Games, reportedly to be held in Seoul, cannot be well-intended games designed to promote sports.

The South Korean puppets attracted the Asian Games and the Olympics to Seoul with the intent from the very beginning of creating favorable circumstances for their two Koreas plot by perpetuating the nation's division on the pretext of international sports festivals and by using it to help prolong their hold on power.

From the early stages of discussing the venue of the Asian Games, as well as that of the Olympics, the South Korean ruling faction has rigorously carried out behind-the-scenes dealings, while raving that such events will open favorable prospects for simultaneous entry into the United Nations, cross-recognition, and cross-contacts.

This shows that creating international circumstances for the two Koreas plot through acceptance into the United Nations and cross-recognition was Seoul's true motive for hosting the Asian sports games.

Holding an international sports festival in one part of a divided country, like ours, will only aggravate North-South confrontation and inspire division. This is very harmful [paekhae muik] to the reunification of our country and to peace on the Korean peninsula and in Asia. This is why public opinion at home and abroad, which treasures justice and peace, opposes and rejects Seoul's hosting of the Asian Games.

According to reports, only 21 of the 36 member nations had submitted their entry applications by 27 August, 4 days before the entry application deadline for these games. This shows that the games will be very inactive [chojohan] ones, compared to the Ninth Games in which 33 countries participated.

The South Korean youth and students, not yielding to vicious repression by the puppet police, are persistently struggling to check the unilateral holding of the Asian Games and the Olympics. On 27 August, several hundred students of Hanyang University gathered on campus and held a rally to resolutely check the pro-division [of the Korean peninsula] Asian Games and carried out a stone-throwing battle against the combat police, who were running amok with repression.

The advance of the youth and students is an extremely just and righteous act reflecting the unanimous demand of the South Korean people. However, the South Korean ruling faction is resorting to violence in an attempt to realize its impure political aims by blocking at any cost the struggle continuously carried out by the youth, students, and people to oppose the Asian Games.

The South Korean rulers have practically put South Korea under martial law by handing down in succession various repressive orders, including the order for emergency guards and the order for emergency guard duty on the pretext of maintaining social stability and order for the Asian Games. Thus, they are blocking the patriotic advance of the youth, students, and people by fully mobilizing the repressive forces.

Under conditions in which the South Korean rulers are misusing the Asian Games for impure political aims, participation in these games cannot but instigate dictatorship. Therefore, participation in the Asian Games is not merely a sports issue, but a serious political issue as well. The Korean people have been suffering from the nation's division for more than 40 years. Our people, who ardently aspire for national reunification, do not tolerate any factor creating obstacles to reunification. We who aspire for reunification cannot participate [kaeip] in an act that helps divide the nation. Thus, we cannot participate in the 10th Asian Games to be held in Seoul.

We firmly believe that our just position faithful to our national cause and contributing to the cause of maintaining peace in Asia will enjoy deserved sympathy and support from the world's people and sports circles.

DOOR STILL 'OPEN' FOR DPRK TO PARTICIPATE IN ASIAD

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 1 KYODO -- The Seoul Asian Games Organizing Committee (SAGOC) said Monday the door will be open until September 20, the opening day for the Asiad, if North Korea wishes to reverse its decision and participate in the games. SAGOC officials discounted as a foregone conclusion Monday's official announcement in the (North) Korea Workers' Party official organ, NODONG SINMUN, that the communist North will sit out the Asiad because it claimed South Korea is using the games for political purposes.

PYONGYANG PLANNING TO SUBVERT ASIAN GAMES

SK291231 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 1000 GMT 29 Aug 86

[Report by correspondent Yu Sung-che from Tokyo]

[Text] On 29 August TONGIL ILBO [ROK Government-backed paper published in Japan] reported by quoting a source well informed in the internal affairs of the puppet North that on 10 August the puppet North held an expanded meeting of the so-called Workers' Party Political Bureau and reconfirmed a decision to conduct subversive activities by mobilizing all possible means to check the Seoul Asian Games.

The source disclosed that the expanded meeting of the Political Bureau -- in which full and alternate members of the Workers' Party Political Bureau of the puppet North, vice premiers, and department director-level officials dealing with operations against South Korea participated and, in particular, at which Kim Il-song showed up for a while -- reconfirmed the policy of mobilizing all means to abort or hinder the Asian Games.

The source said that Kim Chong-il, the son of Kim Il-song; O Chin-u, minister of the people's armed forces; and others are leading subversive operations against the Asian Games.

The source revealed that the meeting also reconfirmed the decision to employ international terrorists -- a concrete way to subvert the Asian Games -- by learning a lesson from the failure of the Rangoon assassination incident in which the direct involvement of the puppet North's operatives was brought to light and because of which the puppet North caused itself to be isolated internationally, adding that because terrorists from Europe or the Middle East are easily recognizable, the meeting decided to use Japanese terrorists. The source also disclosed that it was decided at the meeting to employ Koreans in Japan -- just as the puppet North did when it perpetrated the Mun Se-kwang incident in 1974 -- or to win over anti-system forces in Korea and Koreans who frequently visit Japan and have relatives who live there.

Calling to mind the fact that the puppet North recently committed shooting incidents on two occasions along the truce line, the source said the incidents are linked to the decision of the puppet North's Political Bureau to constantly conduct subversive operations against the Asian Games by mobilizing all means, and added that the puppet North seeks to incite a sense of unrest among the participating countries by showing the fact that tension between North and South Korea is growing higher before the opening of the Asian Games.

180 STUDENTS ARRESTED BEFORE ASIA GAMES

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 30 (YONHAP) -- The Supreme Public Prosecutors' Office, following a four-month investigation into Korea's two radical student groups, Saturday announced that it has arrested 180 members of the groups and is seeking 91 others. The "Minmintu" and "Chamintu," two extremist student organizations set up on univesity campuses, have masterminded violent anti-government demonstrations, both on and off campus, and have staged street riots, according to the announcement.

Among those arrested, 154 were put under formal arrest, 11 were booked without physical detention and 15 others were relieved of their prosecution [as received], the office reported. Sixty-three of the 154 under custody were charged with violating the national security law, eight with rioting, 17 with breaking the law governing the punishment of violent acts, 42 with violating the law on assembly and demonstrations, and 24 are under investigation, according to the announcement.

The prosecution defined the two groups as "leftist-leaning" and "pro-communist," pointing out that "Minmintu" and "Chamintu" have set a goal of overthrowing Korea's liberal democratic system through violent revolution of the masses in an effort to bring radical socialism to the nation. The groups' leaders have been listening to North Korea's anti-Seoul broadcast programs, thereby exposing themselves to North Korea's leftist ideology, it added.

To advance their goals, "Minmintu" and "Chamintu" had been capitalizing on the efforts of the ruling and opposition parties to revise the Constitution through compromise, as well as the government's policy of trying to create harmony for the upcoming Asian Games and 1986 Seoul Olympics. The two groups are trying to unite their members, both workers and students, through pro-communist ideology, according to the office.

The members of the two groups are more radical than those of "Sammintu" and do not recognize the current political system, it said. Key members of the "Sammin Struggle Committee," which represents national unification, liberation of the masses and struggle for democracy, were rounded up last year. According to the office, the "Minmintu" and "Chamintu" have led violent demonstrations and have illegally occupied public buildings, chanting anti-American and anti-government slogans, in line with their ideological booklets, which advocate "Liberation declaration."

Since it was established on Feb. 5, the "Minmintu," which is committed to "Anti-Americanism, anti-fascism and democracy," has infiltrated 39 universities. The "Chamintu" was set up last March at Seoul National University and Korea University to fight "anti-military fascism."

NKDP Refutes Prosecution Claims

[Text] The major opposition New Korea Democratic Party claimed yesterday that the outcome of the investigation in the prosecution of "Minmintu" and "Chamintu," major dissident students groups, is very different from what was uncovered by the party's Human Rights Committee.

Party spokesman Hong Sa-tok issued a statement, refuting the prosecution's claim that the two dissident forces have masterminded left-leaning anti-government demonstrations in the first semester of this year.

Hong asserted, "The only way to stop radical students' anti-government struggle is to repeal the quarter century-long anti-democratic constitutional order and return to the path towards democracy at the earliest possible moment."

POLICE PLAN TO PREVENT STUDENTS DISRUPTING ASIAD

Students Form 'Struggle' Groups

[Text] The police are learned to be all out in taking precautionary measures against possible surprise rallies by radical students during the Asian Games period upon a tip that activist students have organized a struggle committee to foil the Asiad.

The police efforts are focused on disbanding the committee by detecting it in advance and secluding activist students from stadiums during the games period, informed sources said.

According to the sources, four to 10 activist students are to form a group and launch a surprise rally on an individual university basis at the games sites.

In the case of the gymnasium of Seoul National University where table tennis matches will be held, the police decided to set up a steel fence around the gymnasium.

Police will be on guard in and around the gymnasium around the clock starting Sept. 16.

The police are working out special precautionary measures for the Suwon campus of Sungkyunkwan University where Taekwondo matches will take place and also for Hanyang University where volleyball games will be held.

Plan to 'Seclude' Activists

[Text] Student activists and drop-outs who are listed as "dangerous" for possibly holding a surprise rally during the Asian Games period are likely to be urged to voluntarily enlist for military service before the opening of the Asian Games on Sept. 20.

In a way to prevent the so-called "activist sphere" from taking sabotage actions, the Education Ministry and other concerned authorities are reportedly busy working out measures to "seclude" student activists during the period of the games.

As for 129 drop-outs who were suspected to have masterminded past campus disturbances, the authorities intend to take speedy procedures require for them to join the Army before the Asiad, it was learned.

The authorities will take similar measures for 130 activist students, classified as "A" class for their active role in student movements.

The Office of Military Manpower Administration usually conscripts shortly after university students are suspended or expelled from school.

If the listed student activists refuse to accept the "advice" for advance enlistment for military duty, the school authorities are supposed to assume responsibility for their seclusion.

The school authorities reportedly plan to arrange "forced" tours for the students during the Asian Games period.

In case such seclusion measures are not effective, the authorities are examining the possibility of sending them to summary courts on the grounds that they masterminded roles in the previous student demonstrations.

Upon learning that radical students plot to stage surprise rallies at sports facilities for the Asiad period, the police have stepped up supervision on the whereabouts of some 5,200 students listed as activists.

PRC TO USE DIRECT FLIGHTS TO SEOUL FOR ASIAD

[Text] Seoul, Aug 30 KYODO -- South Korea is to allow China to make direct flights to Seoul to send its athletic delegation to the Asian Games starting September 20, Seoul Asian Games Organizing Committee (Sagoc) sources said Saturday. The schedule for the first direct Chinese flights envisages charters by China's state-run airline, Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC), on September 12 and 15 to send athletes and officials nonstop between Beijing and Seoul. The plan has been approved by South Korea's Transportation Ministry. China and South Korea have no diplomatic relations.

South Korea has been keen for the 520-strong Chinese delegation to use direct flights to Seoul in view of the fact that the North Korean sports delegation flew nonstop from Pyongyang to Narita, on the outskirts of Tokyo, last summer to take part in the Universiad, the student Olympics, in Kobe, western Japan. Japan and North Korea also have no diplomatic ties.

Wei Jizhong, an official of the Chinese Olympic Committee, said on August 16 that the Chinese delegation would use direct flights. China applied for the direct flights to Seoul since North Korea, which usually keeps a watchful eye on the Seoul-Beijing relationships, did not raise strong objections to the plan because of its similar facilities at the Universiad, sports sources here said.

STATEMENT OF DELEGATE TO N.-S. RED CROSS TALKS

[Text] Yi Yong-tok, senior delegate of our side to the North-South Red Cross talks issued a statement this morning urging the North Korean side to come to the table for Red Cross talks. The statement reads: Statement by senior delegate to our side to the North-South Red Cross talks:

The North Korean side has persistently failed to send a reply to our side's 11 July proposal that the 11th round of the North-South Red Cross talks be held in Pyongyang today. I cannot but express concern over the fact that suspension of the North-South Red Cross talks has been prolonged due to the North Korean side's refusal of our proposal. As with last year, this year, too, the North Korean side unilaterally postponed indefinitely the 11th round of the North-South Red Cross talks, which both sides had agreed to hold on 26 February, using the excuse of the "Team Spirit" military exercise.

Following completion of the "Team Spirit" military exercise, North Korean side came up again with the so-called tripartite military talks proposal claiming that only when such tripartite military talks are held first and progress is made then can the suspended North-South Red Cross talks be resumed. In addition to this, recently the North Korean side created another obstacle to North-South dialogue by linking our domestic affairs to it.

Such an attitude on the part of the North Korean side evades the resolution of humanitarian problems between the North and South, completely running counter to the spirit and principle of the Red Cross societies and unilaterally destroying the agreements reached between both sides. Therefore, we cannot but deplore this.

In the North-South Red Cross talks which were held last year after 12 years, both sides agreed to hold a package discussion of the 5 agenda items and to make free travel one of the methods for implementing the 5 agenda items. Thus, the talks achieved some progress. Furthermore, numerous separated families in the North and South, who witnessed the exchanges of home-visiting groups of separated families last year, want to see the Red Cross talks progress well again this year so that all separated families can visit their hometowns and meet their relatives.

Such being the situation, the North Korean side has refused to hold the 11th round of the North-South Korean Red Cross talks by coming up with political and military excuses which are contrary to reason. Completely ignoring the desires of separated families and the expectations of all brethren cannot be considered a manifestation of insincerity. As everyone knows, ideologies and ideals should be transcended in resolving humanitarian problems. The resolution of humanitarian problems should not be delayed on the unilaterially solely because of political or military issues.

This notwithstanding, the North Korean side has come up with tripartite military talks and the issue of our domestic affairs in a bid to use them as a precondition for the Red Cross talks. This cannot but be condemned as utilizing humanitarian issues for insidious political purposes. At the same time, this will lead the people of the world to doubt the basic stand and attitude of the North Korean side. While talking about compatriotic love and humanitarianism, the North Korean side has repeated the irresponsible act of unilaterally suspending ongoing talks by frequently violating agreements and by picking on the other side's domestic affairs under the pretext of creating an atmosphere for dialogue.

Failure to resolve the problem of over 10 million separated families dispersed in the North and South is attributed precisely to this attitude on the North Korean side. The North Korean side should not suspend the humanitarian talks by bringing up problems which have nothing to do with the Red Cross talks but should show sincerity towards the existing Red Cross talks and toward resolution of the problem of separated families proving through deeds that what they say is credible.

We urge that if the North Korean side is really interested in resolving the problem of separated families it should renounce its unwarranted act turning down the desire of separated families and running counter to the progress of dialogue and should unconditonally participate in the 11th round North-South Red Cross talks at the earliest possible date.

50,000 ATTEND OPPOSITION RALLY IN PUSAN 30 AUG

[Text] Pusan, South Korea, Aug 30 (AFP) -- An estimated 50,000 people attended an opposition rally in this southern port city Saturday to press for direct presidential elections eyewitnesses said. The rally, hosted by the major opposition New Korea Democratic party (NKDP), was held at a playground in the western outskirts of this provincial city in defiance of a government ban on outdoor rallies. Police reported no clashes during or after the rally, which lasted for over two hours. Eyewitnesses said that NKDP followers did not try to take to the streets after the rally broke up as they have often done in the past. Few dissident students turned up at the rally, they added.

It was the first opposition rally held since the ruling and opposition parties launched a bipartisan parliamentary committee last month charged with working out a compromise version of new constitution. The opposition has been pushing for a constitutional amendment that would allow South Korea's president to be chosen by popular vote. As the rally, opposition leader Kim Yong-sam, an NKDP advisor, threatened to give up dialogue with the ruling camp and resort to people's power if the ruling party continues to advocate a parliamentary system of government. The opposition wants a presidential system in which the head of state is elected through direct popular vote, while the ruling party favors a cabinet system similar to the one in West Germany. Kim Yong-sam stressed that the opposition demand for a direct presidential election is the only way to solve the legitimacy problem, which he said was inherent in the current regime. He was apparently referring to the fact that President Chon Tu-hwan rose to power through a military coup in 1980.

Kim Tae-chung, another top opposition leader, was placed under house arrest in Seoui early Saturday to prevent him form attending the rally. It was the 33rd time the 61-year-old opposition politician had been put under house arrest since he returned home in February last year. Kim Tae-chung, in a taped message played at the rally, also said the direct presidential election system, instead of the current indirect electoral college system, is the surest way to being about democracy. He charged the ruling Democratic Justice party (DJP) with trying to introduce a cabinet system to prolong its hold on power because the DJP stands a slim chance of winning a direct presidential election.

The KJP has held rallies in three provincial cities since Thursday to promote the merits of a cabinet government system.

SITTHI RESPONDS TO PHOUN SIPASENT MESSAGE

BK281529 Bangkok NAEO NA in Thai 28 Aug 86 pp 1, 16

The Thai foreign minister stressed to Laos Thailand's policy of "being determined to work for a better and close relationship with Laos."

The Thai foreign minister says in his message that he is "happy to be able to work to develop and strengthen the friendship between the two countries in the interests of the people of both. I really look forward to cooperation with your excellency,"

A Thai official told NAEO NA on 27 August that the Thai Foreign minister's letter is in response to Laos' improved attitude shown during the formation of a new government in Thailand and especially in the 5 August statement of Lao Premier Kaysone Phomvihan. The Lao leader's statement, following the 4-5 August cabinet session, indicated that Laos is ready for talks with Thailand either at the government or local-level" to pave the way to strengthen mutual trust and understanding between Thailand and Laos." Thai officials consider Laos' approach a change from its stance of the past 2 years.

Late last week, the Thai foreign minister sent a message to Interior Minister General Prachuap Suntharangkun seeking the latter's cooperation in arranging local-level talks between the governors of Thailand's border provinces and the Lao side. On this, the interior minister told NAEO NA at parliament on Wednesday that he had already given the provincial governors instructions concerning the message from the Foreign Ministry.

According to Thai officials, the governors of the border provinces near Laos are empowered by the instruction to contact their Lao counterparts directly to resolve problems, renew cultural exchanges, and promote trade relations between people at the border.

He said Moscow supported prospects for a normalisation of relations between China and Vietnam which, if realised, would ease tension in the region.

MOVE AGAINST WIRA ALSO SEEN AIMED AT PREM

BK301115 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 28 Aug 86

[Article: "Wira's Case -- A Point for Political Parties To Ponder"]

[Text] Political battles among politicians and political parties in Thailand usually mean dirty tactics, no rules, and no regard for the long term consequences. There are no rules in the conduct of political fights...the only important thing is to win.

In a democratic system, political struggle must be waged within generally accepted limits and rules, but in Thailand this philosophy has been rejected through the repeated use of dirty tricks; and time and time again this has led to coups d'etat or, in recent years, to violence among mass groups. All of this is the result of the selfish nature of certain politicians and political groups.

The issue involving Deputy Interior Minister Wira Musikaphong, who has been accused of having made remarks insulting to the monarchy, is a case in point. The side with ill intentions toward Wira has picked on the case to try to destroy him. The people who taped Wira's campaign speeches in Buriram did so to gather ammunition to hinder him in the elections, and they filed charges with the police just so that legal action could be taken if warranted. But the matter did not stop there. A political party, which was a member of the previous coalition but which has been left out of the current government, has used its ultrarightist background and the mass agitation skills which have brought it a number of political successes to start a campaign. This party has printed mass agitation pamphlets and distributed them among village scouts in Bangkok. It has also discreetly played the tape to some army generals in order to spread the anti-Wira campaign within the Army.

The result of all this is that the playing up of Wira's campaign remarks has been exploited on a continuing basis by certain political parties to destroy Wira politically. A group of senators have also submitted a motion to pressure the government to do something against Wira.

The Wira tape has become a weapon which on the surface appears to be targeted at Wira, but closer examination reveals that the target is General Prem. The argument is that because Gen Prem is absolutely loyal to the monarchy, he should not have included Wira, who stands accused of insulting the monarchy, in the cabinet. And if Gen Prem protects Wira, he will open the door for attacks from his adversaries. For this reason, Wira seems to be the small political bait to catch the real target, Gen Prem.

The anti-Prem power brokers and political groups are well aware of Gen Prem's strong points and hope to use the Wira tape to weaken them, but waging a political fight using accusations involving the institution beloved by the people will always run the risk of confusion and violence, and the democratic system which politicians profess to cherish could well be destroyed as a result.

It is this that the political parties must consider carefully. Therefore, should the issue of the Wira tape be left to the law to consider, or should it be used to instigate mob rule as happened on 6 October 1976?

PREM DEFENDS HANDLING OF WIRA CASE TO OPPOSITION

BK280254 Bangkok THE NATION in English 28 Aug 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] An apparently angry Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon yesterday rejected charges, made during a secret parliamentary session, that he was protecting a Cabinet member accused by certain quarters of having made a lese majeste statement.

MPs quoted General Prem as telling Prachakon Thai leader Samak Sunthorawet during the closed-door session. "I value my life less than I value the monarchy. I am willing to die for the monarch anytime."

Gen Prem reportedly told Samak: "I have never been so depressed in the life over the statement against me on this matter." [as published]

Government MPs late yesterday morning called for the closed session after opposition MPs attacked the way General Prem was handling the alleged slur by Deputy Interior Minister Wira Musikaphong on the monarchy -- despite Samak's vehement protest against the parliamentary session, chaired by Parliament President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin, being conducted in camera.

Informed sources said that the controversy would not end with General Prem's response yesterday and Wira's apology to the Monarch on Monday. There is widespread speculation Wira might have to resign to defuse the growing political uproar.

As opposition leaders yesterday repeated their threats to censure the government, Muanchon Party leader Chaloem Yubamrung said he would organize rallies at Sanam Luang and in the provinces if there is no action on the lese majeste accusations against Wira.

He said he was not concerned about any actions that the authorities might take, although he mentioned the possibility that the police might be reluctant to launch proceedings because of Wira's position as deputy interior minister.

Chaloem also said he would not recommend whether Wira should resign -- there are many other actions that can be taken, he said. But he said it would be wrong for Wira and the government to try to sit out the controversy without doing anything.

He said he had taped the closed session of Parliament yesterday, and would reveal what had taken place if rallies are organized at Sanam Luang.

MPs emerging from the meeting said Wira had argued that he was always loyal to the monarchy. Democrat MP Trairong Suwannakhiri said Wira had pointed out that his accuser -- Prachakon Thai leader Samak Sunthorawet -- had made no comment until he had switched from being a member of the government to a member of the opposition. Wira said this showed that Samak was using the disloyalty claim for political purposes, according to Trairong.

Chaloem described Wira's arguments as weak. If Wira had said what he said only once, then it could be excused as a slip, Chaloem said. But Wira had made the statement twice which invalidate his claim that it was unintentional, Chaloem said.

Opposition leaders were united in their condemnation of the order to go into secret session. Samak said the argument that the debate would refer to the monarchy was an invalid argument because his intention was to criticize the prime minister and not the monarchy.

Chaloem said Banyat Banthatthan's claim to justify his proposal for the secret session, that he was acting according to a Cabinet decision, could not be true because ministers would not have had an opportunity yesterday to reach such an agreement.

UDP [United Democratic Party] leader Buntheng Thongsawat said this was the first time that the government's policy statement had been debated in camera. He said it was disastrous, and that the public would suspect that there were improper dealings going on. He said he was unhappy, but could not reveal what went on in the closed session.

Earlier, Progressive leader Uthai Phimchaichon repeated the opposition's determination to submit a no-confidence motion against the government if no satisfactory action is taken within seven days from Tuesday. The opposition proposes three steps: to submit a parliamentary question (which was not allowed on the agenda today), taking the issue to the House Committee on Administration, and proposing a no-confidence debate.

Uthai also said the opposition bloc would not allow Wira to be taken for trial during the parliamentary session, a statement which Chaloem later echoed.

The Muanchon leader said it would be counter to long-standing tradition for Parliament to permit its members to stand trial in connection with criminal charges while Parliament is in session.

Emerging from the session, Wira told reporters he was relieved to have made clarifications in Parliament.

He said that during the House session today, he will ask for a permission to stand trial in the court on the lese majeste charges.

Reponding to the opposition's call for Wira's resignation, Democrat spokeswoman Suphattra Matsadit said that if Wira quit the Cabinet post, the government would be bowing to pressure from the opposition.

"I don't think he will resign in such a circumstance for his resignation can be taken as a government defeat and an opposition's victory," she told reporters. Moreover, she said, the court has not ruled whether Wira was guilty or not.

Suphattra accused the opposition of attempting to prolong the prosecution against Wira during the parliamentary session.

"The opposition bloc is trying to drag on the case in order to have a chance to continue attacking Wira," the Democrat spokeswoman said.

She was referring to the opposition's plan to vote against a proposal to allow Wira to stand trial in connection with the lese majeste charge during today's weekly House meeting.

The government MPs, she said, are expected to vote in favour of the proposal because "they wished to see the settlement of the controversy in court as soon as possible."

The permission will be made in response to a recent request by the Interior Ministry to have Wira -- concurrently the Democrat secretary general -- tried for his alleged lese majeste remarks during campaign rallies in Buriram on July 13.

Under the Constitution, parliamentarians cannot be tried, summoned or investigated while Parliament is in session without prior consent from the House Speaker or Senate Speaker.

Suphattra, an MP representing Nakhon Si Thammarat, said the four coalition partners commanding 231 votes in the 347-seat House of Representatives would be able to push for the proposal without much difficulty despite the opposition's attempt to stall the case.

Piyanat Watcharaphon, secretary general of the opposition Ruam Thai Party, said all the opposition parties including the UDP leader Buntheng have agreed to vote down the proposal to allow Wira to be prosecuted.

It would run against the long-preserved parliamentary tradition to let its member be tried on criminal charges during the House session, he said. The 115 opposition MPs are expected to vote unanimously against the issue, said the Sisaket MP.

Suphattra dismissed as groundless reports that a number of Democrats have called for the resignation from the Cabinet of Wira for the sake of the government's stability. "The case has yet to be finalized by the court. Therefore, one cannot claim that he was found guilty of the charge," she said, adding that Wira's resignation would also be a victory for the opposition.

HOUSE VOTES TO ALLOW WIRA TO STAND TRIAL

[Excerpt] The House of Representatives voted 171-0 yesterday to let Deputy Interior Minister Wira Musikaphong stand trial on a lese majeste charge.

The vote, in which the opposition abstained, was called without any debate. Earlier, MPs voted 158-86 that National Democracy Party MP Gen Kriangsak Chamanan should continue to face the September 9 coup bid trial.

The vote ended the parliamentary tradition under which MPs are immune from criminal prosecution while the House is in session. However, hearings must not be scheduled on the same day as the House sessions, as requested by Gen Kriangsak.

Mr Wira and Gen Kriangsak asked the House to waive their immunity from criminal investigation of legal proceedings accorded to MPs under the Constitution.

The House also voted 210-1 to ask the criminal court to release and cease proceedings against Phuket MP Rewut Chindaphon while the House is in session in line with Constitutional Article 123. The lone dissenter came from the Prachakon Thai ranks.

The New Force Party MP, who was charged with involvement in the June 23 tantalum plant riot, was granted bail but has to report to police every 12 days.

Mr Rewut submitted a request to House Speaker Chuan Likphai to have proceedings against him suspended during the session and the matter was put directly to the vote.

During the debate on Gen Kriangsak's case, several whips and senior coalition figures went into a huddle, seeking a vote in line with the MPs' request.

Later, government MPs said the coalition coordination committee had earlier agreed to vote to maintain Gen Kriangsak's immunity but allow Mr Wira to go on trial because the nature of the cases differed.

When Gen Kriangsak requested leave to attend the trial while debate on the other issue was in full swing, the government whips became confused and quickly changed their agreement, and let the coup suspect attend the trial.

The Justice Ministry asked for House permission to continue the trial.

Gen Kriangsak said his continued immunity would delay the case and cause further hardship to the 35 junior officers and civilians still being detained.

The former premier said the suspects only obeyed orders during the coup attempt.

Chart Thai MP Col Prachan Sawangchit backed Gen Kriangsak's request, saying he had been involved in the coup attempt in that he tried to stall it. Describing Gen Kriangsak's request as a sacrifice and a show of courage, the former Young Turk asked the House to acquiesce on the request.

Progressive party MP Phaithun Mokkamakun said that at stake was Constitutional Article 122, which accorded MPs immunity because it was designed to prevent malicious attempts against opposition members for political advantage.

Rat Buri MP Pol Lt Chaowarin Latthasaksiri said Gen Kriangsak's request was well-intended and would help the other coup suspects. The trail would have to be postponed in every future session if Gen Kriangsak's request was turned down, said the Chart Thai MP. [passage omitted]

Wira Ready for Showdown

[Text] Deputy Interior Minister Wira Musikaphong yesterday morning huddled with House Speaker Chuan Likphai. Afterwards, he hinted that he is ready to face a no-confidence onslaught in the House rather than quit the Cabinet post to defuse political pressure.

Details of the closed-door meeting between the two senior Democrat members at the Parliament were not disclosed.

Informed sources had earlier said that Chuan would ask Wira to resign for "his own political future, the party reputation and the stability of the government."

Chuan could not be reached for comments yesterday.

Meanwhile, pressure continued to grow on Wira when Deputy House Speaker Mai Sirinawakun of the Social Action Party (SAP) told reporters that Wira should step down to fend off the looming no-confidence move planned by opposition parties.

He said he believed that the votes by the government MPs would be split on a no-confidence motion, particularly if a secret ballot was called. Mai's statements echoed the views earlier aired by his SAP colleagues, including Surat Thani MP Pinya Chuaiplot, who said he would propose a free vote on the matter in Monday's meeting of the Government-Parliament Coordinating Committee.

Wira, now a lese majeste suspect, yesterday challenged the opposition to accelerate its censure plan against him.

"I want the opposition bloc to launch a no-confidence debate as soon as possible as now I'm prepared to face it," Wira said.

The Phattalung MP said he favoured the government MPs to adopt a free vote in the no-confidence debate expected to be initiated by the opposition camp. "I'm not in a position to force any pro-government MPs to vote in my favour," he said.

Wira's remarks came amidst a growing trend indicating that a number of government lawmakers -- possibly about 45 -- would vote against him if the no-confidence is raised. The opposition currently commands 115 votes in the 347-seat House of Representatives, but the Constitution requires at least 174 no-confidence votes to sack a minister of the government.

He said he thought Premier Prem Tinsulanon as head of government might have been put in a dilemma over the issue. "Therefore, I'll soon seek a meeting with him to inform him that I'll be responsible for the issue."

Asked to comment on House Speaker Chuan Likphai's call for him to step down, Wira said: "Whether I'll resign or not is my own business."

Groups Pressure Democrats

BK300431 Bangkok THE NATION in English 30 Aug 86 p 2

[Text] Several organized groups yesterday pressed the Democrat Party to remove Deputy Interior Minister Wira Musikaphong as punishment for alleged lese majeste remarks.

The pressure groups also demanded that the Democrats pull out of the coalition government to demonstrate their political spirit.

About 20 representatives of the militant "Red Gaurs" movement was the first group to tender a letter to the Democrat Party yesterday morning calling for the party to take action against Wira (Democrat-Phatthalung).

Chaloemchai Matchaklam, a leading right-wing Red Gaurs member, warned the party of worsening situation unless it asked Wira to step down as a minister. He said the movement, founded by Senator Maj Gen Sutsai Hatsadin, would consider a further step if the party failed to meet its demand within 7 days.

Phathai Wisetchanit, who claimed himself as president of the so-called Mass Organization of Thailand, also tendered a separate letter to the party seeking action against Wira.

Other pressure groups present at the Democrat headquarters on Setsiri Road yesterday included the Marine Transportation Workers' Union and the People Force for Democracy Group. Wichian Siwichian the MTWU president, said the Democrat Party should consider withdrawing from the coalition because it was responsible for the nomination of Wira to the Cabinet.

Most Democrats Support Wira

[Text] Most Democrat MPs still support Deputy Interior Minister Wira Musikaphong and want him to stay on to prove himself in court against charges that he insulted the Monarchy.

Five-time Songkhla MP Sawai Phatno urged Mr Wira not to bow to political pressure, saying that it was a political ploy by the opposition parties to destroy the deputy minister and the Democrat Party.

He expressed optimism that the situation would improve once the lese majeste case was filed in court.

Mr Sawai added that he doubted whether Mr Wira would abuse his authority as Deputy Interior Minister to influence the case. "This is a misunderstanding. His (alleged lese majeste) remarks were tape recorded. It is fact which cannot be distorted," he noted.

Party executive committee member, Yasothon MP Phiraphan Phalusu, said that he felt the case was not a difficult one and there is a possibility that Mr Wira would be able to defend himself.

He accused the Opposition of dramatising the incident in order to tarnish the party's reputation.

"Resigning now will not solve the problem, but may appease some political factions or parties which may stop their political activities," he said, adding that resignation would mean a defeat for Mr Wira.

Another Democrat MP, Rayong's Soemsak Karun, noted that the atonement by Mr Wira at the Parliament earlier last week was an adequate demostration of apology.

"Quitting now will only serve the wish of the Opposition," he said, but added that if Mr Wira was found guilty he would have to resign immediately.

He asked the public to give Mr Wira a chance to clear himself in court.

Songkhla MP Naruchat Bunsuwan said that most party members sympathised with Mr Wira "because we know what is what."

"We won't allow him to resign. We will object...until it is proven that he is guilty," said the MP.

He revealed that Mr Wira had never sought help from the party. "The party will not consider the issue; it depends on Mr Wira alone," he said.

"There is no reason to resign," said Nakhon Si Thammarat MP Shamphan Paenphat. "I believe that, in the end, fact and virtue will prove itself," he added.

WIRA ANNOUNCES RESIGNATION DECISION

BK010723 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 1 Sep 86

[Text] Wira Musikaphong, deputy interior minister, has announced his resignation. He gave the reasons for his resignation at Government House at 0930 this morning.

[Begin Wira recording] The first reason for my resignation is that I want to go to court not holding a cabinet post. In fact, the case is still in the hands of the police, and probably will be sent to the prosecutors and the court later. No matter what the police, prosecutors, or the court say, I am willing to accept the ruling as an ordinary MP or an ordinary person. I have felt all along that if the police take legal action against me, or even if it reaches the prosecutors while I am still deptuy interior minister, no matter how sincere I am or what steps I take not to interfere in the administration of legal procedures, it would not be enough to allow the institutions of the police and prosecutors to avoid criticism when the case reaches the prosecutors which is not good for them. When the case reaches the court, the court will also be criticized. So, my resignation is the best way to avoid the problem and to spare our judicial institutions from criticism.

Concerning politics the opposition MP's are trying to put pressure on me to resign. I have already said that I respect the opinion of the opposition, but I will carry out the duties of government since I am on the side of the government. Instead of being a personal affair affecting only me, the issue seems to have spread unnecessarily and without reason to others. We cannot blame anyone for their actions -- a no-confidence debate or whatever is the parliamentary way. The reason I have decided to resign is that I want to end the issue.

The government just announced its policy to the Parliament and has begun to work to solve the problems of the people. You know that the prime minister is determined to solve the problems of poverty, foreign debt, and unemployment. The poverty and unemployment issues have a direct effect on the people. Although not seen clearly, the foreign debt problem also has an impact on the people. The government still has no real chance to tackle problems since it has to worry about the Parliament. Instead of following the performance of the government in solving the poverty, debt, and unemployment problems, the opposition MP's worry about me. I think that we should use the time of the Parliament or the House to work for the people instead of worrying about me. So, after I resign the issue will probably end. [end recording]

King Approves List

[Text] First Army Commander Lt. Gen Phichit Kunlawanit and Special Warfare Commander Lt-Gen Sunthon Khongsomphong have been promoted to assistant army commanders-in-chief in the annual military reshuffle.

The reshuffle of the three armed forces, which was not publicly announced but partially released yesterday, has been approved by His Majesty the King. Promotion orders will be sent, like last year, individually to the 318 officers involved this time.

Significant in this year's reshuffle is the rise to the top of the Army by classmates of Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut (Chunlachomklao Royal Military Academy Class 1) and officers of Class 5.

Deputy Chief-of-Staff Lt-Gen Wanchai Ruangtrakun becomes Army Chief-of-Staff, a position he held as caretaker when Gen Chawalit was promoted this year.

Second Army Commander Lt-Gen Phisit Hemabut is now Deputy Army Chief, taking over from Gen Akkhaphon Somrup, who held the post when Gen Chuthai Saengthawip was promoted to Army Inspector-General after Prime Minsiter Prem Tinsulanon's decision not to extend the term of former army chief and supreme commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek.

The promotion of these four officers fills the Army's five top posts which, including that of Gen Chawalit, are known as the "Five Tigers". Military analysts say the promotion of Lt-Gen Phichit, Lt-Gen Sunthon and Lt-Gen Wanchai makes them most likely successors to Gen Chawalit, who has said he would resign next year when he reaches the age of 55.

Although Lt-Gen Phisit (Army Pre-Cadet School Class 6) is also eligible to be promoted to the top army post, he too is due to resign next year.

Lt-Gen "Big George" Sunthon is due to retire in 1991 while Lt-Gen "Big Sua" Pichit and Lt-Gen Wanchai are due to retire in 1992.

Another classmate of Gen Chawalit promoted this year is Assistant Chief-of-Staff Lt-Gen Charuai Wongsayan, who is made Deputy Chief-of-Staff, replacing his elder brother Lt-Gen Charat Wongsayan (Army Pre-Cadet School Class 7).

Lt-Gen Charat has been promoted to deputy permanent [under] secretary of the Defence Ministry.

Another Class 1 member promoted is Maj-Gen Panya Singhasakda of the Institute of Army Academies, who is now Assistant Chief-of-Staff for Operations.

Maj-Gen Arun Pariwattham, commander of the Second Infantry Reserves, has been made Assistant Chief-of-Staff for Civilian Affairs.

The new Assistant Chief-of-Staff for Personnel is Maj-Gen Sanan Sawetserani, a classmate of Lt-Gen Phichit, who was formerly the deputy commander of the Special Warfare Command.

Although the most senior of the Chunlachomklao Class 5 officers to be promoted is Lt-Gen Suchinda Khraprayun, who went from Assistant Chief-of-Staff (Operations) to Deputy Chief-of-Staff, the officer who made the biggest leap is Maj-Gen Wimon Wongwanit.

Maj-Gen Wimon who is the First Army's 1st Infantry Division commander, was promoted yesterday to command the Special Warfare Centre without having to hold a deputy commanding post.

Class 5 member and First Army Second Infantry Division Commander Maj-Gen San Siphen becomes the First Army's 1st Division Commander.

Deputy First Army Commander Maj-Gen Watthanachai Wutthisiri (Class 4) is now commander while Deputy Third Army Commander Maj-Gen Chaichana Tharichat, also a classmate of Gen Chawalit, has been promoted to commander.

Deputy Fourth Army Commander Maj-Gen Wisit Atkhumwong, a classmate of Gen Phichit, has been promoted to commander.

Three Class 8 officers were also promoted in the reshuffle to command combat units joining two other classmates, 1st Special Warfare Division Commander Maj-Gen Watthana Sanphanit and the Fourth Army's 5th Infantry Division Commander Maj-Gen Kitti Rattanachai.

The three officers are Col Banthao Yaiket, who has been promoted from deputy commander to commander of the Second Army's 6th Infantry Division, Col Oraphan Watthanawibun, promoted from deputy commander to commander of the 2nd Special Warfare Division, and Col Manat Aramsi, promoted from deputy commander to commander of the Prachin Buri-based 2nd Infantry Division.

Another notable promotion is Gen Prem's aide, Maj-Gen Mongkon Amphonphisit, who was made commander of the First Army's 9th Infantry Division based in Kanchanaburi Province.

NONALIGNED MINISTERS LEAVE CAMBODIAN SEAT VACANT

BK310426 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 30 Aug 86

[Text] The foreign ministers of the countries of the Nonaligned Movement met at the International Conference Center in Harare on 28 and 29 August to make preparations for a summit conference of heads of states and governments whih is to open on the morning of 1 September 1986. Mr Shiv Shanker, minister of external affairs of the Republic of India -- the incumbent chairman country of the Nonaligned Movement -- opened the conference with a speech pointing out the work to be done. He then passed on the authority to direct the conference to Mr Mangwenda, foreign minister of the Republic of Zimbabwe -- the incoming chairman of the Nonaligned Movement.

The conference heard a report on the results of a [nonaligned] ambassadorial conference, discussed and passed a motion on the composition of the presidium of the summit conference, on the activities of the political and economic committees, and on the grand celebration of the Nonaligned Movement's 25th anniversary, 1 September 1986, in Harare.

At its 29 August session, the conference approved a general report -- to be presented at the Eighth Nonaligned Summit -- in which there are many important questions for consideration by the summit. Also at this session, the conference chairman brought up for a vote a decision on the rightful Cambodian representation in the Nonaligned Movement.

On this question, chief SRV delegate Minister Vo Dong Giang said:

1. The PRK Government -- the current controller of all Cambodian territory and the sole, genuine, and legal representative of the Cambodian people -- has the right to demand its rightful position in the Nonaligned Movement.

2. However, to prevent the conference from having differences which could create a split within the movement and to let the conference concentrate on those vital and urgent issues which may help to ensure the success of the conference of the Indochinese countries, the 13th Indochinese Foreign Minister's Conference held recently in Hanoi declared total respect for the decisions of the Sixth and Seventh Summit Conferences to leave the Cambodian seat vacant. The SRV advocates maintaining this decision at the coming Eighth Summit Conference.

3. The Vietnamese delegation totally favors the draft decision recently introduced by the conference chairman to resolutely resist any intention of reposing the question of rightful Cambodian representation at the coming summit conference so as to create disputes aimed at reversing those correct decisions of the Sixth and Seventh Nonaligned Summit Conferences and at renewing confrontation between the two groupings in Southeast Asia. This would only result in a split at the Eighth Summit Conference and Undermine the results of the summit conference.

The conference unanimously agreed with the conference chairman's final decision to leave the Cambodian seat vacant until the Ninth Nonaligned Summit Conference and not to bring this question up for consideration at the Eighth Nonaligned Summit Conference.

NEW ZEALAND

LANGE REJECTS MILITARY COOPERATION WITH USSR

HK020255 Wellington THE EVENING POST in English 27 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] Prime Minister David Lange today rejected overtures by the Soviet Union for military cooperation.

"The best cooperation we can have from the Soviet Union is to have their vessels as far away from New Zealand as ours are from Russia," he said.

"There is certainly no proposal for any form of military cooperation with the Soviet Union," said Mr Lange.

On the trade front, Mr Lange said New Zealand had a business like relationship with the Soviet Union, and any further development of this relationship would take place "in the normal way."

KAPITSA DISCUSSES USSR'S PACIFIC POLICY

HK020257 Wellington THE EVENING POST in English 27 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] When it has more information, the Soviet Union will definitely sign the protocols attached to the South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty, says the visiting Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister.

Dr Mikhail Kapitsa gave this assurance at a press conference in Wellington yesterday.

He also said the Soviet Union would be willing to sign a bilateral "confidence building" agreement with New Zealand under which it would be the Soviets' task to inform this country whenever a Soviet warship was visiting the South Pacific.

Dr Kapitsa, in New Zealand from Saturday until yesterday, told reporters the purpose of his visit was to explain Soviet policy in Asia and the Pacific.

While in New Zealand he met Deputy Foreign Minister Frank O'Flynn, Opposition Overseas Trade spokesman Warren Cooper, and the Secretaries of Foreign Affairs and Trade and Industry, Merwyn Norrish and Harry Clark.

On the question of the protocols to the treaty, he had told Mr O'Flynn that he could consider that he had Soviet agreement for those, Dr Kapitsa said.

"Now when we have more information I can say very definitely that the Soviet Union will sign the appropriate protocols attached to the agreement declaring the South Pacific a nuclear-free zone."

Later, Dr Kapitsa said that the Soviet Union would not be prepared to sign the protocols until an "appropriate number" of countries had ratified the document and it was valid.

It needs to be ratified by four more countries to take effect.

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, the first to visit this country, also issued an assurance that the Soviet Union was not going to interfare in New Zealand's internal affairs or poltics and had no ambitions here.

The purpose of a confidence building agreement between New Zealand and the Soviet Union, he said, would be to ensure that neither country "suspects the other in any evil designs" and to create on atmosphere of trust.

On fishing agreements with South Pacific countries, Dr Kapitsa said the agreement with Kiribati was for one year and had now finished.

He did not know if it would be extended.

PAPUA NEW GUINEA

VAGI CLARIFIES PNG-USSR FISHING NEGOTIATIONS

BK290913 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0800 GMT 29 Aug 86

[Text] The Papua New Guinea foreign minister, Mr Legu Vagi, has made a statement seeking to clarify his country's position on fishing negotiations with the Soviet Union. Mr Vagi said Papua New Guinea was looking at strategies for negotiations with a number of countries on fishing rights to its waters, including the Soviet Union.

He said the chances that a fishing agreement will be made with the Soviet Union were not great and Papua New Guinea considered Japan and South Korea were more likely options.

Earlier, Papua New Guinea was reported to have become the fourth South Pacific nation to begin negotiations with the Soviet Union on fishing rights for Russian trawlers.

A Radio Australia correspondent in Port Moresby, Peter Cotton, said that Fiji as well as Vanuatu have similar negotiations under way with Moscow while Kiribati already has a fishing agreement with the Soviet Union.

AQUINO EXPRESSES 'CONCERN' OVER FIGHTING

[Text] Manila, Aug. 29 KYODO -- President Corazon Aquino has expressed "concern" over continued fighting between government troops and the rebel New People's Army (NPA) and wants an end to the killing "as soon as possible," government ceasefire negotiator, Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra said Friday. "She (Aquino) has given instructions to us to bring a message to the negotiators of the rebels when we meet again, and we are seeking an early meeting with them to transmit the wishes of the President," Mitra said.

The government peace negotiator said that what concerned the president "very much" was last Wednesday's ambush by the NPA in which 15 soldiers and five rebels were killed in Davao del Norte province in southern Philippines where a local ceasefire agreement between the insurgents and civilian officials was signed two weeks ago. Mitra spoke with reporters after an hour-long meeting at the presidential palace with Aquino, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, Armed Forces Chief Gen. Fidel Ramos and Commission on Audit Chairman Teofisto Guingona, another member of the government negotiating panel. He said that the government negotiating position was discussed at the palace meeting, but declined to disclose what it is.

Preliminary talks on a possible end to the 17 year communist-led insurgency began last August 5 when Mitra met for the first time with former journalists Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel, who represent the leftwing coalition National Democratic Front (NDF) at the talks. Gingona, who will meet with the NDF Friday night, said that Aquino "feels that there should be some meeting ground for these peace talks." He did not elaborate.

Mitra said the NDF has asked for safe conduct passes for two lawyers, Arno Sanidad and Romeo Capulong, who will assist the NDF during the talks. Sanidad and Capulong are known human rights lawyers. Mitra said he did not know why the NDF has appointed lawyers. "We feel that the question of peace or war is not necessarily a lawyer's business, although both he (Guingona) and I are lawyers," he said.

In an interview with KYODO news service Thursday, Ocampo explained that lawyers are needed on both sides to arrive at a common interpretation of whatever agreement is arrived at by the two parties. He said that a temporary ceasefire may be agreed upon even while the formal peace talks are going on. He said that the NDF panels wants to approach the talks in a comprehensive manner in order to achieve a "durable peace" and reach a "political settlement" with the Aquino government covering solutions to "fundamental questions and the causes of the armed conflict." Mitra said that the proposal that a ceasefire should be part of a consideration of broader issues will be discussed when the government and the NDF panel meet again.

The NDF groups the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm, the NPA, with other outlawed leftist peasant, worker, youth, religious and professional organizations. The military last Wednesday suffered one of its biggest setbacks in a single gunbattle with NPA guerrillas since Aquino took power last February.

Ocampo said the NPA operated on 59 guerrilla fronts in 62 out of the country's 73 provinces as of the end of last year, but declined to say the exact number of NPA guerrillas. Recent military estimates put the figure at 16,500, while U.S. defense officials say there are 22,500.

In a directive to Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra and Audit Commission Chairman Teofisto Guingona, the president said the loss of life and the continued fighting is a national concern, not only of the government but also of the rebels.

AQUINO PRAISES HEROISM OF SOLDIERS AT CEREMONY

The president said that it was only fitting for the nation to honor the unknown soldiers who died for the country. She also cited the efforts of the millions of heroes of the February Revolution that led to the restoration of democracy in the country.

ENRILE ON CPP, NPA DISUNITY; VER SEEN IN SABAH

HK291113 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 1000 GMT 29 Aug 86

[Text] Misunderstanding and disunity have emerged within the Communist Party of the Philippines and its armed forces, the NPA. This was declared by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile at a press conference following his speech in [words indistinct]. He also said that the government should be cautious and keep an eye on the dissident movement at the current peace negotiations. [Enrile recording indistinct]

Meanwhile, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile reported that former Armed Forces Chief of Staff Fabian Ver was seen in Sabah last 16 August. Enrile made the revelation during an open forum following his speech before the Federation of [words indistinct]. ENRILE CALLS FOR CAUTION IN DEALING WITH REBELS

HK300153 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 29 Aug 86

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile calls for caution in dealing with the communist rebels.

He told newsmen yesterday that the spate of bloody ambushes by rebels in various parts of the country showed that the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] has lost control over its five territorial commissions nationwide. Speaking before Bicol forum in Makati, Enrile said the CPP Central Committee was supposed to call the shots in party decisions in light of current efforts to forge a cease-fire agreement with the government.

[Begin Enrile recording in progress] ..that they are interested in peace, and yet they are using violence and taking the opportunity to strengthen themselves. And this appears to me that we should be very careful and cautious in approaching our dealings with them because we have not yet really assessed the true intentions of these people and it is better to exercise prudence in things like these than a certain amount of recklessness. [end recording]

Meanwhile government peace negotiator Ramon Mitra said yesterday he would meet with the National Democratic Front [NDF] leader for the third time this weekend after consulting President Aquino on the cease-fire talks. Mitra said he would meet with Defense Minister Enrile and Armed Forces Chief General Fidel Ramos to have an overall review of the progress of the negotiations with the NDF leaders. Mitra said he had requested General Ramos to issue a safe conduct pass to two lawyers of the NDF upon request of their leaders, Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel. Mitra said he expected General Ramos to issue the safe conduct pass during their meeting. The agriculture minister did not identify the two lawyers.

On the communist side, negotiator Satur Ocampo said a temporary cease-fire can be declared while peace talks ending the 17-year-old communist-led insurgency are going on. Ocampo said the rebels want to achieve a durable peace through a comprehensive political settlement with the government of President Aquino covering solutions to fundamental political questions which are the causes of the armed conflict. He said that a temporary settlement is a meas of seeking a way out of the present level of military conflict and laying the ground for a possible end to the fighting.

Says AFP Can 'Finish' Insurgency

[Text] Manila, Aug 29 KYODO -- Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said Friday that the armed forces can "finish" the communist-led insurgency in the Philippines in "two or three years time" if given a "free hand" by President Corazon Aquino. "I can assure you that with their present capability, the military organization is in a position to contain the problem to a level that would be acceptable to us...," Enrile said when asked during a forum in Manila's financial district of Makati.

A member of the rebel panel representing the leftist National Democratic Front (NDF) had earlier told KYODO news service that the New People's Army (NPA) can "withstand an all-out attack" should Aquino decide to order an offensive against the guerrillas. Established in March 1969, the NPA claims to have 30,000 armed fighters deployed as 58 guerrilla fronts distributed through most of the country's provinces. The NDF alliance, which includes the Communist Party and the NPA, says it has the support of 6 million Filipinos.

Rebel leader Satur Ocampo said "it would be ruinous for the aquino government to undertake an all-out military operation because (it) would entail a lot of expenditures, particularly now that they are introducing more expensive armaments...."

"Unless the Aquino government is willing to pour tremendous economic resources into the military campaign and to the prejudice of its economic recovery program, then I think the ultimate loser will be the government and not the NPA."

Enrile explained that a "free hand" meant getting orders from the "commander-in-chief" telling the 250,000-strong armed forces to "keep the pressure on the military elements of the movement in order to ... disrrupt their buildup, scatter them and take them all." The military has said that it has adopted an "active defense posture" because of ongoing "peace talks" between representatives of the government and the leftist National Democratic Front (NDF) aimed at ending the 17-year conflict.

Ocampo said that the NPA had adopted the same posture claimed by the military but pointed out that "in reality they (the AFP) are in an offensive position." "They have not reduced their operations.... in fact, the AFP has increased the number of combat battalions deployed against the NPA. As of July, our figures show that of the 81 combat battalions of the AFP, 67 were deployed in counter-insurgency operations."

Ocampo also criticized what he said was the Aquino policy to leave the determination of military policy in the hands of the military leadership. "We are pointing out that it's wrong. Military policy must be enunciated by the political leadership, by the chief executive as commander in chief of the armed forces," he stressed. "Many people say that Mrs. Aquino is not knowledgeable on military matters, so she leaves it to Enrile and Ramos. The danger is that if she allows it that way and with the very distinct, diverse views being expressed by Enrile, we have a divided position in the government."

Criticizes NDF Demands

HK020213 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 1 Sep 86

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday [1 September] accused the National Democratic Front [NDF] of baiting the Aquino government into an agreement tantamount to giving itself international recognition [as heard]. The communists want to attain a belligerent status similar to that of the Palestinian Liberation Organization. Enrile said this during a dialogue with officers and men of the Philippine Air Force at Villamor Airbase in Pasay City. He added that aside from the demand, the NDF, the political arm of the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP], is also insistent that the communist flag fly side by side with the Philippine flag during the dialogue between the government and the CPP. He added that these demands were submitted by the NDF to Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra, a member of the government peace panel negotiating with the rebels.

Warns Against Repeating Mistakes

HK260817 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 24 Aug 86 p 6

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile cautioned President Aquino Friday against committing the same errors made by deposed President Ferdinand Marcos that led to his downfall.

"I'm not saying that we are always correct in our assessments but I can tell with all candor that over my time as Minister of Defense, even during the time of the former regime, we have given them assessments that turned out to be correct but they ignored it," Enrile said. In an interview, Enrile also denied published reports (not in, The INQUIRER) quoting him as predicting the downfall of the Aquino government.

"What I said was merely an advice that this government might experience the same predicament if they do not follow our advice on the insurgency," Enrile said.

Enrile also said the government must always be vigilant and cautious in dealing with the rebels for a probable ceasefire.

The New People's Army "is not a private army, it is a full-grown military force," he said, adding that the NPA is now competing with the Aquino government.

"We can no longer ignore the insurgency problem. But we are ready and prepared to give this dialogue (the peace talks) a chance, but with caution," he said.

Reiterating his reservations on the ongoing peace talks, Enrile said:

"Whether the policy adopted by the government will bring the desired result or not will have to be answered in time."

ENRILE ON DANGER FROM 'LEFTIST LABOR FRONTS'

BK270517 Manial PNA in English 0541 GMT 27 Aug 86

[Text] Manila, Aug 27 (OANA/PNA) -- Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile Tuesday assured the country's labor force of the government's vigilance against leftist labor fronts attempting to destablize the country. We are responsible for preserving the entire society for disorder, lawlessness and anarchy, Enrile said, adding that the government will not allow leftist labor fronts to undermine economic stability and national security. Enrile aired this assurance in a speech before the Pambansang Diwa Ng Manggagawang Pilipino, (association of 21 labor organizations nationwide).

For its part, the PDMP, through spokesman Roberto Oca Jr., vowed to help the government fight communism and assured Enrile that the 21 labor groups under the PDMP are prepared to defend freedom and democracy in the land. Minister Enrile expressed concern over the growing number of workingmen who are drifting towards the extreme left but revealed that majority of them are merely being misled by hard-core Communists. Many workers, he said, have unwittingly joined the leftist labor fronts of the underground movement simply because they were led to believe that they would be better off under a political system being foisted upon them. It is high time therefore that education and enlightenment about the real goals of Communism are needed.

However, he said, meaningful socio-economic amelioration programs are still the most reliable instrument at the disposal of the government. Spearheading the enlightenment campign himself, Enrile bared a communist strategy of propaganda and agitation especially within the labor sector by promising potential recruits of better living conditions under communist rule.

They will promise better wages, and even outright ownership of the business companies, Enrile said of one strategy to lure laborers into joining front organizations. But looking at the conditions in other countries which have succumbed to the communist rule would show a great difference between what is promised and what has actually happened. Under a communist state, all enterprise is controlled by the government and that workers are used merely as tools and production similar to machines. There are no labor unions to speak of. You cannot strike nor elevate your grievances for official arbitration. If you attempt to exercise your rights, you are considered an outcast in the society, Enrile said.

LABOR GROUP SUPPORTS ENRILE'S PRESIDENTIAL BID

HK271539 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 27 Aug 86 pp 1, 7

[Text] A newly-surfaced labor group which claims 600,000 members nationwide yesterday rallied behind Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, hailing him as a "true friend of laborers" and the next president of the Philippines.

The Pambansang Diwa ng Managgagawang Pilipino [National Spirit of Pilipino Workers] (PDMP), said to be a break-away group from the Trade Union's Congress of the Philippines, expressed support to Enrile's presidential plans during its convention held at the Sulo Hotel.

PDMP president Tony Diaz, who repeatedly addressed Enrile as "president," said the defense minister is the only remaining Cabinet member who can prevent communists taking over the country.

The national convention of the PDMP, which claims 21 labor federations under its wings, was attended by some 120 delegates.

During a forum following his speech, Enrile, who earlier admitted he will run in the 1992 elections "if it is the will of the people," said he will resign from the Cabinet if President Aquino would take him away from the defense post.

"Kung ako'y ililipat nila, aalis na lang ako sa gobyerno sapagkat ayaw ko nang lumipat sa ibang pusisyon,... kabisado ko na ang pasikot-sikot dito (defense ministry)" [If they move me, then I will leave the government because I do not want to move to other positions. I know the ins and outs of the ministry too well now"] Enrile said.

In his speech before the PDMP, Enrile said the defense and military establishments will not allow communistic dissidents who have infiltrated the labor sector to "foment hatred and violence against duly constituted authority without using our workingmen as levers in the process."

"We in the defense ministry are highly indignant over the manner by which our detractors (the communists) have systematically fooled and terrorized our workers, whom they proclaim as vanguards of their so-called revolution when in truth, they use workers as cannon fodder for their so-called revolution," Enrile said.

Meanwhile, the Reform the AFP Movement [RAM], an organization of Philippine Military Academy graduates in the military which played a crucial role in protecting Enrile during the February revolt, will meet at Camp Aguinaldo today to decide whether the organization will be disbanded.

Camp Aguinaldo sources said the group wants to resolve internal problems which have plagued the organization following the success of the revolt which toppled the Marcos regime and swept Mrs Aquino into power.

The possible disbandment of RAM sources said, could have been triggered by the mushrooming of other organizations patterned after it. This threatens the integrity of the military chain of command, sources said.

"If Armed Forces Chief Gen. Fidel Ramos does not watch out, he will soon become a mere coordinator of the various groups in the military instead of a chief of staff," a military analyst said.

REBELLION CHARGES AGAINST TOLENTINO DROPPED

[Text] The government today dropped rebellion charges against former Senator Arturo Tolentino and 40 others who joined him in staging an aborted coup d'etat at the Manila Hotel on 6 July. Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales announced that Tolentino and his followers have sent affidavits pronouncing their adherence to the Freedom Constitution of the Aquino government. Gonzales said the other Marcos loyalists who signed the affidavits are former Batasan speaker Nicanor Yniquez, former MP Rafael Recto, former minister Manuel Alba, former immigration official Edmundo Reyes, and lawyer Oliver Lozano.

RALLY HELD IN PAMPANGA TO SUPPORT U.S. BASES

[Text] Some 300 teachers, students, and political activists staged a demonstration at the town plaza in San Fernando, Pampanga the other day to support the maintenance of U.S. military bases in the Philippines. This was the first such rally held in northern Luzon. Among the speakers at the rally were former congressman Manuel Sanchez Jr and mayor designate Ed Bacungan. Sanchez explained that once the American military bases are removed, the Russians will come into the country and install leaders such as Jose Maria Sison and Bernabe Buscayno to head the government.

OFFICIALS TERM AQUINO'S TRIP 'COMPLETE SUCCESS'

HK291123 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in Tagalog 1000 GMT 29 Aug 86

[Text] Natural Resources Minister Ernesteo Maceda, Jr and Trade Minister Jose Concepcion described Corazon Aquino's visit to Indonesia and Singapore as a complete success. Concepcion, who headed the economic panel, said that the overwhelming welcome received from the two foreign governments was unexpected. Both Maceda and Concepcion said that at first, the visit was not expected to score a success because the Philippine president is a female and is still relatively inexperienced. However, the president was warmly received by Indonesia and Singapore, and she also concluded agreements with her counterparts. President Aquino is slated to visit the United States in September.

SOUTHWARD INVASION THREAT CALLED 'SMOKESCREEN'

[NODUNG SINMUN 31 August commentary: "The Threat of Southward Invasion Is False"]

[Text] While babbling about the nonexistent threat of southward invasion, the U.S. imperialists and the puppet South Korean clique are now engaged in more vicious, slanderous, anticommunist propaganda than at any previous time.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring, which has noisily called for a strengthened all-out security posture in preparation for the North's infiltration into or a surprise attack against the South since the beginning of this year, is now kicking up the frenzied cause to turning society into one governed by anticommunist fascism and war rackets, while urging the perfection of combat readiness in preparation for the North's armed infiltration or provocations, which the ring says are expected with the Asian Games approaching.

From the beginning, the so-called threat of an invasion from the North has been a smokescreen laid by the U.S. imperialists to cover up their wicked goal to continue their occupation of South Korea, invade the northern half of the Republic by the use of military forces, and, going one step further, to invade Asia.

It is out of a desire to offer their U.S. masters an excuse for their military occupation and to justify their fascist and splittist maneuvers and confrontational war maneuvers being committed in cahoots with the U.S. masters that the South Korean puppets are parroting the threat of southward invasion.

The chorus of the threat of southward invasion played by the twin bugles of the master and the running dogs is being sung from various scenarios, ranging from the so-called theory of revolution carried out by violence to the theory of an armed southward invasion. All this, however, is indescribably false, as they are characterized by stubbornness and ignominy. Not once has there been a threat of southward invasion, nor does one exist even now. Proceeding from the nature inherent in its state and social system the DPRK Government poses no threat to anyone, nor does it try to invade anyone. No matter how pressing and important the paramount issue of the country's reunification may be, it is our invariable and consistent stand that under no circumstances should it be realized by the use of military force, but that it should be achieved by peaceful means.

Proceeding from such a stand, on more than one occasion in the past we have made it clear that we have no intention of invading the South or forcing our system on South Korea. That we have put forward a reasonable proposal for reunification to put a confederal system into practise on the basis of national unity, with the ideologies and systems in the North and South left intact, in fact amounts to a declaration that we will not invade the South.

Also, on many occasions we have proposed realizing a dialogue between Korea [Choson] and the United States and of replacing the Armistice Agreement with a peace agreement to preserve and consolidate peace in Korea.

Following our initiative proposal for halting military exercises, put forward at the first of the year with a view to easing tension and creating an environment favorable to dialogue, last June we advanced an epochal proposal for talks between military authorities and again a new peace proposal for creating a nuclear-free peace zone on the Korean peninsula.

To whom do such efforts on our part pose a threat?

By flatly refusing our proposal for talks between military authorities aimed at detente [wanhwa] in the military field, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets have themselves admitted that they do not feel threatened by us at all. The treat of invasion on the Korean peninsula comes not from the North, but from the South; it is we who are faced with the threat of an invasion, not the United States of South Korea.

South Korea now has an over 1-million-strong puppet army, along with U.S. troops with a regular army alone of more than 40,000. In addition, it has paramilitary forces [chungunsa muryok] of more than 10 million, including the 3.7-million-strong reserve forces and 5-million-strong defense corps. The military threat to us is also increased by all the U.S. military bases in South Korea as well as those in neighboring areas. U.S. military forces stationed not only in the Asian and Pacific region, ranging from the Japanese mainland to Okinawa, Guam and Hawaii, but also in the continental United States are constantly on mobiliztion readiness to be introduced into the Korean front at any given moment.

It is a secret known to the public that the U.S. imperialists have already completed plans for joint operations between the United States, Japan, South Korea and even a Joint military command system to drag the Japanese Self-Defense Forces to the Korean front in an emergency. The "Team Spirit" joint military exercises, which have been held annually in South Korea, are a preliminary war and nuclear test war for the purpose of completing cooperative operations among these vast aggressive military forces targeted on none other than the northern half of the Republic, and for putting these operations into practice. If military specialists are to assess such a reality in a clear-headed way, they will recognize that a northward invasion, not a southward invasion, is the real threat in our country. The ominous military movements developing in South Korea are testimony to this.

It is no longer a secret that the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets have not only reorganized the U.S. troops and puppet armed forces as a whole into an offensive force, but they have also deployed 80 to 90 percent of their forces in forward areas close to the Military Demarcation Line according to so-called plans for a decisive blitzkrieg war, while strengthening their mobility and nuclear combat capabilities. And it is now no secret that they have organized commando units consisting of 180,000 troops, and have now engaged them in a fierce exercise resembling a real war. This indication that the U.S. imperialists and the puppets are capable of a full-scale attack against us even at this moment, without changing their deployment, is a dangerous development.

Weapons of mass destruction, including approximately 1,000 nuclear weapons and chemical weapons, have now been more densely deployed in South Korea, than anywhere else in the world. This notwithstanding, the U.S. imperialists are now building a satellite tracing station in Taegu as part of the Star Wars plan, as well as a new nuclear armory on Mt Kyeroyong, while pressing forward with a plan to build 36 special nuclear armories in Kunsan. There is no need to further explain what all these are for.

Can any reasonable person believe those who have not only armed their occupation troops with nuclear weapons of various kinds, but who also threaten to use nuclear weapons without hesitation if necessary and who have numerous nuclear weapons deployed in the neighboring areas of the Korean peninsula targeted on the northern half of the Republic, when they babble about a threat of invasion from somewhere else?

While the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets were running amok in war preparations arguing that we have deployed armed forces in forward areas and are waiting for an opportunity to invade the South, our men and the officers of the People's Army were performing brilliant labor feats in the work of remolding nature on a great scale and at the sites of great socialist construction to erecting such monumental creations as the Nampo lockgate and the Taechon power plant. All these stark facts eloquently show what proposterous rubbish and futile imaginings the slogans shouted by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets about the threat of southward invasion are.

Why do the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets noisily babble about the threat of southward invasion in a manner of a thief calling others thieves, knowing undoubtedly that we would not invade the South? As stated in the Japanese magazine, (?KUNJI MINRON), in its 45th edition this year, what threatens South Korea is not a military threat from the North, but a threat from within South Korea -- political instability.

The political situation in South Korea at present, in which the mass advance of the South Korean youths, students, and people of all walks of life has continued and political chaos has become more profound, is not only rocking to the very foundation the U.S. imperialists' colonial ruling system, which has continued for 40 years, but has created a serious crisis for the Asian Games and the Olympics scheduled to be forcibly held in Seoul.

Dogged by this, the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring are now trying to bring the crisis under control by threatening the people under the pretext of a threat of southward invasion and by successfully holding international sports events in Seoul at all costs, keeping the people's mass advance subdued, while at the same time trying to produce a breakthrough in lighting the torch of war against us if they find the situation moving in a direction that they had not expected.

Their babbling about all-out security while aguing that the next 2 to 3 years before the 24th Olympiad are a crucially important period, can only be viewed as an attempt to provoke a war during this period and then lay a smoke screen in a bid to shift responsibility on to us.

It is a hackeneyed trick of the U.S. imperialists and their running dogs to set themselves on fire and then blame others for it.

Not only do we not want war, but we are making efforts to avoid getting embroiled in the enemy's war provocations. The threat of southward invasion has never existed, does not now exist, and never will exist.

The South Korean people who have understood the commotion surrounding the threat of southward invasion through their life and experience will never allow themselves to be toyed with by the slanderous anticommunist machinations of the aggressors and traitors and will stage a more tenacious struggle for independence, democracy, and reunification instead.

The U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring should abandon their maneuvers to provoke a new war under the pretext of the threat of southward invasion, accept our proposal for talks between military authorities to take measures for the relaxation of tension, and guarantee the conversion of South Korean society into a society governed by independence and democracy after abandoning their fascist suppressive policy against the people.

DAILY CASTIGATES U.S. EXERCISE IN EAST SEA

[NODONG SINMUN 29 August commentary: "An Ominous Movement"]

[Text] The U.S. imperialists are about to mount a war exercise, the largest ever conducted, in the East Sea of our country from 2 September by mobilizing a large number of ships. According to news reports, some 30 ships -- such as the battleship "New Jersey" equipped with Tomahawk cruise missiles, the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier "Carl Vinson," the aircraft carrier "Ranger," and the nuclear-powered cruiser "Long Beach" -- are expected to participate in this war exercise.

The fact that the U.S. imperialists are about to bring a large number of nuclear-powered ships, including aircraft carriers, to the East Sea of our country, a place far away from the United States, to frenziedly conduct a large-scale war exercise in itself demonstrates that the planned exercise has an unprecedentedly provocative tone against our country and other socialist countries and that it pursues a wicked goal of nuclear war. This is clearly evidenced in particular by the choice of timing for the planned exercise.

To turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace is one of the key problems involved in preventing thermonuclear war in Northeast Asia and in defending peace in the world. We have recently put forward a series of initiative proposals designed to ease tension on the Korean peninsula. And an international meeting will be held in Pyongyang from 6 September for the creation of a nuclear-free zone of peace on the Korean peninsula.

The U.S. imperialists' attempt to conduct a war exercise in the East Sea of our country with the mobilization of dozens of ships precisely at such a time is a vicious challenge to our peace-loving efforts and the world's peace-loving forces. From start to finish, this exercise is a nuclear war exercise aimed at threatening us with strength and invading the northern half of the republic.

Even though the U.S. imperialists are babbling about the threat of southward invasion from someone or someone else's military buildup, it is nothing but an excuse to cloak their own aggressive maneuvers, and is a stark lie. It is none other than the U.S. imperialists, who have not only occupied South Korea, but who also are accelerating preparations for a war of northward invasion, who are in reality beefing up their military forces and thereby threatening peace and security on the Korean peninsula.

Nothing can cover up the true color of the U.S. imperialists, who are nuclear war maniacs. The U.S. imperialists are going haywire in an effort to firmly hold South Korea in their hands as a colony and military base, while building up military forces in South Korea and its neighboring areas and strengthening military provocations to provoke a new war of aggression -- a nuclear war -- on the Korean peninsula.

The racket of North-South confrontation, fascist suppressive maneuvers, and the racket of war preparations being conducted by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets under the billboard of anticommunism with the Asian Games and the Olympic Games in 1988 approaching are all subjugated to this end. The U.S. ruling clique has repeatedly prattled about backing up international sports events scheduled to be held in South Korea by military forces, and the South Korean puppets are also babbling that a very alert posture should be maintained.

By conducting a war exercise on a large scale precisely at such a moment, the U.S. imperialists are about to practically bolster the South Korean puppets' anticommunist confrontation and fascist suppression maneuvers, to breathe into those, who are rejected and isolated at home and abroad, new life, and to threaten and blackmail the South Korean youth, students, and patriotic people who have risen up in the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the antifascist struggle for democratization.

It is no accident that the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier "Carl Vinson" will participate in the exercise after a port call at the port of Inchon.

The U.S. imperialists' frenzied military exercise could translate itself into a real war. We are heightening our vigilance against this and are keenly watching the movement of the U.S. imperialists, who are upsetting peace and security on the Korean peninsula and in Northeast Asia, exacerbating tension there, and increasing the danger of war.

CHON, JAPANESE BUSINESSMEN VIEW TRADE IMBALANCE

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 2 KYODO -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan told a Japanese business mission Tuesday he hopes for an agreeable solution to the bilateral trade imbalance, currently in Japan's favor. Chon, in an hour-long meeting with an 18-member mission led by business leader Eishiro Saito, called for Japanese efforts to redress its trade surpluses for a healthy development of the bilateral relationship, delegation officials said. The president told the Japanese a large trade imbalance might disturb the sentiments of the Korean people.

Japan posted a surplus of 2.6 billion dollars in the first half of 1986, compared with 3 billion in the whole 12 months of 1985, according to Japanese statistics. Saito, chairman of the powerful Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren), promised efforts to meet Chon's request. The mission has been here since Monday. Sounding a warning against rising international trade protectionism, Chon asked Japan to play a leading role in stemming it, the mission officials said.

Chon was quoted as saying that South Korea earnestly welcomes Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's visit to Seoul September 20-21 to attend the opening ceremony of the Asian Games.

PLAN TO CURB JAPANESE, INCREASE U.S. IMPORTS

[By Yong Kim]

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 3 KYODO -- A dark cloud is looming over South Korea-Japan trade as the Seoul government has recently taken a far-reaching measure to curb Japan's exports to this country while boosting imports from the United States. The government has decided to instruct 100 of South Korea's largest companies to refrain from importing goods from Japan in what is seen as a desperate bid to decrease snowballing trade deficits with Japan.

Vice Economic Planning Minister Mun Hui-kap said in a report to President Chon Tu-hwan that his ministry would also make it mandatory for Korea's 100 largest export traders to export "certain" amounts of commodities to Japan commensurate with their exports to the United States. "We will exert all-out efforts to increase exports to Japan and also diversify our import markets worldwide," he said, pointing to an ever-growing trade imbalance in favor of Tokyo. Mun disclosed that Seoul, in a stepped-up "trade diplomacy" offensive would call on Tokyo to open its market or decrease tariffs for such items of keen concern as footwear, petrochemicals and agricultural and marine products in a series of meetings including the annual Korea-Japanese cabinet ministers' conference.

It will also urge Japan to give opportunities to Korean construction companies to participate in Japan's new Kansai airport project, he added. Under the measure, the large traders would be faced with a sharp reduction in their lower-rate trade-promotion loans should they "significantly" increase imports from Japan.

Helping large companies establish sales subsidiaries and small firms set up joint branch offices in Japan, the government will offer intensive consultations and advice to traders to aid in their diversification of import markets, the vice minister, former lawmaker of President Chon's Democratic Justice Party, said. Additional costs, including higher freight rates and insurance fees that will accrue from imports from other countries more distant than Japan, are to be paid from the government's oil stabilization fund, originally created to foster stable local petroleum prices, in what analysts see as an effective move to spur imports from the United States and European Community member states, among others.

The measure follows a guideline, a "last-ditch" attempt to pull down trade deficits with Japan under which imports from Japan will be frozen at a 10 billion-dollar level on a yearly basis. Imports from Japan will be set at 4.9 billion U.S. dollars or so at most during the latter half of this year under the guideline, for the first half's imports amounted to 5,024 million dollars, say officials at the trade-industry ministry.

The steps come as "desperate" prescriptions to correct worsening trade deficits with Japan and increasing surplus with the United States, Korea's two largest trading partners, say analysts. Since the normalization of diplomatic ties between the two neighboring countries, Korea's trade deficits have accumulated to 32.9 billion dollars, an amount close to the country's aggregate exports for this year. The huge deficits with a single trade partner, a government economist notes, account for over 70 percent of Korea's total foreign debt. "One noteworthy problem is that the trade deficits have grown much more drastically in recent years," went on the economist, who asked not to be named.

A government talley shows that Korea's trade deficits with Japan totalled about 6.6 billion dollars in the decade from 1965. The red ink then almost doubled to 12.6 billion dollars in the ensuing five years and had reached 13.7 billion dollars by 1985. Latest statistics, compiled by the state-financed Korea Trade Promotion Corporation, say the deficits ran at 2,631 million dollars during the first six months of this year, a whopping jump of 79.8 percent over a year earlier despite the appreciation of the Japanese currency. A month later, the red ink topped 3.3 billion dollars, in sharp contrast to Korea's trade surplus with the United States, recorded at 3.8 billion dollars during the January-July period. "These statistics well explain why we have no choice but to take decisive steps against Japan with which we have pursued a better relationship," a senior official at the Foreign Ministry said in a telephone interview.

Amid mounting pressure from Washington, Korea plans to send a high-powered mission, to be composed of leading businessmen and ranking government officials, to the United States soon to soothe persisting trade frictions, according to a spokesman at the trade-industry ministry.

ROK-JAPAN FOREIGN MINISTERS' MEETING POSTPONED

SK300209 Seoul YONHAP in English 0154 GMT 30 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 30 (YONHAP) -- The Korean-Japanese Foreign Minister's meeting, originally scheduled for Sept. 2 in Tokyo, has been postponed indefinitely, a Korean Foreign Ministry official said Friday.

The two governments have agreed to reschedule their first regular foreign ministers' meeting, due to the recent replacement of the Korean foreign minister, and the Japanese foreign minister's plan to attend the United Nations General Assembly session next month, according to the official.

In a sweeping Cabinet reshuffle on Tuesday, Choe Kwang-su, Korean ambassador to the United Nations, was named foreign minister, replacing Yi Won-kyong. Japanese Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari is scheduled to leave for the United States around the middle of September to attend the U.N. session. A new date for the annual foreign ministers' meeting will be set through diplomatic channels, the official added.

NEW FOREIGN MINISTER HOLDS NEWS CONFERENCE 2 SEP

SK021133 Seoul YONHAP in English 1128 GMT 2 Sep 8

[Text] Seoul, September 2 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's new Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su said Tuesday that he would make great diplomatic efforts to strengthen cooperation with the Third World nations and improve relationship with the communist bloc. At the first news conference as foreign minister, he emphasized that those efforts were ultimately for the realization of the cross recognition of South and North Korea by the four powers, which are the United States, Soviet Union, Japan and China, and for the two Koreas' simultaneous entry into the United Nations.

He also said that the government would strive for the successful holding of the 1988 Seoul summer Olympics, inducing the participation of the East European communist nations. For that purpose, he added, the South Korean Government would try to increase exchanges with the communist countries in the field of sports, culture and education.

On the trade friction between Korea and the United States, he asserted that the problem would be solved if the two nations continued close cooperation and consultation on the principle of reciprocity. Choe said that he would let the American side understand many of Korea's difficulties such as the heavy burden of foreign debt and the massive defense expenditures.

On Korea's trade deficit with Japan, Choe said he would continuously hold trade negotiations to correct the lopsided trade imbalance, saying that the size of the deficit is "excessive."

Choe, who had been a representative of Korea to the United Nations, was appointed foreign minister in a sweeping Cabinet reshuffle on Aug. 26.

NKDP SHUNS ROK-JAPAN LAWMAKERS TALKS

SK020152 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 2 Sep 86 p 1

[Text] The main opposition New Korea Democratic Party yesterday affirmed that it would not take part in the Korea-Japan Parliamentary League as long as it "serves as a channel for the behind-the-scenes contacts" between the ruling parties of the two countries.

"The conferences of the league should be a channel for diplomacy between the people's representatives of the two nations," party spokesman Hong Sa-tok said after a meeting of the party's key post-holders.

The 14th general meeting of the league opens today in Tokyo. NKDP members are not included in the 45-man delegation from Seoul.

The party reiterated its strong opposition to the scheduled visit to Seoul by Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone to attend the opening of the Asian Games. Pointing out Nakasone's recent remarks which seemed to support the distorted history portrayed in Japanese textbooks, Hong said, "Our party leaders agreed that his visit to Seoul is not desirable."

The meeting of the key officers was presided over by party president Yi Min-u. Discussing domestic politics, Yi expressed a "wait-and-see" attitude towards the suggestion by some vice presidents to hold a large scale outdoor rally in Seoul to "publicize" the party's amendment formula of direct election of the President.

Vice president Yang Sun-chik, who takes a hawkish line, proposed a big rally in the capital city of Seoul to counter ruling party chairman No Tae-u's 16-city tour to publicize its draft for constitutional revision. Yang said, "Now that they give up parliamentary politics, we should counter their maneuvers by gathering all whole strength." However, party president Yi said "Such a rally is not timely in consideration of the coming Asian Games." The Seoul Asiad will be held between Sept. 20 and Oct. 5.

In the meeting, key NKDP officers "reaffirmed" the NKDP's earlier demand for the live TV relay of the projected public hearings. The NKDP president will soon hold a news conference to manifest the NKDP's position on constitutional amendment. It was revealed after a meeting of party's key officers by party spokesman Hong Sa-tok. "President Yi will have a press meeting in the near future on the overall political situation," Hong said.

KIM IL-SONG, KIM CHONG-IL 'FRICTION' CITED

SK300014 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 30 Aug 86 p 1

[Text] Tokyo (YONHAP) -- North Korea is showing signs of disagreement, confrontation and friction between leader Kim Il-song and his son over policies toward China and the Soviet Union, the TONGIL ILBO said Friday.

The Japanese-language newspaper for Korean residents quoted an unnamed source who it said is informed to North Korea's inside affairs. He said Kim Il-song calls for a fence-sitting diplomacy taking account of the improved, closer relations with China while his son Kim Chong-il and his followers advocate intensified relations, especially military ties with the Soviets.

In reality, however, the younger Kim has the upper hand and Pyongyang is leaning closer toward Moscow, the source said.

Meanwhile, the senior Kim is trying to check his son's attitude by pointing out that Soviet support and assistance for North Korea has always had strings attached. Anatgonism between father and son is still going on, he said.

Complaining that China is straddling the fence between Seoul and Pyongyang, he said, Kim Chong-il and his party demand that China consult with Pyongyang in advance before making decisions on its approach to Seoul.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS SITUATION IN AGRICULTURE

OW291215 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in Russian 1345 GMT 27 Aug 86

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 27 Aug (MONTSAME) -- A MONTSAME commentator writes: During the years of people's rule, the appearance of the Mongolian village has changed beyond recognition. If prior to the revolution there were only 9.6 million head of cattle in Mongolia, then during the period of people's rule this number rose by a factor of 2.4. Today, Mongolia occupies a leading place in the world in terms of livestock per capita, having 16 animals per person.

In the beginning of the 1960's, as a result of massive virgin soil reclamation, a new branch of national economy came into being: modern agriculture. Today, the country provides for its own grain needs. Agriculture in the MPR accounts for one quarter of the national income, one third of its fixed capital, and nearly 60 percent of the country's exports. Mongolians proudly attribute the successes in this field to the international assistance of the Soviet Union and other socialist community countries.

However, time brings new and complex tasks and problems of raising the effectiveness of agricultural productivity and improving product quality. Pastureland livestock raising prevails in the country, which, as has been known for a considerable time, is characterized by a number of positive aspects, such as wide open spaces, a large variety of juicy grasses, and the ability to produce valuable livestock products with a minimum of financial and labor investment. But this method has a negative side to it, the animals depend largely on natural climatic conditions, which is the reason for losses and low productivity. This obviously demands comprehensive development of technology for conducting pastureland livestock breeding.

As far as farming in the country is concerned, grain, potato, and vegetable production has certain features. Rainfall in the main farming regions does not exceed the required level, which has a negative effect on agricultural productivity. Furthermore, the slowness in introducing methods of using progressive agricultural technology, of treating the soil, and of fighting wind-caused soil erosion, all this leads to an imbalance between the production of foodstuff and the demand for it. The highest forum of Mongolian Communists gave a detailed answer to the question of how to overcome this imbalance. The MPR believes that the way to overcome this gap is to realize the comprehensive program of agricultural development and the improvement of food -- supplies to the people of the MPR. The program envisages the further promotion of agricultural development and a significant increase of productivity of the main types of produce.

It was pointed out that this activity by the fraternal states of Indochina is a part of the struggle to improve the international situation, for disarmament, and to prevent nuclear war. The Soviet Union hails the strengthening of the unity of the three fraternal Indochinese countries, regarding their cohesion as a decisive condition for defense of the revolutionary gains of the peoples of Cambodia, Vietnam, and Laos, and as their desire to make a constructive contribution to the cause of normalizing the situation in Southeast Asia.

The representatives of the USSR and Cambodian parliaments voiced their conviction that this visit to the Soviet Union by a PRK National Assembly delegation will be an important new step in strengthening and promoting the ties of friendship and comprehensive cooperation between the Soviet and Cambodian people. The PRK National Assembly delegation invited a USSR Supreme Soviet delegation to pay a return visit to Cambodia. The invitation was gratefully accepted.

CGDK ISSUES STATEMENT ON NONALIGNED SUMMIT

BK020216 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 1 Sep 86

["Text" of a "Statement" issued on 26 August by the CGDK Coordinating Committee for Information and Public Relations on the Eighth Summit of the Nonaligned Movement in Harare, Zimbabwe]

[Text] 1. The nonaligned summit in Harare will mark the 25th anniversary of the Nonaligned Movement. In this connection, it is noteworthy that Democratic Kampuchean President Samdech Norodom Sihanouk was one of the founders of the Nonaligned Movement and is a living head of state who attended the First Nonaligned Summit in Belgrade in 1961.

2. The CGDK's stand concerning this problem is known to all. This is, first the Vietnamese military aggression and occupation of Cambodia constitute a flagrant violation of the fundamental principles of the Nonaligned Movement and the UN Charter; second, the decision to leave the Cambodian seat empty by the chairman of the Sixth Summit Conference in Havana in 1979 constituted a violation of the principle of consensus, thus this decision should be regarded as null and void and the Cambodian seat within the Nonaligned Movement must be returned to the CGDK -- the sole legitimate government in Cambodia.

3. The majority of the members of the Nonaligned Movement have always opposed the Vietnamese aggression and occupation of Cambodia and supported the Cambodian people's just struggle under the CGDK leadership with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as president of Democratic Kampuchea. These states have shown their stand by voting in support of the resolution on the situation in Cambodia and by demanding total withdrawal of the Vietnamese forces from Cambodia and respect for the Cambodian people's right to self-determination.

4. With the aim of achieving national reconciliation and reconciling the two neighboring nations, that is Vietnam and Cambodia, and in order to put a quick end to the Cambodian people's misery due to the Vietnamese war of aggression, Democratic Kampuchean President Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, on behalf of the CDDK, declared an 8-point peace proposal for the political and peaceful settlement of the Cambodian problem.

5. The members of the Nonaligned Movement unanimuously support a peaceful settlement of conflicts and implementation of the UN resolution. Therefore, Vietnam, a member of the Nonaligned Movement and the United Nations, must respect this appeal of the Nonaligned Movement by accepting the CGDK's 8-point peace propsal.

6. The CGDK, on behalf of the Cambodian people and in its own name, would like to once again thank the majority of the Nonaligned Movement for their valuable support of the Cambodian people's struggle and for supporting the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal.

Within the framework of the Nonaligned Movement's appeal for a peaceful settlement of conflicts in various regions in the world, the CGDK sincerely hopes that the Nonaligned Movement will continue to support the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal which, as they have noted themselves, is a reasonable and comprehensive proposal which may be used as a program for a negotiated settlement of the Cambodian problem.

INFORMATION DIRECTOR DISCUSSES ZAYTSEV VISIT

BK021049 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1030 GMT 1 Sep 86

[Text] Director general of the Information Department Sawanit Khongsiri reported to newsmen about the meetings between Anatoliy Zaytsev, head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's Southeast Asian Affairs Department and Thai Foreign Ministry Permanent Secretary Asa Sarasin, and Director General of the International Organization Department Nit Phibunsongkhram at the Foreign Ministry on the morning of 1 September. The Soviet visitor arrived in Bangkok on 31 August for a 4-day visit to Thailand.

According to Sawanit, the Soviet official met first with Thai Permanent Secretary of the Foreign Ministry Asa Sarasin. Zaytsev told Asa Sarasin that his current mission is that of a special envoy of the Soviet leader and that he was bringing a message from CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev to Thai leaders. The message gives details and an explanation of Mikhail Gorbachev's speech in Vladivostok on 28 July concerning Soviet foreign policy with regards to Asia and the Pacific and efforts for the normalization of relations with China.

Asa told Zaytsev that Thailand sees some constructive points in Gorbachev's statement. The statement, however, does not pay much attention to Southeast Asia, especially regarding the Cambodian problem, which directly concerns Thailand's security. Following are details given by director general of the Information Department Sawanit Khonsiri at the press center of the Foreign Ministry on 1 September.

[Begin Sawanit recording] The ministry's permanent secretary urged the Soviet Union to play a constructive role, that is, to accept that there is continuous fighting in Cambodia and that Vietnam will never win. If the situation continues to drag on, it will be impossible to achieve a political solution to the problem. With the fighting going on as it is, the parties which suffer the worst casualties are the Cambodian people and the Vietnamese soldiers in Cambodia. Our permanent secretary stressd to the Soviet official that actions are more important than words. We are aware of what is in the Soviet statement, but, more important, we are waiting to see Soviet actions and the consequences.

The permanent secretary told the Soviet visitor that the problem in Cambodia is the problem between Vietnam, the aggressor, and the Democratic Kampuchean Government, or the one aggressed against. Talks must be held between the two parties. The normalization of relations between the Soviet Union and China will have no direct effect on the Cambodian problem. The same is true for talks between the Soviet Union or Vietnam and Thailand which will not solve the Cambodian problem. The problem of Cambodia must be solved by the Cambodian people. They must play the leading role in solving the problem. The permanent secretary expressed satisfaction over relations between Thailand and the Soviet Union. Yet, he pointed out that the Soviet support for Vietnamese occupation in Cambodia is a major obstacle to the development of political relations between the Soviet Union and Thailand. [end recording]

Concerning the meeting between Anatoliy Zaytsev and the director general of the International Organization Department, Nit Phibunsongkhram, Sawanit Khongsiri said the two exchanged views on international issues which will be brought up for debate at the United Nations General Assembly in September. The director general of the Information Department reports as follows:

[Begin Sawanit recording] An hour after the meeting with Asa Sarasin, the Soviet director general of Southeast Asian affairs Anatoliy Zaytsev, met with director general of the International Organization Department Nit Phibunsongkhram. The Soviet official discussed mainly with us Soviet intiatives under the UN framework and the Soviet stand and attitude regarding major issues to be included on the UN agenda in September. The topics include problems in Asia and the Pacific, the Middle East, arms reduction, the militarization space, and many others. The director general of the International Organization Department told the Soviet official that Thailand agrees in principle with the Soviet Union concerning those problems because Thailand also wants to see stability and arms reduction. But some countries do not respect the internationally agreed upon rules and regulations. This is the main factor of all problems. The question is what should we do in order to have those countries comply with the set rules and principles. [end recording]

MINISTRY SENDS PROTEST TO U.S. ON SUGAR SALES

BK300205 Bangkok THE NATION in English 30 Aug 86 p 17

[Text] The Industry Ministry has written a protest note to the United States via the Foreign Ministry about the alleged sugar export dumping practice which is damaging the local Thai sugar industry at an estimated cost of 1,000 million baht.

Industry Minister Pramuan Saphawasu also disclosed that the would meet the U.S. Ambassador to Thailand, William Brown, on September 8 to discuss the issue.

Representatives from the Thai Sugarcane Planters Federation yesterday morning called on the industry minister seeking assistance from the government to negotiate with the U.S. over the sale of 150,000 tons of sugar to China below market price. This has led to a slump in the world prices of sugar when there were signs of improvement in the market.

NATION REPORTS PREM 29 AUG PRESS CONFERENCE

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon, appearing for the first time to add to a "personal touch" to his leadership style, yesterday met the press for 90 minutes while affirming his determination to accomplish a 5 percent annual economic growth rate and create jobs for 3.9 million people during the Sixth Plan.

In a wide-ranging press interview, the prime minister denied he was "fed up" with being prime minister. He clarified: "I realize that it is exhausting and unenviable to be prime minister but I am sincerely ready to cope with the burden and go with the job."

Gen Prem also painted a more positive picture of the economic future of the country. Gone are the days, he said, that the government was on the defensive.

"From now on, we will be on the offensive to revitalize the economy and to enhance our efforts to cooperate with the private sector," he declared.

The press conference was also attended by the five deputy premiers to demonstrate "our coalition unity."

Gen Prem chose to respond to 13 of the 33 written questions submitted in advance by the press.

Answering a written question on measures to bring down the rate of unemployment, Gen Prem said that the best means to go about it is to work towards economic growth to absorb more labor force.

There are now about three million unemployed people and about six million under-employed workers.

The premier also stressed the importance of the strategy to produce manpower and agricultural crop to meet market needs.

Denying that the previous Prem governments had failed to improve the living standard of the rural people, the premier said during 1982-1985, about 700,000 rural villagers had more jobs to do in the dry seasons and their per capita income rose by about 380 baht per head annually.

He also cited statistics to back his arguments that the government's efforts to improve the quality of rural life had yielded concrete results.

Referring to the question of oil prices, the premier said that the oil prices on the world market tended to increase but the extent of the anticipated rebound was still unclear.

While some oil industrialists predicted that the price would rise to US $18-20 a barrel by the end of the next two years, other well-known petroleum experts believe that the price of the crude oil would not attain that level by the time.

At present, he said, the government could still maintain the domestic oil prices with the Oil Fund. If the world oil prices are still below U.S. $15 per barrel, there will be no need for the government to raise the domestic oil prices, he said.

The government, he said, will continue efforts to explore new energy sources to lessen the country's dependence on oil imports now accounting for about 66 percent of the overall fuel consumption. At the same time, it will urge both entrepreneurs and consumers to conserve on the energy.

Other points stressed by the prime minister included:

-The government is seeking to solve a concession dispute with Triton Oil Co Ltd in the Thai-Malaysian Joint Development Area to start the exploitation of the oil and gas reserves there.

He said that Thailand has no problems with Malaysia in this regard.

-On the fishing problem with Malaysia, Gen Prem deplored the recent shooting of a Thai fisherman in Malaysian waters and urged that legal action taken against fishermen from either country should be "friendly."

He warned against fishermen violating the territorial waters of the other country. The two countries are working out an agreement for joint fishing ventures, agreed upon in principle during his meeting with Malaysian counterpart Datuk Sri Mahathir in Phuket in May, 1984.

- He has assigned PM's Office Minister Michai Ruchuphan to draft a bill giving more powers to the Counter Corruption Commission.

REINSTATED OFFICERS SIGN UNDATED RESIGNATIONS

[Text] All the 28 "Young Turk" army officers readmitted into active service have been asked to sign an open-dated letter of resignation as a condition for their reinstatement, Army sources said yesterday.

The so-called "Young Turk" officers were Class Seven graduates of Chunlachomklao Royal Military Academy who were dismissed from the Army following the abortive coup attempt against the Prem I Government in April 1981.

One of the reinstated officers admitted to the BANGKOK POST yesterday that he had signed the resignation letter, adding that if he "misbehaved: the date would be filled in and his resignation would take effect immediately.

But the officer said it was "no problem" as long as he and other reinstated Young Turks behaved themselves.

The sources said the resignation letter was intended to keep the reinstated officers in line.

Meanwhile, it was reported that other former Young Turks including Col Chanbun Phentrakun, Col Kampanat Ketwiriyakan and Col Winai Somphong, who have not yet been reinstated, would apply for readmission into active army service.

Bangkok Governor Maj Gen Chamlong Simuang, former leader of th Class Seven officers, was also reported to have urged other young Turk officers who have not yet been admitted into active service, to apply for reinstatement.

Col Kampanat, an adviser to Gov Chamlong, told the POST yesterday he would make his decision on the matter soon.

Col Chanbun said he would have to consult his friends first. He said he did not apply for reinstatement in July because he was then busy with the election campaign. The colonel lost in Bangkok's Constituency One.

All the 28 reinstated officers are expected to report to the Defence Ministry tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the leader of the April 1981 abortive coup, Gen San Chitpatima, said yesterday the Army "made the right move" by readmitting the Young Turks into active service.

Gen San praised the Army for reinstating them. He told the BANGKOK POST that the officers were valuable human resources as they were capable and competent officers whose talent would benefit the Army now that they had the chance to return to service.

Another former senior officer, Gen Sak Buntharakun, also, welcomed the Army announcement saying that during the past five years all these officers had suffered enough from the incident.

Gen Sak, former deputy commander in chief, said that the officers had grown up and knew right from wrong and dare not do anything again to discredit themselves.

He also believed that these officers would be able to catch up with their friends in the Army as they had been out of the service for five years since the incident.

"These officers are keen and they would catch up soon should they prove themselves," Gen Sak said.

NHAN DAN Editorial

["Text" of 2 September NHAN DAN editorial: "Ensure the People's Right to Mastery by the New Socioeconomic Management System"]

[Text] Our state, the first worker-peasant state in Southeast Asia, marks another anniversary today, its 41st since the day great President Ho Chi Minh read the historic declaration of independence following the success of the August revolution. For over 4 decades, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam -- now the SRV -- situated at a strategic position which is the focal point of the contradictions of the epoch, has surmounted many storms, hardships, and dangers, at times having to cope with extremely perilous situations. However, under the party's leadership, the Vietnamese revolution and people have courageously fought and proudly marched forward, with venerated and beloved President Ho Chi Minh's immortal teaching deeply engraved in their hearts and minds: Nothing is more precious than independence and freedom.

Our people have successively vanquished many of the most powerful and ferocious aggressive forces, firmly safeguarding the gains of the August revolution, firmly defending national independence and freedom, achieving the cause of national reunification, advancing the entire country to socialism, and fulfilling their international duty.

In the course of more than 40 years of glorious revolutionary struggle dotted with successes as well as failures, with achievements as well as setbacks, and with advantages as well as difficulties, our people can take pride in having accomplished a great undertaking in building the SRV and standing in the rank of the prestigious vanguard nations of the world.

Our people respectfully recall the memory of and express their profound gratitude to great President Ho Chi Minh and all heroes, martyrs, comrades, and compatriots who have courageously laid down their lives for the motherland's independence and freedom, for socialism, and for noble international duties. Our people also express their heartfelt gratitude to the fraternal Lao and Cambodian peoples, who have fought shoulder to shoulder with us and have assisted one another to win great victories and lead the three Indochinese countries' revolution to a fine situation; to the great people of the Soviet Union, who have given the Vietnamese revolution extremely great, immeasurably precious, and highly effective support and assistance; and to the people of other fraternal socialist countries, the international communist and workers movement, the Nonaligned Movement as well as our friends in the five continents who have warmly supported and aided our people.

We are marking the 41st anniversary of the success of the August revolution and the 2 September National Day at a time when our entire party and people are enthusiastically preparing for the Sixth National Party Congress and discussing and contributing opinions to the draft political report to be presented at the sixth congress.

In a spirit of serious self-criticism and criticism and with an attitude showing respect for the truth, our party Central Committee has made a penetrating analysis of all aspects of the country's situation over the past years and has reviewed the experience gained in implementing the resolutions of the Fifth CPV Congress. Over the past 5 years, our people, bringing into full play their spirit of collective mastery and their sense of self-reliance, have courageously overcome all difficulties caused by natural calamities and enemy attacks. Enjoying in addition the great assistance and increasingly effective all-round cooperation of the Soviet Union and the socialist community, they have scored important achievements.

We have had a number of shortcomings and mistakes in grasping the set lines and in economc management. This is evidenced by the following: First, we have failed to proceed from the actual situation of the country with its intense contradictions and have, out of subjectivism and impatience, distanced ourselves from the real situation and social life. Second, we have been conservative and sluggish in renovating the mechanism of economic management and have maintained for too long a time the mechanism of management based on bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies, thereby slowing down the development of production and failing to bring into play the laboring people's right to collective mastery.

The most important task of our party's sixth congress is to point out the orientations and effective measures for developing strong points and correcting shortcomings and mistakes in order to push the revolutionary cause steadily forward. The socialist revolution is the most complicated, profound, and thorough revolution in history. Our country is advancing to socialism from a very low point of departure -- an economy largely characterized by small production, its material-technical bases were devastated by almost 40 years of war. The Vietnamese Communists -- though well tested and highly experienced in the national democratic revolution -- are not prepared to cope with the many new aspects of the socialist revolution with their limited experience; and they have shown the lack of experience and ability in some respects.

Our country is now in the first stage of the transitional period to socialism. The tasks, measures, and steps we undertake must conform to the characteristics of this stage. To build socialism we must always firmly grasp and correctly apply the principles of Marxism-Leninism to the realistic conditions of Vietnam and must effect changes in many respects -- change in concept; change in thinking, especially economic thinking; change in the mechanism of management; change in workstyle; and change in organization and cadres.

Collective mastery by the laboring people constitutes the nature of the new system. Building the system of collective mastery by the laboring people is the all-encompassing goal of the socialist revolution. As the revolution is an undertaking of the masses, its strength lies in the people themselves. To truly develop the laboring people's right to collective mastery it is necessary to trust the people. All party policies must originate from the interests, aspirations, and capability of the people so as to make the people understand them, have confidence in the party, and enthusiastically volunteer to build and defend the socialist fatherland -- thus creating a close and firm bond between the party and the people.

The masses are those who create history and produce all the material wealth for society. Therefore, they are the true owners of socialist property and hold true control over management, distribution, and consumption; just as they assumed true mastery and won total victory in the anti-U.S. war of resistance for national salvation. The party guarantees the laboring people's right to collective mastery by means of a new mechanism of socioeconomic management. It is resolved to abolish the mechanism of management based on bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies and shift to economic accounting and socialist businesses on the basis of planning while practicing the principle of democratic centralism in conducting party activities and in all domains of political, economic, and social life.

We must resolve to do away with directing the economy mainly through administrative orders and must shift to an operating mode which calls for grasping firmly and applying correctly the system of objective laws now being developed in the initial stage of the transitional period.

The party advocates, on the basis of firmly maintaining the principle of democratic centralism, guaranteeing the basic economic units' right to autonomy in production and business while firmly maintaining the central government's right to centralized and unified management over key areas of the national economy. It is necessary to attach importance to manipulating commodity-monetary relationships and to do away with a situation in which planning is not linked to the market and production is not linked to circulation and social requirements.

Discarding bureaucratic centralism is not aimed at achieving decentralization but at increasing centralization appropriately while developing the dynamism and creativity of localities, establishments, and workers. Comrade General Secretary Truong Chinh said: Centralization must be carried out on the basis of developing democracy fully while developing democracy must be aimed at guaranteeing the right to centralized management. These two aspects are an integral part of a single entity and are interactive and complementary. In view of the current situation, we must oppose bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies and must, at the same time, fight against liberalism, unorganized and indisciplined attitudes, and a tendency to care only for departmentalistic or local interests as they weaken the centralized and unified control of the state.

In compliance with the CPV Central Committee's Eighth Plenum resolution, the eradication of the system of bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies requires the renovation of party cadres' and members' thinking -- their way of thinking and doing things, especially in the field of economic business. Renovating organizational and cadre-related work and improving the knowledge and qualities of party cadres and members require the party and state organs to be clean and steadfast and to guarantee the laboring people's collective mastery, and on this basis, ensure that the society functions in an organized, disciplined, ethical, civilized, and healthy manner.

A profound lesson of the Vietnamese revolution shows that the strength of the nation must always be combined with the strength of the times. Our people must continue to develop this lesson by trying to maintain peace in Indochina in Southeast Asia and to make active contributions to maintaining world peace. We must consolidate and strengthen the relations of special friendship and all-round cooperation between the three Indochinese countries and between the three countries and the Soviet Union as well as other countries in the Socialist community and must contribute to the world people's struggle for peace, national independence, democracy, and socialism.

In view of the extremely tense world situation caused by the U.S. imperialists and their scheme of feverishly stepping up the nuclear arms race both on the earth and in space, thus creating the real danger of a nuclear war of annihilation while implementing their reactionary Asia-Pacific strategy, our people admire, highly value, and strongly support the pacifist foreign policy of the Soviet Union and its concrete and important peace initiatives as well as its dynamic and highly effective diplomatic activities. Our people warmly respond to and support the overwhelmingly convincing initiatives advanced recently by Comrade General Secretary Gorbachev concerning a general program for the elimination of nuclear weapons by the end of this century, including the continued suspension of Soviet nuclear weapons testing until 1 January 1987 and various measures aimed at achieving peace, security, stability, and cooperation in Asia and the Pacific.

The outlook of the revolution in the three Indochinese countries is fine and the situation is irreversible. On the basis of the lesson of history in the past several years, the three parties and countries of Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia strongly affirm that they must closely unite with one another and with the Soviet Union to effectively cope with the counterattacks by imperialism and various reactionary forces.

Staying firmly united and comprehensively cooperating with the Soviet Union and definitely relying on Soviet assistance [Duwaj hawnr vaof suwj giups dgowr cuar lieen Xoo] is the principle as well as the basic policy of our party and state. Satisfactorily implementing all cooperation plans with the Soviet Union is the first priority and responsibility of our country.

As a nation which has been through more than 30 years of war full of hardships and which is carrying out two strategic tasks -- building and defending the socialist fatherland -- while perfoming its international duty, our people realize all too well the great value of peace, an important condition for building a new life.

Our people stand for and support the policy of peaceful coexistence among different political and social systems and of settling all disputes and differences between countries through peaceful negotiations on the basis of respect for each other's sovereignty. In accordance with this spirit and on the basis of the principle of firmly defending the gains of the Cambodian revolution and firmly safeguarding the strength of the alliance among the three Indochinese countries as well as the alliance between the latter and the Soviet Union, we are prepared to hold talks with China at any level and at any time to restore normal relations between the two countries. The three Indochinese countries are also ready to enter into dialogue with and restore normal relations with the ASEAN member countries and the United States to build Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability, and cooperation.

We are facing extremely weighty tasks. We must simultaneously carry out pressing socioeconomic tasks, especially on the food and consumer and export goods production front and in circulation and distribution, stabilize the people's living conditions, and consolidate national defense and security while having to do a good job of holding party organization congresses at all levels. By achieving the unity of will and action within the party and among the people, with the entire party singlemindedly united around the party Central Committee and the entire people closely united around the party, and by implementing the principle of democratic centralism and bringing into full play the working people's right to collective mastery, we are fully capable of overcoming the immediate difficulties and advancing continuously to score many outstanding achievements to greet the Sixth CPV Congress.

Our people are determined to transform their revolutionary heroism in the wars of national liberation and national defense into revolutionary heroism in the socialist revolution to build a prosperous and strong SRV and to contribute to preserving peace and strengthening the position of socialism in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

HANOI RECALLS SUCCESSES AGAINST U.S. BOMBING

OW280454 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 26 Aug 86

[Station special program: "'The Glorious History of Vietnam's Revolution' -- Introducing the Vietnamese People's Defeat of the American Imperialists' Destructive War Against Northern Vietnam"]

[Text] The special warfare waged by the American imperialists in southern Vietnam was utterly frustrated by mid-1964. To retrieve its defeat the American imperialists cooked up the so-called Tonkin Gulf incident on 5 August 1964. They dispatched planes to bomb northern Vietnamese provinces in a move to subdue Vietnam by extensive attacks. However, the American imperialists were dealt head-on blows. Eight American planes were smashed to pieces on the first bombing mission and the bandit pilots were captured alieve.

Revolution surged in southern Vietnam in February 1965. In view of successive setbacks the American imperialists outrageously mobilized massive air and naval forces, armed with modern weapons, to intensify the war in areas south of 20 degrees latitutde in northern Vietnam in a vain attempt to stem the flow of massive supplies from the people in the north to their compatriots in the south and in order to undermine socialist construction in the north.

Faced with this situation the party Central Committee instructed that an imperative task for the north was to reorient economic development toward strengthening its defense forces. To counter the American imperialists' destructive warfare the party adopted the strategic policy of launching an all-round war involving all the Vietnamese people through self-reliance, while appealing for international assistance.

In response to Chairman Ho Chi Minh's call for independence and liberty, the people in the south resolved to defeat the American imperialists. The American imperialists' strategic offensives in southern Vietnam during the dry seasons in 1966 and 1967 were disastrously foiled. Subsequently, they savagely launched raids against Hanoi, Haiphong, and other major cities in the north, as well as against key industrial centers, water conservancy works, dams, and communications lines, causing many innocent casualities. Nevertheless, the American imperialists' destructive warfare failed to stem supplies from the north to their blood brothers in the south. They could neither shake the Vietnamese people's will to continue the struggle for national salvation nor impede socialist construction in the north.

In 4 years from 1964 to 1968, of fighting the American imperialists' destructive warfare, the soldiers and people in the north shot down a total of 3,243 American planes of various types, including 6 B-52's and 2 F-111's. Thousands of American bandit pilots were either killed or captured alive. Close to 100 warships of various types were also sunk or damage, thereby dealing a telling blow to the American imperialists' destructive warfare.

Following its disastrous defeat in the south, the American imperialists were forced to scale down the bombing in the north. Eventually, on 1 November 1968, the American imperialists announced an unconditional cessation of bombing against the entire territory of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam. After suffering repeated setbacks on the battlefields in the south, the American imperialists again resumed adventurous bombings of the north in 1972. Toward the end of 1972 they amassed hordes of B-52 strategic bombers and other planes to launch strategic air raids against the capital, Honoi, and the northern provinces. Under the staunch leadership and prompt action of the party, the soldiers and people in the north dealt punitive blows to the American imperialists' new escalation of their war effort. In a matter of 12 days and nights in the fierce battle at Dien Bien Phu 81 American planes of various types were brought down, among which were 34 B-52 strategic bombers and 5 F-111's. Close to 100 American bandit pilots were either killed or captured alive. During the 8 years of destructive warfare by the American imperialists the soldiers and people in the north downed a total of 4,181 American planes and killed or captured alive thousands of American bandit pilots. Victory by soldiers and people both in the north and south compelled the United States to sign the Paris agreement on the Vietnamese issue, which required all American troops to be withdrawn. This victory laid the groundwork for the successful all-round offensive and intensified struggle by the Vietnamese soldiers and people in the spring of 1975, which led to the total liberation of the south and eventual reunification of the fatherland.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS FULL ACCOUNT OF CHIRAC REMARKS

[Text] Canberra, Aug 30 (AFP) -- The Australian Government was seeking a full account of French Premier Jacques Chirac's stinging attack on Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke over New Caledonia, a spokesman for Mr Hawke said Saturday.

Mr Chirac, on a three-day visit to the French territory, was reported to have said Friday he wanted a change of government in Australia because of Mr Hawke's "very stupid" attitude on New Caledonia.

THE AGE, a Melbourne daily, reported from Noumea that within minutes of his arrival there Friday, Mr Chirac attacked Mr Hawke for his "complete misunderstanding" of the issue. The French leader also told a reception he was "looking forward to a change of government" in Australia, the paper said.

Mr Chirac paused during an airport welcoming ceremony to have words with Australia's consul-general to New Caledonia Mr John Dauth, THE AGE said. "He made a number of harsh and personal remarks to me about Mr Hawke," Mr Dauth was quoted as saying.

These remarks had been communicated to Canberra and the Australian Government was seeking a full account before considering a response, the spokesman for Mr Hawke said.

In an interview on New Caledonia radio, Mr Chirac also attacked both the Australian and New Zealand Governments' attitudes, saying they showed an "extraordinary ignorance of history" in relation to the problems of the French territory.

Earlier this month Australia and New Zealand joined other South Pacific nations in seeking New Caledonia's re-inscription with the United Nations Committee on Decolonisation and warning France that it should conduct a plebiscite on independence in New Caledonia.

France has scheduled a referendum on independence for the territory for next year.

Hawke Defends Stand

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Hawke, has defended Australia's position on French policies in the South Pacific. In a statement issued in Canberra, Mr Hawke said he was surprised at the comments made by his French counterpart, Mr Chirac, who is currently visiting New Caledonia.

At a news conference yesterday in the capital, Noumea, Mr Chirac said comments by the Australian prime minister reported in three French newspaper on the New Caledonia issue were stupid. Mr Chirac also said he was concerned about Australia's attitude to France and said Mr Hawke's comments were unacceptable to the French Government.

Mr Hawke is reported to have warned the French that unless the independence issue was handled properly in New Caledonia there could be a bloodbath. However, Mr Chirac accused Mr Hawke of stupidity in his attitude over the future of New Caledonia and said he would welcome a change of government in Canberra.

In his first reply over the criticism, Mr Hawke said he did not intend to respond in a similar fashion to Mr Chirac. He said the French prime minister had allowed himself to depart from the normal manner of discourse between heads of government of friendly countries.

Mr Hawke said the position of the Australian Government on the future of New Caledonia was well known and he wrote to Mr Chirac last week to say there had been no deviation from it. He said the federal government had consistently acknowledged the difficulties facing France in New Caledonia.

Mr Hawke said it was the government's wish to help peacefully resolve the problems along the path to independence in the French territory. The prime minister also said successive Australian Governments had expressed their opposition to continue nuclear testing by the French in the South Pacific -- a position shared by many other governments in the region.

Mr Hawke said despite recent events, the federal government wished to continue constructive dialogue with France on matters of mutual interest.

HAWKE TELLS LUGAR OF NEED FOR SANCTIONS

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Hawke, has told the United States that sanctions against South Africa would prevent the destruction of South Africa's economy by a militant black takeover. Mr Hawke made the comment during talks in Sydney with the chairman of the American Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Richard Lugar.

The prime minister told the senator that there were elements in South Africa and within the leadership of the so-called Frontline African states which wanted to keep the existing white capital structure under a new political system.

He said sanctions would lead to dialogue between the white minority government in Pretoria and the black elements. Mr Hawke said that without dialogue the responsible black leaders would be supplanted by militants who wanted to destroy the existing system.

Senator Lugar is visiting Australia as part of a fact finding tour of Asia and the Pacific.

MINISTER EXPECTS U.S.-FTN TRADE COOPERATION

[Text] The trade minister, Mr Dawkins, says he expects the United States to cooperate with the new alliance of 14 agricultural trading nations. The 14 countries met this week in the north Greensland city of Cairns. They call themselves the Fair Trading Nations [FTN] and have agreed to campaign for the reform of agricultural trade which they say is threatened by European and American subsidies.

Mr Dawkins says there are signs that the United States will support the group's position next month at the world trade talks in Uruguay. He says the Americans recognize the need to maintain dialogue and it is important for the Fair Trading Nations to have an ally as powerful as the United States.

WHEAT BOARD CRITICIZES U.S. GRAIN SUBSIDY

[Excerpt] The Australian Wheat Board has criticized an American decision to further boost subsidies for grain exports to the Soviet Union. The American Agriculture Department is lifting the subsidy on export grain by $3 a ton.

It comes only a few days after a meeting of 14 nations, including Australia, at Cairns in north Queensland to protest against the trading policies of the United States and the European Community.

The chairman of the Australian Wheat Board, Mr Clinton Condon, says the increased American subsidy will adversely affect Australian wheat farmers. Australia had already protested directly to the United States about its subsidy policies and recently sent an all-party parliamentary delegation to Washington to try to reverse the decision.

Mr Condon says the latest American subsidy boost will put further downward pressure on the international wheat market.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE SAYS LOYALISTS TO ATTACK 'SOON'

HK030948 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 3 Sep 86 p 22

[Text] Armed followers of former President Marcos, backed up by a battalion of soldiers, are set to stage attacks soon as a birthday gift to him, unverified intelligence reports of the Armed Forces revealed yesterday.

The same reports said the loyalists are expected to group today in at least two places in Metro Manila, namely, in the Libis area in Quezon City and in an undisclosed residential compound along the Sumulong Highway in Antipolo, Rizal.

The loyalist groups are expected to join a battalion of soldiers based in a Metro Manila military camp. They will then attack military installations, communication facilities and Malacanang.

The attacks will be launced between Sep 7 and 11.

The New Armed Forces of the Philippines has been monitoring the movements of Marcos loyalists during the past months particularly after they staged an aborted coup last July 6 backed up by soldiers of the Armed Forces from several units.

The intelligence reports also revealed that a prominent Marcos loyalist personality has recently solicited the support of a powerful religious sect when hostilities commence on the planned attacks.

Meanwhile, Brig Gen Ramon Montano of the National Capital Command confirmed yesterday that his intelligence network has made sightings of small groupings of Marcos loyalist meetings in several undisclosed places in Metro Manila.

Montano, however, said these are mere sightings and have not been infiltrated by intelligence operatives so he could not comment on the loyalists' plans or whether they are armed or not.

The attacks are said to be timed before President Corazon C. Aquino leaves for talks with Moro National Liberation Front chief Nur Misuari, in the southern Philippines.

CON-COM MEMBER REVEALS PLOT TO KILL AQUINO IN U.S.

[Text] Movie director Lino Brocka yesterday bared an alleged plot to assassinate President Aquino during her visit to the United States in Mid-September. He spoke before a press conference at the Asian Institute of Tourism in Quezon City. Brocka said he was informed of the assassination plot by a commissioner of the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] who was urging him to return to the Con-Com. Brocka walked out from deliberations on August 18 in protest against what he called the failure of the body to protect Filipino economic interests in the constitution. In urging him to return, the commissioner -- whom Brocka refused to name -- reportedly informed him about documents regarding alleged plans by the military to take over the government and another plan to assassinate Mrs Aquino during her U.S. visit. The press conference was called by the Coalition for Constitutional Provisions on Industrialization and Economic Protectionism and Nationalism to expose some Con-Com members who allegedly have connections with multi-national companies.

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has been nurturing his presidential ambitions even years before the February Revolution that unseated Philippine strongman Ferdinand Marcos.

In a statement received by MALAYA the National Democratic Front [NDF] in the far north of Luzon said that when Enrile dislodged Tito Dupaya in the 1980 local elections, a political bloc known as the "Solid North" emerged. Enrile then installed persons loyal to him to the provincial and municipal posts, the NDF claimed.

However, the former First Lady was allegedly "manueuvering covertly and overtly" to stop Enrile's ambition, the 10-page document said.

Imelda Marcos has actually overshadowed Enrile's powers in the defense ministry, forcing him to ally and develop then Armed Forces vice chief Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos and the military junior officers in 1982, the alliance of rebel groups said.

The NDF also said Enrile started to build his own private army at that time -- the local paramilitary Civilian Home Defense Force and the provincial command soldiers.

The Enrile-Marcos factions of the "Solid North" culminated in the February military-backed uprising when the Enrile-Ramos bloc bolted the Marcos-Imelda-Ver triumvirate that deposed the former regime, the rebel alliance said.

This gave Enrile, a hold-over defense minister, a chance to regroup the Solid North which has shown a big crack due to credibility problem of the two leaders and the unabated human rights abuses.

The NDF also alleged Enrile was directly instrumental in reviving the Nacionalista Party when it held a convention on June 28 at the Hotel Delfino in Tuguegarao, Cagayan.

The NDF said the Solid North would be used by Enrile as his launching pad for his "ill-concealed presidential goals."

The document said Enrile would also use his political power, the defense and military establishment, and the Nacionalista Party to realize his ambition.

More on Enrile Support in North

[Text] Tuguegarao (PNF) [Philippine News & Features] -- An interesting realignment of political forces is taking shape in Northern Luzon, once dubbed as the "Solid North."

Under the Marcos regime, top civilian and military authorities in the region, including governors, vice-governors, majority of mayors and vice-mayoral and provincial military officials, and other government officials, owed loyalty to no one but the the President, who held the entire region in a tight leash.

With the advent of the Aquino government however, the "solid" North has begun to crack in all directions. New political divisions and re-alignments have been forming since March this year.

Emerging strongest among all the blocs is a group of politicans from two parties -- the demobilized Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL), which is Marcos' own party, and the United Democratic Organization (UNIDO) -- whose loyalties can best be described as pro-Enrile. Enrile, of course, is Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, who hails from the province of Cagayan and is considered by many as the political leader to reckon with in the next contest for the highest office.

Belonging to this bloc would be Officer-in-Charge (OIC) Benjamin Ligot of Cagayan, OIC Juan Dait of Ifugao, and the three provincial commanders who are also known Reform the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] Movement (RAM) leaders--Lt. Col. Rodolfo Aguinaldo of Cagayan, Col. Hernani Figueroa of Isabela, and Lt. Col. Arturo Lumibao of Nueva Vizcaya. Former KBL politicians who may be included in this bloc because of their known relationship with the Defense Minister are ex-Laoag City Mayor Rudy Farinas, ex-Ilocos Norte vice-governor Roque Ablan, Jr., and the former governors of the provinces of Nueva Viscaya and Kalinga-Apa-Yao. Other likely members of the Enrile bloc would be ex-Isabela governor Faustino Dy, ex-Ilocos Sur governor Luis "Chavit" Singson, and ex-Pangasinan governor Aguedo Agbayani.

Jose "Peiping" Cojuangco appears to be building up his own political base from among the remnants of the "solid" North. The embattled OIC-appointee for Ilocos Sur, Sally Villanueva, is his recomendee. Cojuangco's political party happens to be the PDP-LABAN.

Another bloc is the UNIDO-SANIDAD group, whichu is concentrated in Baguio City and the provinces of Benguet, La Union, Abra and Ilocos Sur. However, this group could attract independent-minded and progressive politicians, including those in the PDP-LABAN who do not belong to the Conjuangco bloc, such as the OIC's of Nueva Viscaya and La Union. Thus, the group has the potential to grow into a significant political entity in the months to come.

The other provincial OIC's in the region do not have clear political inclinations as yet, although they belong to one party or another.

There are, on the other hand, individuals such as OIC William Claver of Kalinga-Apa-Yao, who have weak political machineries but strong working relations with cause-oriented groups, which could provide them with strong political support.

These political arrangements are not permanent. Future developments will determine who among these political figures would find common ground with each other and thereby create new political groupings. But this jockeying for friends is becoming more urgent as election time approaches.

In the background of this game of musical chairs is the omnipotent military in the region, which has actually grown in number after the February civilian-military revolt that installed the popular Corazon Aquino as president.

A new Marine company has been dispatched to the province of Pangasinan. One Army battalion was assinged to Nueva Ya, one Scout Ranger company to Isabela, another to Nueva Viscaya. Three Scout Ranger companies were sent to Cagayan.

What makes the military situation even more scary is the undisturbed presence of armed contingents of political warlords in the countryside. The government militia, the Civilian Home Defense Force [CHDF], much hatred during the Marcos era, has not been dismantled but in fact is being beefed up today.

Inhabitants of the region find themselves face to face with serious economic problems including very little available land, high production costs, high prices, low wages, few job opportunities, and so on. Meanwhile, repression by the military continues unabated.

Cause-oriented organizations have of late increased their sphere of influence in the entire region. The New People's Army is widely believed to be keeping up a steady pace of growth in many areas in the north, right up to Marcos's and Enrile's bailiwicks.

After the Constitutional Commission finishes its work in September, elections will be forthcoming. The politicians are alive and kicking once more, flexing their muscles in anticipation. But this time, in northern Luzon, the results may not be as predictable as its was in Marcos' time.

There is no more "Solid North." Today politics in the North is anybody's ballgame.

'FORCES' IN GOVERNMENT ACCUSED OF 'GREED'

HK281431 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 28 Aug 86 p 3

[By Fil Maragay]

[Text] Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel Jr yesterday lashed at forces within the government which he said have been trying to undermine the coalition of parties supporting President Aquino. He also accused them of being motivated by "greed" for power.

Interviewed by newsmen, Pimentel said these forces have kept on airing gripes about their alleged lopsided sharing of power in the Aquino government when in fact, he said, they have obtained more than what they deserve.

Although he did not mention these gripes, Pimentel was obviously referring to the constant complaints of some political parties in the coalition, particularly Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization], that is leaders have been discriminated against in the selection of officers-in-charge in local government units.

Pimentel admitted that if the coalition collapses it will diminish the popular support of President Aquino.

This will also possibly result, he said, in the Unido withdrawing its support for President Aquino and forming a new coalition with another political party.

Minister Pimentel reiterated that a merger between the Unido and PDP-Laban [Partido Demokratiko ng Pilipinas-Lakas ng Bayan -- Phillippine Democratic Party-Strength of the Nation] which he heads is almost impossible. But he said this should not serve as a hindrance to the putting up of a common set of candidates in forthcoming elections by all parties making up the coalition, including the Liberal Party (Salonga and Kalaw wings) and the regional political parties.

He said he saw bleak chances for the formation of a new national party to be composed of all pro-administration parties as advocated by Vice President Laurel, who is Unido president.

The existence of such national party is untenable, he said, because of basic differences in the principles and platforms of government of the various parties in the present coalition.

Pimentel also denied that the local government ministry has been trying to take away supervision over farm cooperative from the agriculture ministry as part of a plan to strengthen the PDP-Laban.

He said the move to transfer supervision of farm cooperatives was initiated by Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra Jr and not by the MLG.

LIBERATION INTERVIEW WITH NPA GENERAL STAFF MEMBERS

["Excerpts" of interview with New People's Army General Staff members "Ronnie" and "Miguel" -- date, place not given].

[Text] Q: What is a ceasefire? Does it involve the laying down of arms?

A. A ceasefire is the cessation of armed hostilities between warring parties. It does not mean surrender nor does it necessarily involve the laying down of arms.

A ceasefire can lead to either a truce or an armistice. A truce is a negotiated settlement arrived at after a dialog between the parties. An armistice is arrived at only after a truce had led to a long-lasting ceasefire.

Still, ceasefire can be of three kinds: a unilateral ceasefire, and ceasefire arrived at after negotiations, and a ceasefire as a result of granted conditions but not necessarily of negotiations.

What we want is a negotiated ceasefire. But we have not attached conditions before negotiations could begin, and the government should likwise do the same. There should be no demand for either side to diminish its present strength such as calling for a laying down of arms.

Q: Will you enter into a ceasefire with the Aquino government?

A: The call for a six-month ceasefire was a call made by Cory Aquino even before she became president. We assure her that her call has not fallen on deaf ears. Like her, we also want peace.

However, it seems that within the Aquino government there are different views concerning the ceasefire. At present, we are unsure as to which view will prevail.

A reactionary clique within the military does not want to ceasefire. They want the civil government of President Cory Aquino to delcare all-out war against the NPA. In this position, they are supported by the U.S. The U.S. is pushing for more military aid to be used against us in spite of President Aquino's clear preference for more economic aid.

The people who supported Mrs. Aquino have high expectations concerning the institution of political and economic reforms. However, they also want to give the Aquino government a chance to advance its democratic initiatives. Yet Enrile has already criticized her policies towards insurgency and has told her to stop her "kid-glove treatment" of the NPA. It seems that Enrile and other reactionaries in the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] do not want to give Mrs. Aquino a chance.

Q: Will you accept an offer of amnesty?

A: Political Affairs Minister Cuenco has presented a view of ceasefire, the framework of which actually calls for surrender of the NPA. In fact, in Region 11, Northern Mindanao, they are set to give amnesty to any rebel that will surrender. Cuenco has requested a budget for the rehabilitation of surrenderees by giving them jobs.

When you enter into a ceasefire with an opposite party, you recognize them as a force to reckon with -- a force you deal with on an equal footing. There is no amnesty involved as it means a pardon for a political offense.

Why should we surrender and be given amnesty? Just like the opposition, we fought hard against the Marcos fascist dictatorship. Why should our efforts against the Marcos regime be considered as a political offense under the present dispensation? If that is the logic, then the present government should also grant amnesty to the opposition political parties.

This call for surrender and amnesty is an effort to split and demoralize the ranks of the revolutionary forces. RAM's (Reform the AFP Movement) Col. Red Kapunan has admitted this when he stated that the amnesty is meant only for the CPP [Communist Party of the Philippines]-NPA rank-and-file and not their leaders and commanders.

Amnesty is also a trump card for the reactionary and criminal torturers and elements in the AFP. They intend to counteract the growing clamor to prosecute them for the human rights violations and atrocities they have committed. Their line now is that if Cory can be magnanimous with "Communist terrorists," why can't she be magnanimous to them who were "only doing their duty" under the Marcos regime? But the people demand justice for their crimes. Ang utang sa dugo ay dapat byaran. Managot ang dapat managot [Debts of blood must be paid. Whoever is responsible will have to be made accountable.]

Q: Some say the armed struggle as a particular form of struggle has been put into question by recent events. Can you comment on this?

A: There has been no change in basic conditions. The basic problems which gave rise to the dictatorship remain. Changes however have occurred in the political field. Instead of open terrorist rule, we now have a liberal government in place.

The thing to look at is the local level. If liberal elements within the Aquino government succeed in replacing Marcos supporters or fascist holdovers in the local government with liberal or democratic elements who are against militarization, there may be changes then. The system of patronage and repression established by Marcos for 20 years will be destablized.

Q: Will you continue your tactical offensives?

A: In deference to new developments and as an expression of our respect for the temper of the people, we have acted with restraint in carrying out tactical operations. However, rabid counter-insurgency campaigns against us continue. Soldiers enter our areas and go on rampages against the people. For example, in Bataan, there are only around 300,000 civilians but it is crawling with legions of soldiers, marines and other paramilitary forces. In Samar, notorious military and paramilitary units which are responsible for mass killings are still around.

We have to fight regular troops who enter our areas and make trouble. If we are attacked, we will counter-attack. We are only defending the masses and ourselves.

Q: How have recent developments affected the morale of the NPA?

A: Our officers and men are raising questions. The effect has been to encourage them to study more and participate in discussions. Hinihimay-himay nila ngayon ang lahat ng memo at study materials. [Today, they scrutinize all memos and study materials.] Through open discussions, they study the new situation and ask themselves, what is my role given the new situation? They realize that the armed struggle is still necessary. Tuloy ang laban. [The fight continues.] But there is a little bitterness among our men because they cannot move against the enemy as freely as before. Many also felt bitter that because of the boycott policy of the movement, kumitid ang masang naimpluwensyahan natin noong eleksyon [the masses we had influenced contracted.]

Q: Why, what is your assessment of the movement's boycott policy? Has this and the February uprising itself, set back your timetable for a strategic counter-offensive?

A: We failed to properly project our role during the February events because of the boycott call. We missed the opportunity to lead or seize the initiative or play an influential role in the turn of events.

But we have learned from our mistakes. At present, our ranks are as enthusiastic as ever. They are resolute in pursuing the revolution. We have not received any reports of surrender. Our forces are intact. The revolution has not been defeated.

Q: As a result of their participation in the February revolt, the AFP is said to have acquired a new image. They, in fact, call themselves the New AFP. What do you think of this?

A: Generally, the people are apprehensive that the chief architects, administrators and implementors of martial law continue to retain power. Ver and his generals were removed or retired, pero sino ang pumalit? Hindi ba may ksalanan din? [But who replaced them? Were they not also guilty?]

Take for example RAM's recruiting officer, Col. Hernani Figueroa. He has committed a number of atrocities. He cannot hide his involvement in the murder of Dr. Bobby dela Paz in 1982 since at that time he was Gen. Mison's intelligence officer in Samar.

The new AFP image projected by the media is just that -- an image. It has no substance and is very far from reality. Notorious officers remain in place.

Q: What can you say of Col. Gringo Honasan's comment that the NPA is a destabilizing force?

A: As far as the Marcos dictatorship was concerned, yes, we were a destabilizing force. Even they, in the last instance, joined in destabilizing Marcos. But as far as the Aquino government is concerned, dapat ibalik sa kanila ang tanong. [The question should be posed before them.] When we expressed our openness to a ceasefire, it was Honasan and his group who said that a ceasefire is not possible. Who really is destabilizing whom?

Q: Honasan also asked where you were during the February Revolution?

A: There is no question that their participation in the last instance was crucial to the fall of the dictator. True, we were not there at the critical juncture but our struggle was a major factor in politically weakening the Marcos dictatorship. The February Revolution was part of the long struggles waged by the Filipino people long before. We were in the midst of that fight.

In truth, the fact that their military rebellion succeeded because of the masses' support proves what we have been saying all along. Only the people themselves combining armed and unarmed forms of struggle can liberate themselves.

Now we ask Honasan, where were they in the darkest days of the dictatorship? Hindi ba sila ang naghahasik ng lagim? [Were they not perpetuating the darkness?] They were spreading darkness.

Q: Honasan also claims that the NPA is now isolated.

A: Isolation is difficult to gauge. He says that one indication of our isolation is the release of political prisoners. Paano nangyari iyon? [How did it happen?] The people received very warmly the release of Joma (Jose Ma. Sison) and Dante (Bernabe Buscayno). I doubt if that signifies that we are isolated.

Furthermore, this move by Cory has the full backing of the people. It was they, the reactionaries in the military, who were blocking the release of political prisoners. In the end, they had to concede due to Cory's insistence and popular pressure. The truth is they want to isolate the revolutionary movement which has long been fighting the Marcos dictatorship.

Q: What are your personal views concerning the ceasefire?

A: I am speaking here in my personal capacity and not for the NPA. I think the movement should seriously consider entering into a negotiated ceasefire. We can make the negotiations -- given the media coverage it will attract -- a forum to present our demands which are actually the people's just demands. We know that the people want to give the Aquino government a chance to institute reforms. The negotiations will give the Aquino government a chance to prove its sincerity.

The U.S. and the reactionaries within the government and the AFP do not want a ceasefire. Precisely because they don't want our just demands to be made public, they don't want to blunt their proposition that the NPA only wants violence for violence's sake. They are moving to pressure the civilian government to declare an all-out war against us. Their line is very similar to Marcos' pronouncements in his recent interview by Rafael Yabut. Marcos said that the Philippines as a partner to ASEAN has called traditional role in the security of the region. He also called for unity with Cory against the CPP and the NPA. This is the very same line being peddled by the reactionaries in the AFP.

The U.S., on the other hand, through the Weinberger visit, is pushing for more military aid in spite of the clear preference of the civil government for more economic aid.

These things show that the military and the civil government have opposing views concerning the ceasefire. We are not sure if Cory Aquino and the civil government can handle the military. We do not know whose views will prevail. But we cannot allow the reactionaries to sow intrigue and let them pressure the government to declare all-out war against us. We have to seize the chance to at least ventilate the people's calls and demands.

To prove our sincerity, we can enter into a truce with certain reasonable conditions that can be met at a given period of time. Possible short-term or realistic conditions for a negotiated settlement are the abolition of the CHDF [Civilian Home Defense Forces] and dismantling of warlord's armies. In principle, the civil government is agreeable to these.

Negotiations for a ceasefire would involve an agreement on the agenda of the negotiations, the venue, the panel of negotiators, the mechanics of the ceasefire and the political conditions for a ceasefire. How to maintain the ceasefire itself has to be discussed. How long the ceasefire and the talks would take also have to be discussed.

SKNDF CALLS FOR BOYCOTTING SEOUL ASIAN GAMES

[Text] Pyongyang September 3 (KCNA) -- The Central Committee of the South Korean National Democratic Front sincerely hopes that friends of Asia will decisively boycott the Asian Games with a heart to help the South Korean people who are shedding blood in the fight for independence and democracy, reunification and peace.

The Central Committee of the South Korean National Democratic Front said this is an "appeal to governments, political parties, organizations and sportsmen of Asian countries" which was issued on August 30 in connection with the 10th Asian Games.

The appeal was made public at a press conference in Tokyo on September 1 by its mission in Japan authorized by its Central Committee.

The appeal refers in detail to the fact that with the '86 Asian Games ahead the whole area of South Korea is not in a festive mood but is swept with the "100-day mopping-up campaign" and "special roundup" of the fascist rulers to infringe upon people's human rights and right to existence under the "a class emergency order" in addition to an "emergency alert order" and "emergency duty order".

The appeal goes on: All the grave situation shows that the '86 Asian Games pose a serious political issue. The opening of the Asian Games may be considered as an auspicious event. But in South Korea it is a source of tragedy and trouble for our people. This is our reality and actual situation. South Korea is not fit at all for such games as the Asian Games.

As recognized by the world, South Korea has its nomenclature for form's sake but it is a colony of the United States which has no independence of sovereignty.

In trying to arrange the Asian Games in such a place the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique have an ulterior intention to use the sacred sports games as a lever in propping up the crumbling colonial fascist rule, providing a favourable circumstance for the creation of "two Koreas" and justifying their war policy.

Our people resolutely oppose and reject the opening of the '86 Asian Games in South Korea. To participate in the '86 sports games opposed by our people would result in supporting the U.S. aggressors' military occupation of South Korea and their colonial rule, helping the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist dictatorship and justifying the fascist hooligans' outrages -- detaining, torturing and imprisoning workers, peasants, students and patriotic people of other strata.

The opening of the '86 Asian Games in Seoul will open the way for the splittists to perpetuate the division, build a higher wall in our nation's way of reunification and bring the greater danger of nuclear war to the Asian people. To think all this alone is enough to make one shudder.

Anyone who respects independence, values democracy and loves peace should not come to the '86 Seoul sports games. We ardently hope that governments, political parties, organizations and sports circles of Asian countries will respond to the stand and request of the South Korean people with deep sympathy.

PRC'S QIN JIWEI DEPARTS FOR HOME 3 SEP

[Text] Pyongyang September 3 (KCNA) -- Qin Jiwei, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, commander of the Beijing units of the Chinese People's Liberation Army and Army Corps commander of the former Chinese People's Volunteers, and his group left for home today by train.

They were seen off at Pyongyang railway station by Colonel General of the Korean People's Army Pak Chung-kuk and Chinese ambassador to Korea Zong Kewen.

CPRF DENOUNCES PORT CALL OF U.S. CARRIER

[Text] Pyongyang September 4 (KCNA) -- The Secretariat of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland published its information No 355 Wednesday in denunciation of the call at Pusan port, South Korea, by the U.S. nuclear-powered carrier "Carl Vinson" escorted by destroyers.

The information says: It is very ill-boding that the nuclear-powered carrier "Carl Vinson" entered Pusan port at a time when the South Korean students and people of broad strata are intensifying the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the anti-fascist struggle for democracy around the Asian Games and constitutional amendments.

Now, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique are making a desperate bid to suppress the anti-U.S., anti-fascist action of students and people and their struggle against the Asiad which are rapidly expanding with the Asian Games ahead. But, the situation is taking a turn for the worse.

"Carl Vinson's" portcall at such moment is a sinister move of the U.S. imperialists to encourage the South Korean puppets who are wriggling in the bog, threaten and blackmail the South Korean students and people with armed forces and stage the Asian Games without much trouble at any cost.

With no blackmail by arms can the U.S. imperialists check the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the anti-fascist struggle for democracy in South Korea, the information declares.

SOUTH'S NAVAL EXERCISE DEEMED 'PROVOCATIVE'

[Text] Pyongyang September 4 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique staged another provocative war game called combined naval exercise at Inchon port on September 2, according to a radio report from Seoul.

They staged the exercise bearing a close resemblance to a real war allegedly to cope with someone's "air strikes." This was part of their sabre-rattling for justifying their preparations for a war against the North under the pretext of the Asian Games.

The fascist clique also hoped to hamstring the anti-Asiad struggle of students and people of all strata which is growing in scope with the opening of the new semester by sidetracking the attention of the people with the military racket.

HWANG CHANG-YOP MEETS SOVIET PEACE COMMITTEE

[Text] Pyongyang September 4 (KCNA) -- Hwang Chang-yop, secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea, met and had a friendly talk Wednesday with the delegation of the Soviet Peace Committee headed by its chairman Yuriy Zhukov.

Present on the occasion were Yi Sǫng-ho, vice-chairman of the Committee for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries and vice-chairman of the Korean National Peace Committee, and Boris Morozov, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Soviet Embassy in Pyongyang.

CPRF ON SOUTH KOREAN STUDENT CRACKDOWN

[CPRF Secretariat information No 354]

[Text] According to a news report, on 30 August, the South Korean fascist clique announced the result of an investigation into the National Anti-Imperialist and Antifascist Fighting Committee for Democracy [Minmintu] and the Anti-Imperialist and Antifascist fighting Committee for Independence and Democracy [Chamintu], the anti-imperialist and antifascist fighting organizations of the South Korean students. In this report, the rascals stated that the struggle of students waged in South Korea this year has been manipulated by the Minmintu and the Chamintu, and that lurking behind this struggle is another underground background organization, such as a nation-saving student union.

The South Korean puppet prosecutors' office noted that it has rounded up 180 persons on charges of being involved in these two organizations, has arrested 154 on charges of violating the National Security Law, and has booked 11 without arrest. It further stated that it has expanded a search for 91 persons, including Chong Hyon-tae, who was expelled from Seoul National University.

In particular, the rascals are maneuvering to suppress the struggle of students by unreasonably linking it with us -- saying that the left-leaning line of Minmintu and Chamintu calls for a violent revolution and their anti-U.S. and anti-imperialist slogans calling for the withdrawal of U.S. forces are identical to the strategy of the North. The fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique's attempt to punish the South Korean students under the notorious National Security Law by linking them with us, describing their just struggle as one representing a left-leaning line for a violent revolution, is a piratical act that can convince no one and an outrageous act that could only be committed by hooligans.

As for the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle of students and the people, which has been waged steadily in South Korea, it is not led or instigated by anyone, but is the natural outcome of South Korean society. Because the U.S. imperialists have made slaves of the South Korean people, the South Korean students have risen in the anti-U.S. struggle. They have risen in the antifascist struggle because of traitor Chon Tu-hwan's wicked and fascist suppression of the people.

They have embarked down the road of struggle because, while suffering all manner of misfortunes and disasters under the U.S. imperialists' fascists colonial rule, which has continued for 42 years. They have realized through experiences in their daily lives that the course of the struggle to achieve the people's sovereignty and freedom is the course for the country and the people. The South Korean students' struggle is just resistance against harsh exploitation and oppression; a just struggle which reflects the will and desire of the people, the result of the fascist and colonial rule over South Korea, struggle which they have voluntarily chosen. Nevertheless, the South Korean puppets have cruelly suppressed the patriotic students who have risen in the just struggle by unreasonably linking them with us. This is aimed at suppressing with bayonets and threats the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle, which has recently been stepped up in South Korea, and the struggle to reject the Asian Games.

Overcoming the crisis of the their rule, which has been further deepened with the passage of time; and at hosting the Asian Games at any cost. However, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique cannot overcome the ruling crisis, which has already begun to decline, nor can it safely host the Asian Games as it wishes.

The South Korean puppet clique should immediately release students and people whom it has unjustly arrested and imprisoned and should step down from the seat of power without delay.

Pyongyang, 1 September 1986

SECURITY AGENCY ARRESTS DPRK-DIRECTED SPIES

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 4 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's agency for national security planning announced Thursday that it has cracked down on a seven-member North Korea-directed spy ring led by a Seoul National University (SNU) professor.

They are Yi Pyong-sol, 48, a geography professor of the university's teacher's college: Yu Sang-tok, 37, secretary general of a teachers' council for democratic education: Yim Sok-hoe, 27, an assistant lecturer at SNU's Social Science College: and Chong In-hak, 33, a newspaper reporter. So In-su, another ring member, was referred to the prosecution without physical detention, and the remaining two were released after admonishment, since they showed repentance for their espionage activities, according to the agency's announcement.

After he was won over to the communist cause, Yi, the leader of the spy ring, joined the (communist) Workers Party of North Korea in February 1976 while working on a doctoral degree at Tokyo University. After returning to South Korea with substantial funds for espionage activities and a code book, Yi organized four underground cells, recruiting left-wing students, teachers and workers.

Yi, who vowed to dedicate himself to the communization of the South and who sent letters to North Korean chieftain Kim Il-song and his heir apparent-son, Chong-il, pledging his loyalty to them, visited Japan on five different occasions from August 1980 through February this year and reported his espionage activities to North Korean spies operating in Japan. Yi gave them military and social information collected by the four underground cells under his control and 215 Korean maps drawn on a scale of 1 to 50,000.

Yim, who was brainwashed by Yi while being a geography class student of Seoul National University, recruited sympathizers among garment workers associated with the Chonggye Labor Union in Seoul. After joining the Army, Yim collected military information and gave it to Yi. Yim was preparing for advanced study in Japan when he was apprehended, according to the agency announcement.

The agency confiscated from the spy ring 222 items of espionage equipment, including a code book, letters celebrating the birthdays of the two Kims and pledging loyalty to them and memorandums containing military and social information to be reported to North Korea.

The crackdown of the spy ring should serve as a warning against the North's malicious scheme to utilize Seoul National University as a strategic base for the communist revolution in the South, the announcement said.

POLICE CLASH WITH STUDENTS PROTESTING ASIAN GAMES

[Text] Seoul, Sept 4 (AFP) -- Several hundred riot police and an estimated 400 students opposed to the opening of the Asian Games clashed for about two hours Thursday at a Seoul university campus, eyewitnesses said.

Police stormed the campus and fired barrages of tear gas bombs in an attempt to break up the rally at Yonsei University, they added. The anti-government students fought back by throwing petrol bombs and stones at police for about two hours before dispersing, the eyewitnesses said. A student leader told reporters that the protesters opposed the Asian Games, which open in Seoul Sept. 20.

President Chon Tun-hwan is trying to enhance his international image by hosting the event, while poor people were being driven out of the capital, the student leader said. Another student leader said the demonstrators opposed the games because they have heightened tensions on the Korean peninsula, instead of lessening them, because of North Korea's boycott.

Similar anti-Asiad demonstrations were also crushed by riot police at the campus of Korea University in Seoul Wednesday.

A pro-government newspaper here reported meanwhile that anti-government student activists were planning to stage demonstrations near stadiums and gymnasiums during the Asian Games so that foreign athletes would be affected by tear gas. The newspaper said that the authorities would deal severely with the activists by treating the anti-Asiad campaign as an act helpful to North Korea since Pyongyang was trying to obstruct the Seoul Asian Games.

Police, meanwhile, have declared the road to Kwan-ak Mountain near the campus of Seoul National University off-limits because it passes near the university gymnasium where the Asiad table-tennis event is to be held.

U.S.-ROK AVIATION TALKS END WITHOUT AGREEMENT

SK290902 Seoul YONHAP in English 0853 GMT 29 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 29 (YONHAP) -- The United States and South Korea ended three days of aviation talks here on Friday without reaching agreement on pending bilateral aviation issues, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Friday.

The two sides failed to narrow their basic differences, leaving pending issues to future negotiations. They agreed only to continue to make common efforts to promote bilateral cooperation in the field of aviation, the spokesman added.

Korean and U.S. officials discussed the matter of implementing the 1980 memorandum of understanding (MOU) on civil aviation between their two countries. In aviation talks held in April 1980, Korea and the Unitred States agreed to give Korean Air (KAL) the right to fly to three U.S. cities and to continue on to Europe from one U.S. city. Under the agreement, in exchange for opening three U.S. airports to Korean Air, a U.S. carrier would be allowed to build and operate a cargo terminal at Kimpo International Airport. The U.S. firm, Flying Tiger, has not yet built the terminal, however.

Korean and U.S. aviation officials exchanged the MOU at a meeting in Washington, D.C., in 1980, but the memorandum has not yet been implemented.

The Korean side, headed by Yi Tong-ik, director general of the Foreign Ministry's Economic Affairs Bureau, demanded that the problems of opening three U.S. cities to Korean Air and the use of the cargo terminal by U.S. carriers should be at the same time. [sentence as received]. The U.S. side, however, maintained that the matter of allowing U.S. carriers to use cargo terminal at Kimpo should be taken up first.

Charles Angevine, the State Department's special negotiator for transportation affairs, led the U.S. delegation.

The two sides agreed to set a date for the next meeting through diplomatic channels.

DJP CHAIRMAN RULES OUT MEETING WITH KIM TAE-CHUNG

[Text] Pusan, Korea, Sept. 3 (YONHAP) -- No Tae-u, chairman of Korea's ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), said Wednesday that the DJP plans to conclude discussions about revision of the Constitution by the end of this year's three-month regular National Assembly, which is scheduled to open on Sept. 20.

He said that the DJP cannot accept the opposition's demand that the National Assembly's special constitutional revision committee wrap up its activities before the regular assembly opens.

The opposition New Korea Democartic Party's (NKDP's) assertion that it will not attend the constitutional revision comittee session after Sept. 20 can only be interpreted as meaning that it does not intend to work on revising the Constitution through compromise between the ruling and opposition parties, he said.

No came to this southern port city to inspect the DJP's provincial chapters.

The DJP chairman said that the operations of the special committee should be normalized at an early date in order to achieve constitutional revision. The committee's operations have been in the doldrums, due to conflicting views on how to broadcast the committee's public hearings. The NKDP insists that the sessions should be broadcast live via television, while the DJP opposes live coverage. No said he has crdered the DJP floor leader, Yi Han-tong, to settle the issue on the basis of common sense but that the matter of how to cover the hearing sessions should be decided by the broadcasting companies themselves.

The DJP chairman also said he would be willing to meet with NKDP President Yi Min-u, whenever necessary, but he ruled out the possibility of a meeting with opposition leader Kim Tae-chung. Kim has been banned by law from engaging in politics, he noted.

No said that the opposition's proposal for a meeting involving himself, President Chon Tu-hwan, Kin Tae-chung and Kim Yong-sam, another prominent opposition leader, was made to fuel "political propaganda."

Regarding the operation of the National Assembly, No said that it would be desirable to adjourn the house session during the Asian Games, slated for Sept. 20 to Oct. 5, after officially opening the assembly on Sept. 20.

Phnom Penh Meeting

BK021347 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1115 GMT 2 Sep 86

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK September 2 -- A solemn meeting was held in Phnom Penh Monday to mark the 41st anniversary of Vietnam's August revolution (August 19) and National Day (September 2).

Present at the meeting sponsored by the Phnom Penh committee of the Peoples Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea, among others, were Chea Soth, Politburo member of the P.R.P.K. Central Committee, vice premier and minister of planning; Nguon Nhel, candidate Politburo member of the party Central Committee and secretary of the Phnom Penh party committee; Thong Khon, candidate member of the party Central Committee and mayor of Phnom Penh.

Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien and members of the diplomatic corps were also on hand.

Taking the floor, Nguon Nhel praised the victory of the August Revolution that liberated the Vietnamese people from French colonialism and Japanese militarism, thus giving rise to the Democratic Republic of Vietnam on September 2, 1945 -- the first workers-and-peasants state in Southeast Asia.

He went on: "The victory of the August revolution is of historic significance. It has exerted a great impact on the struggle of the peoples of Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos and on the revolutionary movement in colonial and semi-colonial countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America."

The speaker recalled the resolute struggle of the Vietnamese people and Armed Forces for independence, freedom and national reunification as well as for building and defending their socialist fatherland.

Nguon Nhel thanked the party, the government, and the people of Vietnam for their wholehearted assistance in the spirit of proletarian internationalism to the Kampuchean people in overthrowing the genocidal regime of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan and in the latter's national defence and construction.

Nguon Nhel affirmed that the all-round development in Kampuchea in general and in the city of Phnom Penh in particular is inseparable from the assistance of the fraternal socialist countries, especially Vietnam. He stressed that the Kampuchean people would do their best to maintain and strengthen the militant solidarity and multiform cooperation among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

The next speaker was Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien, who said that along the path opened up by the August revolution, the Vietnamese people, in close cooperation with the fraternal Kampuchean and Lao peoples, conducted a hard but courageous struggle against the brutal forces of colonialism, imperialism and expansionism-hegemonism. Finally, this struggle has resulted in the complete freedom and national reunification of Vietnam as well as the consolidation of the Vietnam-Kampuchea-Laos alliance in Southeast Asian region under the banner of national independence and socialism.

"It is the eighth time that we have celebrated with our Kampuchean comrades, brothers and sisters the anniversaries of the August revolution and the National Day of Vietnam, in the beautiful city of Phnom Penh. We are very happy to note that each passing year has been marked with the steady advance of the revolution in each of our two countries, and with the constant consolidation of the militant solidarity and special friendship between our two people."

After hailing the militant solidarity and special friendship between Vietnam and Kampuchea as well as among the three fraternal Indochinese countries as an important factor for each success of the Vietnamese peoples, Ngo Dien said:

"On the dash [as received] of their successes, the three Indochinese countries have time and again advanced their good-will proposals with a view to putting an end to the state of confrontation in the Kampuchea question and re-establishing peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The recent communique of the 13th conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers, has once again put into light the sharp contrast between the stance of good-will and justice taken [by] the three Indochinese countries and the unjust and absurd one of the reactionary forces.

Victims of long and bloody wars in Southeast Asia, the Kampuchean people have no other aspirations than peace, independence and freedom. That is why we have tirelessly struggled to make Southeast Asia a zone of peace, friendship and cooperation and to contribute to making the Asia-Pacific region a zone of peace, security and cooperation.

The statement, made by Comrade M. Gorbachev, general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, illustrates a vast programme full of realistic and concrete initiatives, which covers all the big problems of the Asia-Pacific region.

It has clearly demonstrated the Soviet Union's goodwill which conforms to aspirations and interests of the peoples in the region, including our two peoples. Fully aware of our responsibility and historic mission, we pledge to closely coordinate our actions with the Soviet Union in contributing to achieving these noble objectives, underlined Ngo Dien.

PRACHEACHON Editorial

[PRACHEACHON editorial: "The Brilliant Revolutionary Cause of the Vietnamese People" -- no date given]

The victory of the August revolution has totally changed the Vietnamese nation's fate and simultaneously opened a new era of independence, freedom, and socialism. Thanks to the victory of the August uprising, 2 September 1945 came about. It was the day when President Ho Chi Minh read the Declaration of Independence announcing the founding of the first worker-peasant state in Southeast Asia. This historic and contemporary victory has shaken the roots of the world's colonialist system and become a source of encouragement for the oppresed nations and working people in the world to be more confident in their national liberation path.

The victory of the August revolution and the birth of the SRV as the outcome of the valiant and courageous struggle waged by the heroic Vietnamese people to seize the right to master their own destiny, as well as brilliant achievement of the wise leadership of the genuine Marxist-Leninist party and the great President Ho Chi Minh.

The past 41 years were the years marked by brilliant victories and the era of brilliant development unprecedented in the long history of the Vietnamese people. While expanding the spirit of the August revolution and upholding the spirit of revolutionary heroism and President Ho Chi Minh's immortal ideal that nothing is more valuable than independence and freedom, the heroic Vietnamese people have vanquished all obstacles, surmounted major difficulties, and advanced toward seizing one victory after another, from the victory over the Japanese fascists, French colonialists, and U.S. imperialists to the victory in the northern and southwestern frontiers, thus firmly defending the achievements of the August Revolution and their beloved fatherland and fulfilling their noble internationalist duties for their fraternal peoples of Cambodia and Laos.

During the past 41 years, with the vigorous, valuable, and effective support and assistance of the Soviet Union as well as the support and assistance of the fraternal socialist countries and the progressive, democratic, and peace-loving forces in the world, the SRV has achieved vigorous development in all fields.

At present, the Vietnamese people are striving to implement the two strategic tasks set forth by the fifth party congress, that is to successfully build socialism and firmly defend the socialist fatherland with an aim of realizing the four major goals in economic and social fields during the 1980s.

From the Fifth CPV Congress to date, the socialist revolution's line has developed and achieved new, continuous changes. The most outstanding advance in the economic field concerns foodstuffs. The industrial production has advanced and the socialist reformation throughout the country has been greatly stimulated, strengthened, and expanded. The material foundations of socialism have increased to a greater extent. During the past 5 years, nearly 300 large installations and thousands of medium-sized and small installations have been built, thus enabling the national economic establishlments to provide various needed products to society. The price of immobile objects of the material production region in 1985 increased almost two-fold compared with 1980. Culture, education, and health work has developed constantly. National defense and social security have been ensured. Despite some remaining difficulties, the people's material and mental life has been gradually improved and is becoming more and more stable.

Another outstanding point is that the 8th, 9th, and 10th party Central Committee sessions had, in detail, improved the measures for socioeconomic development and defined stage by stage the fundamental ideals regarding the changes of economic control and the grass-roots elimination of the system of rank and bureaucratism to be replaced by the thinking and carrying out of economic development and socialist exploitation on the basis of using plans as its core. This change is bringing about new results in the production and occupation and has become a mobile force for vigorously stimulating the working people to expand their right as masters of the collective even more broadly. This is a major, strategic change in the economic control order aimed at increasing the production, stabilizing the livelihood, and promoting the socialist reform, thus creating the material and technical foundation of socialism and strengthening the national defense and security.

The entire party, army, and people of Vietnam are resolutely making every effort to contribute to national defense and construction by implementing all socioeconomic targets set forth by the fifth party congress in preparation for the sixth party congress to be held at the end of this year.

During the past 41 years, the hostile forces have sought every means to weaken and topple Vietnam. The SRV's prestige has risen highly in the international arena.

The great achievements that our party, army, and people have made during the past nearly 8 years are attributable to the sincere and valuable assistance of the party, government, and people of Vietnam. The assistance has greatly contributed to the constant development of the Cambodian revolution's position of strength.

While marking the 41st anniversary of the victory of the August Revolution and the 2 September national day of the Vietnamese people, our people warmly welcome the great achievements made by the fraternal Vietnamese people, regarding them as our own achievements. We are very happy with the continuous development of the Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos militant solidarity. The splendid success of the recent foreign ministerial conference of the three Indochinese countries is remarkable proof of the unshakable solidarity and unity of the three fraternal countries. The three Indochinese countries have become an active factor for deciding the problems of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The goodwill proposal of the foreign ministerial conference of the three Indochinese countries constitutes an important contribution to the cause of peace and stability in this region.

Pursuing the spirit of the August Revolution and learning from the lively and valuable experiences of the CPV, our entire party, army, and people pledge to enhance their revolutionary will, expand their sense of self-assistance, and strive to seize greater victories in the cause of defending and building our beautiful Cambodian fatherland.

He stressed that this gesture of the Cambodian party and government will contribute to further strengthening and consolidating Cambodian-Vietnamese friendship, solidarity, and all-round cooperation, which is a decisive factor for the development and progress of the Cambodian revolution as well as for its victories over U.S. imperialism, Chinese expansionism-hegemonism, and international reaction of all colors.

Editorial on SRV National Day

[Editorial: "41 Years of Invincible Revolution of the Heroic Vietnamese People"]

[Text] Today, 2 September, marks the 41st anniversary of the establishment of the SRV. Forty-one years ago, after the great victory of the August revolution in Vietnam, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, the first worker-peasant state in Southeast Asia, was established on 2 September 1945. This establishment was magnificently announced by great President Ho Chi Minh in Ba Dinh Square. This historic day has become a festival of great historical significance for the Vietnamese nation. It opened up the way for the glorious fulfillment of the revolution in each period and the complete success of the national liberation in 1975.

During the past 41 years, though the U.S. imperialists, colonialists, neocolonialists, and international reactionaries have launched all-round, continuous attacks against Vietnam -- in the political, military, and economic spheres -- and have daily launched propaganda campaigns against the SRV, with the view of sabotaging the SRV's development and undermining the special solidarity and all-round cooperation between Laos and Vietnam, as well as among Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia and the cooperation between the three Indochinese countries and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, under the beacon of glorious Marxism-Leninism, the CPV, inheriting the precious cause of the Indochinese Communist Party founded by President Ho Chi Minh, an outstanding revolutionary of the working class, has led the country to surmount all sabotage activities of the external enemy and won glorious successes in firmly defending the country. At the same time, it has led the entire Vietnamese people to win great successes in economic, cultural, scientific, technical, and other development, thus ceaselessly improving the living conditions of the fraternal Vietnamese people and enabling the socialist Vietnamese fatherland to firmly advance.

The great, multi-faceted success of the Vietnamese revolution in the past 41 years have freed the Vietnamese people from being slaves of foreign imperialism and raised Vietnam's status and prestige in the international arena. The great achievements and victories recorded by the Vietnamese people under the correct, wise, and clear-sighted leadership of the CPV -- the unification of the fatherland and the advance toward socialist construction -- and the fulfillment of their lofty internationalist cause in supporting the Lao revolution and helping the fraternal Cambodian people escape the hellish fire of genocide imposed by the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique -- all these are the fraternal Vietnamese people's positive contributions to the defense of peace and stability in this region and in the world and to consolidating and strengthening the might of the world socialist system. As a result, the Vietnamese people have won the love and sincere respect of all progressive mankind.

Implementing the resolution of the Fifth CPV Congress, the Vietnamese people are advancing with greater confidence than ever before and have recorded successes in many respects, such as in national defense and socialist construction.

During the past 5 years, despite constant threats of natural disaster and regular sabotage activities carried out by the enemy, the SRV's economic foundation has achieved an important level of development, the most outstanding of which is in the sphere of food supplies.

For example, Vietnam produced only 14.4 million metric tons in 1980. In 1985, the production output increased to as much as 18.2 million metric tons. Meanwhile, industrial production has also achieved new levels of devlopment. On the average, an annual increase of 13 percent has been recorded since 1980. The most outstanding examples are in the production of electricity, textiles, paper, cement, electric appliances, spare parts, chemicals, and so forth.

Material and technical bases have also developed satisfactorily. In the past 5 years about 300 major construction projects and thousands of medium and small projects have been built and completed, thus incessantly increasing the strength of the national economy. In addition, the Vietnamese people's living conditions have been improved in all respects, and educational, publich health, cultural, and social work has developed.

As a close companion in arms of the faternal Vietnamese people, the Lao people of all ethnic minority groups wish to wholeheartedly hail the glorious successes and victories recorded by the fraternal Vietnamese people and regard them as their won.

Loyal to the incomparable [ha gnang ma piap bo dia] friendship between the two nations of Laos and Vietnam, the Lao people, under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the LPRP led by Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, have always been educated and trained on the profound importance of the life and death characteristics of the special relations between Laos and Vietnam as well as among Laos, Vietnam, and Combodia and with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. The Lao people will promote and develop such relations so that they grow and last forever.

On this glorious occasion, the Lao people express sincere and deep gratitude to the CPV led by Comrade General Secretary Truong Chinh. We express gratitude to the government and fraternal people of Vietnam for their great and lofty deeds for the Lao revolution. Meanwhile, in the spirit of sincere friends sharing the same trench, the Lao people wish to unswervingly affirm their resolute determination to uphold the spirit of the special solidarity between Laos and Vietnam as well as among Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia so as to develop in depth the all-round cooperation among the three fraternal Indochinese countries.

On this occasion, the Lao people of all ethnic monority groups once again wish the faternal Vietnamese people, under the wise and clear-sighted leadership of the CPV led by Comrade Truong Chinh, new and greater success in implementing the resolutions of the Fifth Congress and in gloriously fulfilling the 1986 plan in order to salute the forthcoming Sixth CPV Congress, for the revolutionary cause and for progress in the task of defending and building socialist Vietnam.

Long live the special solidarity, all-round cooperation, and close militant alliance between Laos and Vietmam and among Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia!

[Text] Vientiane, August 27 (KPL) -- "Now some economic sectors such as the electricity, cigarette, beer and soft drink and industrial wood enterprises are on the way of getting their autonomy in production," said Maisouk Saisompheng, minister of industry and handicraft.

The industrial wood comapny has started with this wage system since the beginning of this month.

Now the reexamination of production plan, the reestablishment of funds for the normal functioning of enterprises, the measures on the uses of materials, equipment and work force are being applied in other enterprises in preparation for their autonomy in production in October 1986.

After the congress was opened, the deputy commander of the Air Force read the draft political report to be submitted by the party Central Committee to the coming Fourth LPRP Congress. The congress ended as a success on the evening of the same day.

U.S., SRV HOLD FIRST DIRECT TALKS ON AMERASIANS

[By Laurent Maillard]

[Text] Hanoi, Sept 3 (AFP) -- The first direct talks between Washington and Hanoi on the issue of Amerasian children born to U.S. servicemen during the Vietnam war were "positive," the head of the U.S. delegation said Wednesday.

Bruce Beardsley, who heads the Orderly Departure Program (ODP) office in Bangkok, said the talks held in Hanoi Monday and Tuesday had allowed for "better mutual understanding."

Until now, U.N. high Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) served as mediator between Washington and Hanoi in helping arrange for children born of Vietnamese mothers and U.S. fathers to be sent to the United States.

Some 3,500 Amerasians have left Vietnam under the ODP, set up in 1979, according to official Vietnamese figures.

Mr. Beardsley said the U.S. delegation had received "encouraging signs" from the Vietnamese side during the talks. "We hope that the process of solving the Amerasian problem will accelerate," he said without elaborating.

According to reliable sources, Vietnamese officials supplied the U.S. delegation for the first time with a list of 1,000 Amerasian children eligible to go to the United States. Some 10,000 to 15,000 "war children" are believed to be living in the south, particularly in Ho Chi Minh City, sources say.

Hanoi has insisted that the Amerasian cases be treated separately from those of other Vietnamese seeking to leave the country. Vietnam has also consistently maintained that the Amerasian issue should be settled directly between Hanoi and Washington, like the question of U.S. servicemen still listed as missing in action in the Vietnam war.

A Western diplomat said Wednesday that the Amerasian talks held this week without a U.N. intermediary marked a "significant evolution of U.S. policy."

Hanoi reported the talks Monday with exceptional speed, just hours after the first session was held. "The Amerasian question is a humanitarian one which must be given priority," the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry said in a statement. The statement added that Vietnam was "ready to cooperate with the United States," which had the "principal responsibility" for solving the problem.

The rapid announcement by Hanoi was seen by observers here as a sign that Vietnam was encouraged by the U.S. decision to open talks on the American question.

The first direct talks on the Amerasian issue were held within the context of the UNHCR-mediated discussions on general Vietnamese emigration. Mr. Beardsley said these talks had centered on clearing a backlog of some 15,000 Vietnamese awaiting visas to allow them to go to the United States after being interviewed by U.S. officials.

Hanoi suspended interviews with candidates for emigration at the beginning of the year until the backlog is cleared.

Mr. Beardsley said he was optimistic that the problem could be worked out. He pointed out that almost 10,000 causes had been resolved in the space of just a few months and said interviews could be resumed "in the near future." He also said the U.S. side had raised the issue of special cases: People who the United States has expressed an interest in accepting but to whom Vietnam has declined to grant exit visas.

Among 30,000 people on this "special list" are some 7,000 who had links to the former South Vietnamese Government and are still held in re-education camps, sources say.

Mr. Beardsley declined to reveal Hanoi's response to the special-case issue. But according to reliable sources here the Vietnamese side reiterated that sending "special list" cases to the United States was out of the question.

Charles-Henry Bazoche, the UNHCR representative in Hanoi, said he was "very satisfied" with the talks on general emigration, which followed meetings held in Bangkok in December and March. He also welcomed the direct talks on the Amerasian question.

The U.S. delegation is scheduled to leave Hanoi for Bangkok Wednesday after a one-week stay in Vietnam.

Meanwhile, UNHCR statistics released Wednesday showed 1,173 Vietnamese had left their country in August under the ODP, the lowest monthly figure since February 1983. Observers said the number reflected a continuing drop in the number of legal refugees over the past 18 months. If the trend continues, experts in Hanoi say, the total number of departures this year could be less than 20,000, compared to about 25,000 in 1985 and nearly 30,000 in 1984.

About half the August refugees went to the United States and nearly 300 to Australia. The remainder headed to Canada and about 10 European countries.

THAI PAPER CITES NGUYEN CO THACH REMARKS ON ASEAN

[Text] Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has said Vietnam eventually wants to join ASEAN and asked member countries not to close the door when the time comes.

Mr Thach invited ASEAN envoys in Hanoi to a dinner last week where he also said Vietnam wanted to solve the Kampuchean conflict, diplomatic sources said. Mr Thach said Hanoi wants a political solution to the eight-year conflict through talks with ASEAN.

The ASEAN countries with envoys in Hanoi are Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines.

The statement by Mr Thach follows the new Soviet policy statement for the Asia-Pacific region.

The seemingly conciliatory statement contradicts comments by Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusmaatmaja who said last week that the Vietnamese were more hard-line than before.

Mr Mokhtar said Vietnam considered the Khmer peace proposal as amounting to capitulation.

NEW ZEALAND

NUCLEAR BILL THREATENS UK MILITARY TIES

HK010621 Wellington THE EVENING POST in English 28 Aug 86 p 25

["Arms Control Bill Report" by Defense Reporter Roger Mackey: "Nuke Bill threatens New Zealand's British Links"]

[Text] If the nuclear weapons Bill is passed in its existing form, New Zealand risks cutting its only remaining military link with a major power, the United Kingdom.

New Zealand's military ties with the UK are still extensive and, in some cases, essential to the operation of New Zealand forces.

Defense co-operation between the two countries has, in the recent past, covered a full range from training to equipment.

As part of their response to New Zealand's port ban on nuclear capable ships the British have already cut their plans for port visits in New Zealand and any exercises with New Zealand ships that might have arisen from them.

This response covers that part of the New Zealand Nuclear Free Zone, Disarmament and Arms Control Bill which would make the current port ban part of New Zealand law.

In response to the port ban the US cut its exercises, training ties, technicial backup and intelligence supply arrangements with New Zealand. So far the British have only cut their bilateral exercises with the New Zealand Navy.

However another part of the Nuclear Free Zone Bill has the potential to seriously affect the remainder of the British-New Zealand military ties.

This part of the Bill is contained in clause 5 which deals with the "prohibition on aquisition of nuclear explosive devices."

The critical part of this clause, as the British see it, is part two.

This states that "no person, who is a New Zealand citizen or a person ordinarly resident in New Zealand, and who is a servant or agent of the Crown, shall, beyond the New Zealand Nuclear Free Zone".

(a) manufacture, acquire or possess, or have control over any nuclear explosive device; or

(b) aid, assist, or abet any person to manufacture, acquire, possess, or have control over any nuclear explosive device.

The difficulties arise because of the "aid, assist or abet any person..." segment.

Under a strict interpretation this part of the Bill could mean any New Zealand service people exercising with, training with, or even observing the British Forces -- Britain as a nuclear power -- would be liable to prosecution under New Zealand law.

This is less a British concern than is the precedent, as in the port ban, of an ally placing conditions on its involvement with British Forces.

As a nuclear power the British feel, like the U.S. that to divide off portions of its Forces into conventional and nuclear parts would be a dangerous precedent.

The New Zealand Bill which contains the clause objected to by the British is before a Parliamentary select committee.

The committee is expected to report back to the House early next month after the Parliamentary recess ends.

There is a possibility the clause that concerns the British will be modified or dropped completely by the select committee.

The Government has already indicated to the British the port ban provision will not be modified. The earlier clause dealing with the provision to "aid, assist or abet any person..." is not crucial to the port ban. It may, as a result, be considered expendable as some form of concession to a friendly government.

It is also understood it was never the intention for the antinuclear legislation to apply to New Zealand service people exercising or training with allies such as the British. The possible applications of the legislation in this respect were pointed out to New Zealand by the British themselves.

However, if, as many of the anti-Anzus and anti-nuclear groups are suggesting, the Bill is not modified or is toughened up the effect on New Zealand's Armed Forces could be critical.

Last financial year 106 New Zealand service people took part in more than 60 visits to the UK for individual training. This represented more than a quarter of all the individual training conducted by the New Zealand Armed Forces outside this country. The bulk of the training visits were done in Australia.

This excluded the still substantial numbers of personnel involved in exercises with the British.

Among these are in annual exercise involving a mortar detachment and machine gunners in Hong Kong, an SAS [Special Air Service] training exchange and Operation Long Look, Sea Surge and Airwave which allow 50 New Zealand service people to spend four months on exchange with their British counterparts and vice versa.

A similar but separate operation called Eternal Triangle allows the Army to send soldiers to the British Army in West Germany for three months.

A British Army infantry company from Hong Kong visits this country for training, and often takes part in the annual territorial exercise held early in the New Year.

At another level of co-operation is the military hardware on which parts of the New Zealand Armed Forces depend.

In terms of equipment the Air Force is almost wholly dependent on U.S. suppliers. The only two British-sourced aircraft are the Strikemaster trainer and the Andover Transport.

The Army's only major pieces of British-sourced equipment are the Scorpion light reconnaisance vehicle and the new Landrovers. Although British designed, the new light artillery will come from Australia.

However, the Navy, with four British built frigates and Wasp helicopters, is almost totally dependent on the British for spare parts.

These ties, then, give the British a wide range of options to take if the Nuclear Free Zone Bill is passed in its existing form.

One option would be to eliminate or cut all training and exchange visits that involve contact with British Forces. This could involve such contacts as attendance by senior New Zealand officers at the Royal College of Defence Studies, non-commissioned technicians studying the intricacies of helicopter maintenance and Navy divers furthering their training with their British counterparts.

Parts of the British-New Zealand military connection could be placed in a reservce category for safety and commercial reasons.

Courses or contact that contributed to the safe operation of New Zealand eqipment might be exempted, as would those parts of the military relationship between the two countries that were of commercial benefit to the U.K. Among the latter might be the provision of spare parts.

If these exceptions were not made, the effect, particularly on the Navy, would be critical. To get around such restrictions and order specially made spare parts from elsewhere would be extremely expensive.

Even if the British did not go to these lengths and concentrated their response on training programmes, the effect on the New Zealand Forces could be severe.

Although co-operation between U.S. Forces and all three New Zealand services has been very important the main value of this co-operation -- apart from the Air Force -- has been in joint exercises, intelligence and supply back-up.

In terms of training and the way in which the Forces have been run the British connection -- especially in the Army and Navy -- has been just as important.

The New Zealand Army, for example, has a long historical association with its British counterpart.

This translates into many similarities in organization and training. This, is turn, makes it comparatively easy for New Zealand soldiers to slot into training and exchange positions with their much more technically sophisticated British counterparts.

In most cases such co-operation could not be replaced simply by stepping up our already extensive contact with the Australians.

At this stage it is not expected New Zealand contact with British Forces under the Five Power Defence Arrangements with Malaysia, Singapore and Australia would be affected by the legislation.

LANGE GIVES PLANS FOR FRENCH COMPENSATION

[Text] Wellington, Sep 2 (AFP) -- Some of the money France paid New Zealand in compensation for the bombing of the Rainbow Warrior is to be used to improve monitoring of French muclear tests in the South Pacific, New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange said here Tuesday.

Mr. Lange said in a written statement 12,000 U.S. dollars would be used to upgrade New Zealand's seismological monitoring facility at Rarotonga. The station produces seismological data used to determine the strength of French nuclear bomb tests at Mururoa Atoll.

"The upgrading will provide a more rapid transmission to Wellington of data captured by the recording devices," Mr. Lange said.

Paris paid Wellington 6.5 million dollars is compensation for the bombing by French secret agents of the Greenpeace ecological organization's flagship in New Zealand in July last year. The ship, the Rainbow Warrior, was to have led a an anti-nuclear protest flotilla to Mururoa Atoll. In exchange New Zealand handed over to France two agents jailed for 10 years of the manslaughter of a Rainbow Warrior crewman killed in the attack.

On Thursday the New Zealand Government said 60,000 dollars from the compensation fund would be spent in studying "the implications for New Zealand of nuclear war in the northern hemisphere." This study may be followed by the development of contingency plans for nuclear war, using another 250,000 from the fund, Mr. Lange said on Thursday.

[Excerpts] Peace be upon you! We thank Almighty God because tomorrow we can again greet the 29th National Day together. We also thank Almighty God because we can gree this national day in a peaceful situation. Tomorrow will be exactly 29 years since independence was proclaimed at the Merdeka Stadium; we have successfully held seven general elections since then. Generally speaking, in the last few elections this country's people have chosen a government with a majority vote in order to have a stable administration. We thank Almighty God once again because the people in this country have given the government their mandate at the general elections earlier this month. This removed doubts among the people that the government could never gain a majority. On behalf of the Barisan Nasional leaders, I would like to extend the highest appreciation to the voters who voted for Barisan Nasional to run this beloved country. [passage omitted]

Ladies and gentlemen, the resoluteness of a nation can be projected in various ways -- the government's resoluteness in international issues, in making decisions and implementing them; the resoluteness of public and private institutions in conducting their own business, and also the people's resoluteness in making progress and attaining prosperity.

Our resoluteness, reflected in the theme of this national day, will probably be easier to understand if we cite our country's stand on several international issues. We are resolute in facing the apartheid policy in South Africa, the issue of Antarctica, and the Palestinian issue. All these reflect our resolute posture. However, our resoluteness will be more meaningful if each person in this country also proves his resoluteness in coping with the task of improving himself and the country. One of the qualities of being resolute that we have cultivate is that we must be bold and project our national identity through our culture and development programs. Let us not use foreign values as a yardstick of our successes. Let us not use the freedom of the press, which supposedly exists in foreign countries, as a yardstick for judging our local mass media. Let us not give prominence to practices which have caused restlessness in their country of origin and attribute it as a sign of modernization in our country. Let us not discriminate in enforcing our laws because of the different complexion of the offenders. Let us not believe that all foreign concepts, especially Western ones, are good and worthy of imitation; that would produce an inferiority complex among us. This would mean we are lacking resoluteness.

The government's resoluteness should be evident in at least three areas; namely, in its formulation of policies, in solving problems, and in the implementation of development policies and programs. For instance, the government has up to now formulated the concepts of Malaysia Incorporated, privatization, Look East Policy, heavy industries program, state agriculture policy, and others.

Despite cynical and unconstructive criticism, the government's stand remains unchanged because we believe that it is essential to continue these useful policies. In the long run, the government's resoluteness has gained the support of the majority of the people. Had the government been irresolute and hesitant in pursuing its policies, the people would have lost confidence in it. Therefore, the government will continue to pursue policies beneficial to the country after receiving a new mandate and blessings from the people through the recent general elections. This does not mean, however, that any policy formulated at any given time will be carried out forever without consideration for present realities. We must be fearless in amending and modifying any of our policies if such amendment is necessary for our country's short or long-term goals. Our readiness to make necessary changes should be regarded as our resoluteness in coping with a changing situation. Resoluteness does not mean a rigid and inflexible view in total disregard of a changing situation. [passage omitted]

We should never let ourselves be influenced by those who work for selfish and chauvinistic interests and make us ignore national unity. Our resoluteness must see to it that the interests of any nationality will not transcend our national interests. We create slogans because they can guide us to realization of any ideals. The same is true with this year's slogan -- a resolute society, a strong nation. But those with political ambitions like to see us fail in our undertakings. That is why they have tried to shake our confidence by spreading various rumors about the government's sincerity toward its slogans; in particular, they have tried to prove that some government leaders do not put our slogans into practice. The truth does not discourage them from further spreading these rumors. Their true intention is to make the people reject the slogans, disrupt the government's efforts, and take advantage of the uncertain situation. If we want to benefit from such slogans, we must be aware of the activities of these people and pay no attention to them.

God willing, we will become better people and make our country more prosperous. Our attitude will also reflect our resoluteness. Therefore, please accept and practice this year's slogan -- resolute society will make a strong nation. May God always guide and bless you! Peace be upon you!

NUR MISUARI TO MEET PRESIDENT AQUINO 5 SEP

[By Yasmin Arquiza]

[Text] Maimbung, Philippines, Sep 3 (AFP) -- Nur Misuari, the exiled leader of the Moslem separatist rebellion on Mindanao, revealed Wednesday that he will hold peace talks on Friday with Philippine President Corazon Aquino. Mr Misuari announced the date as he asked 10,000 members and their supporters of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) for their advice on ways to resolve the separatist uprising on Mindanao and other southern islands.

"Give us your guidelines. Give us your mandate so when I meet Mrs Aquino two days from now, that will be the mandate I will convey to her excellency," he told the MNLF congress in this southern town. Mr Misuari, who has been living in exile in the Middle East, said Friday's meeting -- to take place somewhere on Jolo Island -- would be "a meeting of two leaders, and the agenda will be peace."

In Manila, presidential spokesman Alice Villadolid said Mrs Aquino's planned meeting with the MNLF chief would go ahead, but that the details were secret.

The MNLF has waged a 14-year guerrilla campaign for a separate state for the five million Moslems who live in the Philippines, a largely Roman Catholic nation of 54 million. Conservative estimates put the death toll at 60,000. Mr Misuari, who went into self-exile in 1976, said the four-day MNLF congress wanted to tell the world that the Bangsa Moro nation loves peace more than war. "Even as we love peace and hate war, we do not want those saboteurs, warmongers and provocateurs who compel us to love war and hate peace," he said, without elaboration.

At a news conference later, Mr Misuari reiterated his hardline call for a separate Moslem state. The Aquino government, which came to power in February, has offered to grant autonomy to Moslem areas but opposes the dismemberment of the Philippines. "As chairman of the MNLF, my mandate is to pursue the final liberation and independence of the Bangsa Moro republic, composed of the entire Mindanao, Basilan, Sulu, Tawitawi and Palawan," Mr Misuari said.

He said the congress was a consultative assembly from which he requested guidelines for his peace dialogue with Mrs Aquino. Asked if he would be pressing for the seccession of Moslem areas, the MNLF chief replied: "This is not a question of dismemberment. We have never been a part of the Philippines. Our membership is an imposed one." Moslem Mindanao remained mostly free of Christian rule during nearly four centuries of Spanish colonial rule which ended in 1898.

Mr Misuari dismissed as null and void a 1976 agreement signed in Tripoli, Libya, under which then-President Ferdinand Marcos granted limited autonomy to two regions of Mindanao. The Moslem leader said referendums used to create the areas had been rigged. He did not say how he had entered the Philippines from the Middle East, but Mrs Aquino's brother-in-law Agapito Aquino, who helped set up the meeting, told reporters earlier he had come in through the southern sea lanes.

Mr Misuari asserted that the MNLF had 200,000 fully-armed members on the islands of Mindanao and Palawan and that 50,000 members were attending the congress. The militay says the rebellion has waned and puts the armed MNLF force at 5,000. Asked if the MNLF has links with the 17-year-old nationwide communist insurgency, Mr Misuari answered: "No, we don't have any relations at all." The Aquino government is currently holding ceasefire talks with communist representatives.

Aquino, Misuari To Meet in Jolo

[Text] President Aquino will meet Muslim separatist leader Nur Misuari in Jolo, Sulu, tomorrow [5 Aug] to hold preparatory talks on ways to resolve peacefully the 14-year-old Muslim problem in Mindanao. Deputy presidential spokesperson Alice Villadolid told newsmen that the Aquino-Misuari meeting is expected to result in the formulation of guidelines for the peace talks between the government and the Moro National Liberation Front headed by Misuari. Although the meeting has already been set, they do not know the actual time and place. The president is expected to meet today with some Muslim leaders in Malacanang for a final briefing on the Mindanao situation before flying to Jolo tomorrow.

News Blackout Placed on Talks

[Text] Malacanang has clamped a news blackout on the forthcoming peace talks between President Aquino and Muslim separatist leader Nur Misuari because of the breach of confidentiality committed by a newsman covering the palace. Deputy presidential spokesperson Alice Villadolid told the Malacanang press corps that the presidential security group has refused to give any information on the Aquino-Misuari meeting because Victor Agustin of the PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER did not heed a request for newsmen not to divulge the meeting place. Muslim Affairs Minister Candu Muarip told palace reporters after last Thursday's cabinet meeting that the conference will take place this week in Jolo. Villadolid and the president's brother-in-law Agapito (Butz) Aquino, who laid the groundwork for the meeting, subsequently appealed to newsman not to pinpoint the place for security reasons. All Malacanang reporters, except Agustin, honored the request. Their stories said the meeting between the president and the leader of the biggest faction of the Moro National Liberation Front will be held somewhere in Mindanao but Agustin's story identified the meeting place as Jolo.

'Butz' Aquino Arrives in Jolo

HK031525 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 3 Sep 86 p 14

[Text] Zamboanga City -- Agapito "Butz" Aquino, brother-in-law of President Aquino, landed at the Jolo airport at 8 a.m. yesterday to pave the way for the meeting with President Aquino and MNLF Chairman Nur Misuari this week.

Aquino was accompanied by Acting Chairman Norberto Gonzales of the Partido Demokratiko Sosyalista sa Pilipinas [Philippine Democratic Socialist Party], and Abdul Rahman Amin, MNLF liaison officer.

Some 1,000 Jolosanos led by Mayor Amin Kandra Bubakar, Sultan Jamalul Kriam of the Sulu Sultanate, and 150 MNLF rebel leaders wearing red bands welcomed Aquino and his party.

Aquino was taken to the home of Dr Nelsa Amin of the Sulu Public Hospital.

Aquino said that the President is definitely meeting with Misuari in Sulu for a peace dialogue either before or after the second Bangsa Moro Congress which started yesterday at Maimbong, MNLF territory some 50 kilometers south of Jolo.

Aquino did not disclose the exact date and place of the meeting between President Aquino and Misuari for security reasons.

The meeting between the President and Misuari was forged earlier with Misuari during the four days of talks that he had with him in Jeddah last Aug. 20-24, according to Butz Aquino.

He said Misuari agreed to return to Jolo via the southern backdoor for the meeting with the President and to attend the Bangsa Moro congress.

Ustad Garif Jali, chairman of the committee on invitation of the MNLF, said the congress serve as consultation with the masses for Misuari to know their collective stand on whether they support autonomy.

The outcome of the congress will be the basis for Misuari's stand during the peace talks with President Aquino, Jali said.

Likely to Meet Aboard Navy Ship

[By Yasmin Arquiza]

[Text] Manila, Sep 4 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino prepared Thursday for a controversial visit to the war-torn island of Jolo to meet with Moslem rebels in a bid to end their bloody and costly separatist campaign. Mrs Aquino is to meet Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) chief Nur Misuari at the negotiating table Friday, fulfilling her campaign promise to seek a peaceful solution to the Moslem and communist insurgencies. Armed Forces chief Fidel Ramos arrived in Jolo Thursday to see to security preparations. Intelligence officers who asked not to be identified said the Aquino-Misuari meeting was likely to be held aboard a navy ship anchored off the island.

Mr Misuari, a former political science professor in Manila who has been based in the Middle East since the late 1970s, surfaced in Jolo Wednesday, apparently arriving by boat. The talks are expected to center on the MNLF's demand for a separate Moslem state in Mindanao and other southern islands, with Mrs Aquino offering autonomy but reiterating her stand against the dismemberment of the republic. MNLF guerrillas launched a bloody uprising in 1972, vowing to establish a separate state for the now five million Moslems in the Philippines, a largely Roman Catholic nation of 56 million.

While breaking protocol by offering to meet with a rebel, the government nevertheless kept a tight lid on the details, and it took Mr Misuari to confirm the date of the talks upon arrival in Maimbung town on Jolo Wednesday. He told reporters that the meeting, somewhere on Jolo, would be "a meeting of two leaders and the agenda will be peace." In Zamboanga City, the gateway to the Sulu Island group which includes Jolo, the armed forces set up checkpoints around the city to inspect incoming vehicles for firearms, witnesses said.

Agapito Aquino, the president's brother-in-law and special emissary to the Moslems, appeared at a press conference with Mr Misuari and armed MNLF guerrillas in Jolo Wednesday. Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said late Wednesday that he would be accompanying the president to the talks on Friday.

Mr Misuari, who is now consulting with Moslems gathered at a congress in Maimbung, reiterated Wednesday that as leader of the movement he was pledged to "pursue the final liberation and independence of the Bangsa Moro republic," composed of Mindanao, Basilan, Sulu, TawiTawi and Palawan Islands. He added that the Moslem regions have never been a part of the Philippines and that "our membership is an imposed one."

Ironically, the talks will probably take place where one of the most bloody battles of the 14-year-old separatist campaign was fought. Jolo was razed in November 1972 when army troops fought MNLF guerrillas for control f the capital town. In February 1981, Moslem guerrillas killed 124 soldiers on nearby Pata Island, which was subsequently devastated by a retaliatory raid conducted by 15,000 troops.

An estimated 60,000 people have been killed during the insurgency according to official figures. Unofficial estimates put the number of people displaced by the fighting at more than 100,000. The deposed government of Ferdinand Marcos was able to bring the fighting to a temporary halt with a ceasefire agreement in 1976 which created two autonomous Moslem regions. But the lull was soon broken as both sides accused each other of bad faith and violations. Mr Marcos never met with the Moslem rebels in their homeland.

Aquino 'Determined' To Hold Talks

[Excerpts] President Aquino is determined to hold talks with Muslim rebel leader Nur Misuari despite objections from her closest advisers who said she would be breaking protocol if she leaves Manila for the talks, and military officials who believe the trip may place her life in danger.

"But she wants to go and that's it," said Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo who declined to say when and where the meeting with Misuari will take place.

Misuari arrived the other night from his exile in Saudi Arabia and is now in Jolo, Sulu, attending the Bangsa Moro Congress which will formulate the stand of Muslim rebels on the government initiative to end the 14-year secessionist war that has claimed thousands of lives.

Close to 30,00 Muslims are reportedly gathered in Jolo for the congress and many hold diverse views. But the general feeling is for autonomy, not independence, for the minority group.

Arroyo said Mrs Aquino is willing to go to any place "in the pursuit of peace."

"Her view is that she would do anything, go to any length, visit any place, and forget about protocol if this would contribute to achieving peace," Arroyo said.

"When she has done all these things and peace is not achieved, then she can say that she has done her part as well as her best," he said.

Arroyo said Malacanang is aware of criticisms that are being raised on why Mrs Aquino has to go instead of Misuari meeting her in Manila.

Arroyo said that is how Mrs Aquino operates "and there is nothing we can do but to back her up."

He said the military had raised objections about security, "but when she said she would do it and meet Misuari outside of Manila, the military had no choice but to secure the place and provide protection."

Arroyo said nothing substantive is likely to be taken up during the talks, which he expects to be a brief, getting-to-know-you meeting. [passage omitted]

The President's emissary, Agapito "Butz" Aquino, is now in Jolo to meet with Misuari and prepare for the meeting.

Aquino told reporters after he made a brief stopover in Zamboanga city that "there would be no peace in the area if the Muslims insist on independence for its more than 3 million population."

"We want a cessation of hostilities, not secession from the Philippines," he said.

MNLF Factions To Join in Talks

[Text] Two factions of the Moro National Liberation Front will join the Misuari camp in peace negotiations with the government. This new development was revealed by defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile in connection with the talks between President Corazon Aquino and MNLF leader Nur Misuari scheduled for next week. The two factions are headed by Hashim Salamat and Dumas Pundato respectively. [Name indistinct] said the joining together of these factions is a good sign so that the government could ascertain with whom to talk to on the Mindanao issue.

Bangsa Moro Group Discounts Talks

According to Firdausi Abbas, chairman of the Bangsa Moro Islamic Party, Misuari only represents one faction of the Moro National Liberation Front. He added that he suspects Misuari of conspiring with [words indistinct] because they are known as the leftists in the Muslim region.

ENRILE CRITICIZES NDF, DISCUSSES CONDITIONS

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday chided the members of the negotiating panel of the National Democratic Front [NDF] for arrogating upon themselves the right to represent the Filipino people in the ongoing ceasefire talks.

The NDF said it is entering into a ceasefire accord as "a political representative of the Filipino people's revolutionary force," Enrile noted in a dialog with Philippine Air Force Officers at Villamor Air Base.

"The agreement they (NDF) are seeking is supposed to be not with the government of the Philippines, but between the NDF and the 'Republic of the Philippines under President Corazon C. Aquino,' he said.

The implication is that NDF is only recognizing a revolutionary government and not a government of the Philippine Republic, he said.

Enrile also criticized four other conditions to which the NDF negotiators are trying to get the Aquino government to agree.

These are the naming of two mutually acceptable foreign ambassadors to witness the agreement, registration of the agreement with the United Nations, a permanent place for negotiation meeting and security during the meeting.

"On the issue of having two mutually acceptable foreign ambassadors to witness the agreement, I already have a pretty good idea who will be the ambassadors they have in mind," Enrile said. He however did not name them.

On registering the agreement with the UN, Enrile noted that "they (NDF) obviously will not consider this simply as an agreement but as a treaty between the government of the Philippines under Mrs. Aquino and NDF.

"They want a permanent meeting place for the dialog," Enrile added.

But they insisted that aside from the Philippine flag, the communists' flag should be placed also.

Enrile said the NDF wanted a place to house its negotiators and security force which would be bestowed immunity and security status similar to that of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

"What is happening is they want belligerent status," Enrile charged.

They agreed that when the government and NDF negotiators meet in Manila, the Aquino government provides security. The negotiators would meet in other areas to which they (NDF) would provide the security.

"If we agree to that they will bring the negotiating panel to Bicol, Cordillera, Cebu, Davao, to almost everywhere and they will declare these areas as controlled by them," Enrile said.

"What will be left of us? Only Manila and other small poblacion," Enrile said.

Enrile observed that all these conditions are very tricky.

"We should watch out for them," he added.

NDF Lawyers Refute Statement

HK031434 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 3 Sep 86 p 24

[Text] Two lawyers representing the National Democratic Front (NDF) yesterday scored Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile for "distorting" and "prematurely" disclosing the contents of a proposed memorandum of agreement between the government and NDF panels in the ongoing peace talks.

Reacting to Enrile's charges that NDF is out to trick the government into granting it belligerency status, lawyers Romeo Capulong and Arno Sanidad said in a press statement "that the principal demand of the NDF negotiators is to be able to perform their task openly and continuously without fear of being harmed or harassed by government agents or lawless elements."

The two lawyers said the document denounced by Enrile ("Memorandum of Agreement on Safety and Immunity Guarantees and Physical Centers and Facilities") is a "working draft" that is currently being revised by the two panels.

"Only yesterday (last Monday), the two government negotiators -- Minister Ramon Mitra Jr. and Commission on Audit Chairman Teofisto Guingona -- met with us for two hours at the coffee shop of the Manila Mandarin hotel," they said.

"Out of 13 major provisions and nine subsections in the draft, we succeeded in pruning our differences to four topics."

They added that it was "not accurate" to say the working draft is that of the NDF alone.

"Although it was initially prepared by the NDF negotiators with our legal assistance, the contents were actually discussed during the Aug. 5 meeting between Minister Mitra and Antonio Zumel and Satur Ocampo," they said.

In that meeting, the two sides agreed that the first draft be prepared by the NDF negotiators, the lawyers said.

Capulong and Sanidad said Enrile's disclosure and denunciation of the working draft was a breach of an agreement between the two panels to keep the discussions confidential.

They also claimed that the defense minister distorted some provisions, "concocted" others and quoted still others "out of context."

They said there was no "demand" in the working draft that the NDF flag be displayed alongside that of the Philippines.

They also denied Enrile's charges that NDF is trying to arrogate unto itself the right to represent the Filipino people in dealing with the Aquino government.

"The working draft provides clearly that NDF is negotiating as the political representative of the Filipino people's revolutionary forces which include all the organizations, councils, bodies and individuals comprising the National Democratic Front, including the Communist Party of the Philippines and the New People's Army," the lawyers said.

"This authorization was demanded by the government and it was not the NDF's proposal. In fact, this was one of the subjects discussed yesterday and resolved by the two sides," they said.

As for the reference to the government as "The Government of the Republic of the Philippines under President Corazon Aquino," the lawyers said this is "merely a recognition on the part of the NDF of the authority of Corazon C. Aquino to bind the Republic of the Philippines /now/ and in the /future/." [words within slantlines published in italics]

"If Minister Enrile is worried that a future government which will succeed the Aquino government and installed illegally by military force will not be recognized by NDF, that is a perogative of any political group in the same manner that most political forces including those that catapulted President Aquino to the presidency refused to recognize the legitimacy of the 14-year Marcos authoritarian rule..." they said.

Spokesman Defends Disclosure

HK040601 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 4 Sep 86

[Text] Communist peace negotiators accused the government of disclosing contents of their proposals. Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel, representatives of the communist rebels, said that the government failed to [words indistinct].

On the other hand, a defense ministry spokesman said Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile did not violate any breach of confidentiality in disclosing proposals presented by the National Democratic Front [NDF]. Silvestre Pablo, Jr. the spokesman, said that if anyone is to be accused of violation, it was the NDF. He added that the NDF discussed the proposals with each member and published them in an underground newspaper. He said that if the NDF believes that the proposals should be made known to its members, then Enrile is justified in discussing the issues with members of the military force.

LIBERATION INTERVIEWS NPA STAFF MEMBER

HK221043 (Clandestine) LIBERATION in English Jun 86 pp 11, 12

["Excerpts" of "Recent Interview" with NPA General Staff Member "Ronnie" -- place not given]

[Text] Q: Have there been any major changes in the military situation in the countryside?

A: On the whole, there have been no major changes in the situation in the countryside. So far, incomplete reports show there has been no significant, marked or perceptible decrease in the number of incidents between the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] and NPA. Although there are some areas or regions where hostilities have apparently abated, there are also some areas -- notably Cagayan, Bicol, Mindanao and some Visayan islands -- where encounters have been more frequent. These are areas where the AFP has continued conducting intense military operations even after the February uprising.

We believe that the wait-and-see attitude on both sides immediately after the uprising contributed to less encounters in some areas. On the NPA side, the Party (CPP) [Communist Party of the Philippines] instructed the NPA to be more selective with targets -- to concentrate on disarming CHDFs (Civilian Home Defense Forces) and private armies of warlords, the confiscation of crony properties and punishment of notorious bad elements and enemies of the people. These targets are all part of the revolutionary movement's objective of dismantling the fascist structures of the Marcos regime.

Q: Is there any truth to the military's claim that the buildup of their counter-insurgency operations is merely in response to the NPA's insurgent operations?

A: First of all, it is not true that the AFP has stopped its counter-insurgency operations after the new government came to power. The truth is there has been no let-up in the military's terrorist campaigns. These are more intense in areas such as Bicol and Cagayan. The NPA's actions are mainly defensive in nature. AFP soldiers are ambushed because they insist on conducting operations in NPA areas.

Q: ANG BAYAN [THE NATION] said in its May issue that the NPA will not assume an active defense posture in the light of the new situation. What is meant by that?

A: A policy of active defense is based on four assumptions. First, that the enemy is strategically superior or is in the offensive in the main over a large area, say in the whole country or in any region. Second, that the NPA can achieve local superiority in some areas within the region by concentrating a relatively large force having the element of surprise, mass support (for example, in logistics and intelligence) and greater mastery of terrain. Third, that although the NPA may not have local superiority, it can launch tactical defensive actions. In such actions, the purpose is not to annihilate the enemy but to frustrate or disurpt its plans, such as through sniping, sabotage and harassment operations. Fourth, that the NPA can stage tactical counter-offensives wherein the initiative in a certain military action may be wrested from the enemy.

From the beginning, we have always been on the strategic defensive. Under the new situation, the nature of our operations -- even the tactical offensives -- have mainly been in the context of tactical defensive, i.e., with the purpose of frustrating the enemy's plans and maneuvers. As we have stated earlier, the more the AFP operates inside our territories, the more vulnerable it becomes to ambushes and harassment.

Q: Will you press for the dismantling of the CHDF as a condition for the ceasefire?

A: The NDF [National Democratic Front] and the CPP, not the NPA, will determine the demands for the negotiations for ceasefire. The NPA will always abide by the decisions of the NDF and the CPP. Personally though, I believe the dismantling of the CHDF is a very just and reasonable demand, with or without the ceasefire. The people, especially the masses in the countryside, demand it. Even now, they actively assist the NPA in disarming the CHDFs and punishing the criminals.

Q: Do you trust the AFP to honor the terms of ceasefire that might be agreed upon?

A: A ceasefire is not a question of trust. There have to be safeguards or guarantees to enforce it, considering that hostile forces will be facing each other. A ceasefire may stop the firing, but it will not end the hostilities.

Q: What is your position on regional ceasefire? Are there any in effect today?

A: We believe that regional ceasefires are neither acceptable, helpful nor called for at the moment. Because, in the first place, the issue at hand is a national question involving as it does not less than the national government, on the one hand, and the NDF and CPP, both having national scope and influence, on the other.

Second, from a military viewpoint, regional ceasefires are also inadvisable for now because the enemy can easily shift deployment of its forces and arms to other regions without a ceasefire. There are no regional ceasefires presently in effect.

Q: Once a ceasefire is in effect, do you foresee limitations in NPA expansion and gathering of mass support? What will the NPA do in the meantime?

A: In the event a ceasefire is agreed upon, and even before this, the most important task of the NPA would be to consolidate itself -- to strengthen its forces and its ties with the masses so as to be able to cope adequately with the new tasks under the new situation.

During a ceasefire, the NPA still has the responsibility to protect the masses. Also, one work for the NPA is to enfore the ceasefire and make sure that the AFP does not violate it. This is a taxing job in itself.

Q: Most of the newspaper reports about the insurgency come from the Ministry of National Defense or AFP sources. What can you say about these reports?

A: Since the main source of most newspapers is the other side, you can't expect newspaper reports to be accurate. And because the military commands are the only source, they can always twist the facts. In fact, they always do so, and in different ways. For example, during the first week of May, there were many reports published about encounters which in fact occurred many months ago. There was one report last week about a clash in Cotabato where 10 NPAs and nine CHDFs were killed. The truth is, the event occurred in January. Secondly, only three Red fighters were killed, while the CHDFs were simply disarmed by the NPA.

The purpose of these press reports is to create the general impression that NPA tactical offensives are continuing without consideration for the reconciliatory calls of the new government. That is entirely false. The reason why NPA raids and ambuscades continue is because military terrorism and counter-insurgency operations against the NPA and the masses continue without let-up.

Q: Is it true, as the military says, that many Red fighters have surrendered to the new government?

A: Since the formation of the NPA, there have been some comrades who have left our army and gone "lie low" for various reasons, such as poor health, or the desire to live with their families or simply because they cannot take the hard life of a guerrilla any more.

But the claim, the wishful thinking that the Red fighters are coming down from the hills in droves because a new government has come to power or because the CPP erred in its boycott stand and caused the demoralization of many of its members, is simply preposterous. It has no basis in fact. There has been no significant increase in the annual rate of guerrillas leaving the NPA every year. It is not true that our army is demoralized. It is not true that there are no more NPA members in Cebu, or that so many have surrendered in Cebu or Davao. If there were legions of surrenderees photographed for the press, they are not genuine Red fighters, but "zombies," or deep penetration agents of the military who discredit the NPA. We are positive about that.

REPORTAGE ON S. AFRICAN FOREIGN MINISTER'S VISIT

Meets With Kuranari

OW040539 Tokyo KYODO in English 0446 GMT 4 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 4 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari urged his South African counterpart, Roelof Botha, Thursday to abolish the apartheid racial segregation policy as soon as possible, a Foreign Ministry official said.

Kuranari also called for the South African Government to create a proper environment for talks on a peaceful solution to apartheid by releasing anti-apartheid activist Nelson Mandela and recognize the legitimacy of the African National Congress (ANC), the official said. During a one-hour meeting held at the Foreign Ministry, Kuranari told Botha if the racial segreation problem does not improve soon Japan will have to take additional sanctions in addition to the punitive measures taken by this country in protest of the apartheid policy, the official said.

The Japanese foreign minister also requested that South Africa refrain from attacking neighboring countries and economic sanctions that will affect these nations, the official said.

Outside the ministry around 20 anti-apartheid protesters carrying posters with slogans like "Botha go home" and "Pik Botha we aren't honorary whites, we are Asians against apartheid" assembled in protest against the meeting and distributed pamphlets protesting the meeting and Japan's trade relations with South Africa. Botha arrived here Wednesday for a five-day unofficial visit.

Botha called for Japanese understanding of his previous government efforts to reform the segregation system, including the abolition of 34 discriminatory laws against blacks saying that such government actions would have been unbelievable in the past, the official said. Botha was quoted as saying that the South African Government publicly acknowledged its support to reform the segregation system.

He added that South Africa is discouraged with international criticism and the projected economic sanctions Japan might take, in concert with Europe and the United States, since his government is making such a great effort to extend reforms for blacks, the official said. Botha urged Japan to give approval to his government efforts, the official said.

Botha said he supports peaceful talks on apartheid and added it will be necessary for the ANC to stop their violence before such talks can be initiated, the official said. Botha called on the Japanese to understand there is a communist-controlled element in ANC that opposes peaceful talks on apartheid, the official said.

Botha will meet with business leaders and Diet members while in Tokyo, and do some sightseeing during his stay in Japan until Sunday an official at the South African consulate-general said. He has no other scheduled meetings with Japanese Government officials.

Botha is expected to visit Taiwan and Hong Kong after leaving Japan, the official added.

NHK Interview

OW041435 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 1200 GMT 4 Sep 86

[From the "News Center 9" program: interview with South African Foreign Minister R. F. Botha, currently visiting Japan, by NHK Newscaster Taro Kimura -- recorded "earlier in the day"; interview conducted in English with Japanese translation in subtitles; the following is transcribed from the English]

[Text] [Kimura] Mr Foreign Minister, we have reports from Johannesburg saying that tension is rising high in Soweto, and also there is bomb blast in Durban. It seems that the unrest in your country never ends. Do you have any perspective of ending all these problems?

[Botha] Yes. Yes, if those perpetrating violence could be discouraged from doing that, but they are not discouraged. The problem is at the present moment, by these threats of sanctions against my government, the impression is being created inside South Africa that those perpetrating violence can continue with it, and the result is that they are encouraged to carry on their violence in the hope that in that way the violence will force other governments -- like the Japanese Government and industrialized countries -- to institute sanctions against us.

[Kimura] You put blame on the violence and also you put blame on sanctions of the other countries, but don't you think that you also can blame the cause that provokes the violence and the sanctions -- namely, your basic policy of apartheid? Do you have any plan of removing or is it possible to remove this basic policy?

[Botha] This is what we do not understand. I am very glad you put this question to me. My government is comitted to removing apartheid....

[Kimura interrupting] To remove?

[Botha] To remove it, and we have a long list of reforms introduced just recently. Over the past few months we have changed over 34-35 laws. We repealed the pass laws which discriminated against black people; influx control of black people was lifted; the white preference in the immigration law was cancelled and withdrawn; in our sports, practices have been desegregated; our labor legislation desegregated; we repealed the law that prevented marriages across color lines; we have declared ourselves willing to share power with all leaders on only one condition, and that is they must abandon violence. Now it seems to me the more we reform, the more laws we repeal, the more the clamor and demands are for punitive measures against my country.

[Kimura] Mr Foreign Minister, you talked of changes. We heard of lots of changes from South Africa, but will blacks have the right to choose their own government or will blacks have the freedom to choose wherever they would like to live, or will blacks have the right to choose where to get education? Will blacks have all these rights in the near future?

[Botha] The important point I want to mention to you is that we have already introduced vast changes, dramatic changes, and we stand ready to share power -- this is the key -- with all black communities on the basis of agreement, negotiations to which we all must agree.

[Kimura] Sorry, I have to repeat my question, probably.

Will blacks have all the rights I have mentioned in the near future, and if it is so, when will it be?

[Botha] We stand for equal opportunities for all our people and the removal of racial discrimination, but if we are threatened, if the impression is created we are not changing, then of course those who do not want to come out and negotiate with us will not do so. As a matter of fact, I think you will be aware of the large-scale intimidation that is taking place by black groups against blacks. A large number of the black people who were tragically killed in South Africa during the past months were killed by black people who do not want them to come out and sit with us around a conference table to determine a new constitutional order for South Africa.

[Kimura] Mr Foreign Minister, what you said, you remind me of what Mr Ian Smith told us decades ago, but anyway, you being a diplomat for a long time -- and I understand a good one -- you should be aware of the criticism and the condemnation of the other world of your system. Why aren't these voices heard and reflected in your policies?

[Botha] I don't think I understand your question because we are very much aware of mistakes that we have made in the past, and as foreign minister I am very much aware of the world criticism of our policies. I am not here to try and defend practices that I cannot defend, but we have changed them. We are on the way to introduce more changes, but it will be South Africans -- black and white -- that must determine our future.

[Kimura] Let me put my question this way. Despite Mrs Thatcher's and Mr Reagan's reluctance, it seems that sanctions against South Africa will escalate and will be obliged to escalate. What you're saying is it's as if you're saying, leave South Africa to South Africans. Can you cope with cutting all relations with the outside world and living all by yourself?

[Kimura] No, that is not our purpose. It is not South Africa seeking this, and I repeat to you, we have committed ourselves to remove apartheid. What we now ask for is to be left alone so that South Africans, black and white, can work out a new constitutional order based on fundamental democratic principles which I am sure civilized governments all over the world can subscribe to.

[Kimura] Can you give us a timetable of what you have lined up?

[Botha] I cannot give a timetable for the simple reason that we are confronted at present by a large-scale intimidation campaign, intimidating black leaders who want to come and talk to us and negotiate with us. So the time scale will depend on the extent of the sanctions campaign, the pressures that are being exerted against us; the longer these pressures, the more sanctions, the greater the delay.

[Kimura] It's actually very hard for us to understand that if we take our hands off South Africa, you will have faster development in your country. But anyway, for us, speaking to a people who justify banning all the freedom of press and also not giving three-quarters of the population the voting right, it is like going through a time tunnel and meeting with people of centuries ago. I mean, can we expect that at sometime we can share the same sense of values?

[Botha] I am very glad you made that statement because it was not really a question, but I am glad you made it.

It is with respect, not true what you have said now. South African black people enjoy more fundamental rights legally and politically than the majority in the whole of Africa. What we have done is we have restricted the irresponsible visual material of violence because it instigated violence. There have been media representatives who actually encouraged violence in order to photograph it and send it abroad. Now, through this violence innocent black people got killed. It is my government's responsibility to try and protect all our citizens, black and white. These are the facts.

[Kimura] May be I should reply to your statement as a pressman. What exactly you said is what we call a banning of the freedom of the press, and I don't think I have understood you, and I don't think we have agreed, but I appreciate you being with us and answering my sometimes naughty questions. Thank you very much.

[Botha] You're welcome. Thank you for the opportunity.

KYODO Interview

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 5 KYODO -- Japanese who do business in South Africa are serving the best interests of their country, South African Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha said in an interview here Thursday evening. Japanese technology has done much to benefit black South Africans, he said in an interview with KYODO NEWS SERVICE. "Millions of black people drive Japanese cars, millions of black people use your radios," he said. "Now I don't understand this nonsense. Why forbid them to have it... Only for other countries to take your market?"

Botha had been told by Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari in a one-hour meeting earlier Thursday that Japan will have to impose further sanctions against South Africa unless it scraps its policy of aprtheid, or racial segregation. The Foreign Ministry has repeatedly stated that Japan will adopt sanctions in line with those taken by the United States and Western Europe.

Japan was South Africa's second-largest trading partner last year, and was the leading importer of South African coal (8.4 million tons), and iron ore (eight million tons). Japan is also dependent on South Africa for over 50 percent of supplies of several important metals that are crucial for steel and electronics industries. Japan and South Africa do not have full diplomatic relations, and the foreign ministers' meeting was the first high-level contact between the two nations.

Botha, here for a five-day stay until Sunday on the first stop of an Asia tour in which he will also visit Hong Kong and Taiwan, said South Africa should diversify trade, especially in Asia. "I personally believe we should diversify our trade. We should concentrate on the Far East, with Japan as the leader, (as well as trading with) Taiwan, Singapore, and other countries in this region, because the truth is that we are not racist," he said. Botha, who besides meeting with Kuranari met members of the diet and business leaders Thursday afternoon, said his main reason for coming to Japan is to "ensure that the Japanese Government is informed firsthand of the situation in South Africa."

He emphasized that South Africa "must change, we must remove racial discrimination," but reiterated that his country will not bow to pressure from economic sanctions, which he said would only delay the dismantling of aprtheid.

Botha said that though his government has repealed and ammended "over 50 laws" in the past half year to remove discrimination, "we get no credit for it."

REPORTAGE ON DEFENSE CHIEF'S TALKS IN U.S.

Excessive Demands To Be Denied

OW041007 Tokyo KYODO in English 0912 GMT 4 Sep 86

[Text] Washington, Sept 3 KYODO -- U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger will ask Japan to increase its defense spending further in a meeting here with his Japanese counterpart Yuko Kurihara Thursday, Japanese sources said. But the sources said Kurihara will turn down "excessive" expectations from some quarters in the United States for a greater defense budget though he will assure the U.S. Government of Japan's continued efforts to step up modernization of the Self-Defense Forces.

A sweeping victory of the pro-U.S. Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) in Japan's national elections in July raised hopes among some Americans that the Tokyo government may comply with the U.S. request for a substantial increase in defense spending. The Kurihara-Weinberger meeting will be the first by top Japanese and U.S. defense officials since the inauguration of a new cabinet of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in late July. Nakasone named Kurihara as cabinet minister in charge of the defense agency.

The sources said the international military situation, including the Soviet military buildup in Asia, will be another major topic of discussion at the one-day meeting. The United States has been also urging Japan to boost its sea-lane defense capabilities and construct an airport on an island south of Tokyo for night landing and takeoff practices by warplanes of the aircraft carrier "

Meets Weinberger, Bush

[Text] Washington, Sept 4 KYODO -- The United States Thursday urged Japan to upgrade its defense capabilities, warning that congress is keeping a keen eye on the defense policies of U.S. allies. Both Vice president George Bush and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger made pleas for increased Japanese military spending in separate meetings with Japan's Defense Agency Director General Yuko Kurihara, Japanese officials said. "The Congress is searching closely whether the U.S. allies are not doing enough in their defense efforts," a Japanese official quoted Weinberger as telling Kurihara. The U.S. visit is Kurihara's first since he was appointed as cabinet minister in charge of defense last July.

Bush also sounded the same theme in a separate meeting with Kurihara earlier in the say, saying that the administration will come under fire from Congress unless Japan and NATO allies spend more on defense.

Weinberger told Kurihara that Congress has been pressuring the administration to cut military assistance to its allies unless they do enough in their own defense. There is an isolationist mood within the Congress and the U.S. allies should not "add fuel to the fire," Japanese officials quoted Weinberger as saying.

Japan should increase its defense budget more than it has been doing, Weinberger said. While pledging to convey the U.S. message to Tokyo, Kurihara asked Weinberger to explain to Congress what he described "the (special) circumstances in Japan," Japanese officials said.

At a press conference following the two meetings, Kurihara said he had tried to explain to the Americans that the government of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is not in as dominant a poosition as the Americans seem to believe following his ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's landslide election victory last July. "The fact that the LDP won 304 seats does not mean that we in Japan can do anything we like," Kurihara said. The figure refers to the number of lower house seats the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party won in the July 6 Diet elections. However, Kurihara said the Japanese Government will do everything that is politically possible, citing the Defense Agency's request for a 6 percent increase in the defense budget for fiscal 1987. "Whatever the case, we must do what we can. I plan to do my best without making much fuss about it," he said.

Touching on specific defense cooperation between the two countries, Weinberger reiterated the importance of building a night-landing practice facility in Japan, saying it is indispensable for American carrier-borne aircraft. Kurihara responded by saying that the Japanese government plans carry through the plan to build such an airstrip on Miyake, a small island south of Tokyo. The project has been stalled becasue of opposition from local residents.

The two defense chiefs also discussed the transfer of Japan's military technology to the United States, with a senior Japanese defense official saying after the meeting that an agreement could be signed in Tokyo "in a couple of days." The agreement involves the transfer of technology involved in the production of an advanced missile-homing device and the design and production management of military supply vessels, Seiki Nishihiro, chief of the Defense Agency's Defense Bureau, told reporters.

MIYAZAWA SUCCEEDS SUZUKI AS FACTION LEADER

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 4 KYODO -- The Suzuki faction of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) was renamed Miyazawa faction Thursday as Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa succeeded former Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki as head of the party's second largest such group. Miyazawa was named the head at a faction general meeting at a hotel in Yamanashi Prefecture. The faction whose formal name is "Kochikai" had been led by Suzuki, and before him by Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira, Shigesaburo Maeo,1 speaker of the Diet lower house, and Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda. Supporters said Miyazawa's appointment will accelerate the rejuvenation of party leaders and also affect party genral secretary Noboru Takeshita, who has yet to be named head of the LDP's no. 1 Tanaka faction currently led by former party Vice President Susumu Nikaido. Takeshita is one of three aspirants for post-Nakasone prime ministership together with Miyazawa and party Executive Council Chairman Shintaro Abe.

In his acceptance speech, Miyazawa said, "I'm greatly honored. I'm determined to devote myself to fulfilling Japan's goal of helping achieve world peace as the second largest power (in terms of GNP)." Miyazawa, who advocates expansion of domestic demand, also said that the country should take measures to improve its social capital.

KPA TO TRANSFER 150,000 TROOPS TO ECONOMIC WORK

[Text] Pyongyang September 5 (KCNA) -- The Supreme Command of the Korean People's Army took an important measure of making the combined units and units of the Korean People's Army and the Korean People's Security Forces extensively participate in the peaceful construction of the country in step with the all-people mass movement.

The Supreme Command of the Korean People's Army issued a communique in this connection. Follows the full text of the communique:

The nation-wide construction work is now vigorously going on in the northern half of the republic to attain the grand long-range objectives of socialist economic construction set forth by the Sixth Congress of the Workers' Party of Korea. The Korean People's Army soldiers are performing distinguished exploits in this peaceful construction work.

The soldiers of the Korean People's Army boundlessly loyal to the party and revolution dammed off an 8 km section of the rough sea and creditably built the Nampo barrage in a brief period some time ago with our own technique and our own materials, highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and hard struggle. This was a noteworthy event in the history of the Korean people's building of socialism and a brilliant victory which fully demonstrated the might and stamina of Korea of chuche.

The Korean People's Army highly displayed mass heroism and devotion as a genuine army of the people in the building of the Nampo barrage, a monumental creation of eternal value. The entire Korean people deem it great honour and pride to have such reliable army as the Korean People's Army in defending and building the country. The noble revolutionary spirit displayed and exploits performed by the Korean People's Army soldiers in the sacred cause of defending peace and security in the country and building it better will shine long in the annals of the fatherland.

Under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song socialist construction in our country has today reached a new higher stage. Our people are confronted with the vast task to rapidly develop the national economy of the country as a whole by finishing the major construction objects at an accelerated tempo and attaining at an early date the ten major long-range targets of socialist economic construction set forth by the party. This is a worthwhile fighting task to further cement the material and technical foundations of socialism in our country, consolidate its peace and security, and secure the happiness and prosperity of our posterity. Today the entire Korean people have risen as one in the struggle to carry out this honorable task with new confidence and stamina under the slogan "Let us energetically step up the 80's advance the way we built the Nampo barrage".

The Supreme Command of the Korean People's Army took an important measure of making combined units and units of the Korean People's Army and Korean People's Security Forces extensively participate in the peaceful construction of the country in step with this all people's grand onward movement.

In accordance with the measure of the KPA Supreme Command, divisions and brigades of the Korean People's Army and Korean People's Security Forces are moving from the frontline and their posts on a large scale to the major fronts of socialist economic construction, though the situation obtaining on the Korean peninsula is very tense. The entire people are enthusiastically welcoming over 150,000 soldiers of the Korean People's Army advancing to the peaceful construction sites and people in Kangwon Province, and other local areas adjoining to the frontline are meeting and sending off soldiers passing through their areas as if they would do their kinsmen.

The Korean People's Army soldiers who have always been faithful to the party and revolution are now filled with a determination to display the stamina and might of the heroic Korean People's Army on all fronts of the peaceful construction of the country with the same fighting spirit and stamina as they demonstrated in the building of the Nampo barrage.

This measure taken by the KPA Supreme Command is an expression of the Korean people's peace-loving idea and desire to relax the tension and maintain a durable peace on the Korean peninsula on all accounts this year, the "International Year of Peace".

We intended to dratically cut the forces of the Korean People's Army to send them to the economic construction of the country if there were a sign that the talks between the military authorities proposed by us with sincerity would be promoted and the tension in Korea be eased. But as the U.S. and South Korean authorities have not yet responded to it, we had to make Korean People's Army soldiers in uniform participate in the peaceful construction of the country.

If the United States and the South Korean authorities responded to talks between the military authorities, truly interested in the relaxation of the tension and preservation of peace in Korea, an epochal phase for preserving a durable peace and security would undoubtedly be opened on the Korean peninsula. They must be aware of the true intention of the government of the republic and the Korean people who desire peace and must not cry about the fiction of the "threat from the North", sitting with folded arms, but turn out to the table of talks and take a step for detente.

The Supreme Command of the Korean People's Army declares that if the United States and the South Korean authorities, at a time when our huge armed forces are mobilised in peaceful construction, adopt a peaceful measure as we did or take any step to ease the tension in Korea, we are ready to take a more go-ahead measure for peace in Korea. If such peaceful measure is taken and expanded one after another in the North and the South of Korea, it will help deepen mutual understanding and trust, ease the tension and preserve a durable peace on the Korean peninsula and, further, open the way to peaceful reunification.

We think that this fully conforms with the desire and expectation of the entire Korean people and the world's peaceloving people who desire peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification.

The United States and the South Korean authorities must not use for their insidious purpose the period when huge forces of the Korean People's Army are mobilised in peaceful construction.

The Supreme Command of the Korean People's Army believes that soldiers of the Korean People's Army and the Korean People's Security Forces will discharge their honorable duty with credit in the battle of socialist construction for the development and prosperity of the country and the happiness of the people.

CPRF BLAMES SUSPENSION OF DIALOGUES ON SOUTH

[Memorandum issued by the CPRF Secretariat on 29 August in Pyongyang]

[Text] The various forms of North-South dialogue, which were actively conducted last year amid great expectations and concern on the part of all fellow countrymen and the world's peace-loving people, have been suspended for the first 8 months of 1986.

Recognizing the need to explain how the various forms of North-South dialogue, which had been conducted for over a year, were suspended and why they have not been resumed, the Secretarait of the CPRF issues this memorandum.

1. In the fall of 1984 when we offered relief goods to South Korean flood victims, an atmosphere of dialogue between the North and South, which had hitherto been full of confrontation and distrust toward one another, began to surface. Toward the end of August and early September 1984, a torrential rain in various parts of South Korea, including Seoul, the heaviest such rain in 400 years, caused a tragedy, leaving an estimated 300 dead or injured and 207,000 homeless.

The Central Committee of the DPRK Red Cross Society, feeling the sufferings of its fellow countrymen, who had been struck by the disaster as if it were its own, adopted on 8 September that year a decision to send to the South Korean flood victims 50,000 sok [bags] of rice, 500,000 meters of cloth, 100,000 tons of cement, and medical supplies as relief goods and then proposed to the South Korean Red Cross that the relief goods be delivered at the earliest possible date. With the South Korean Red Cross accepting our humanitarian and compatriotic offer, a significant event of exchanging an enormous amount of relief goods between fellow countrymen and brethren, the first such event in 39 years since the nation was divided, took place in our country from 29 September to 4 October.

After the delivery of relief goods, and thanks to our side's initiative, the North-South economic talks were opened on 15 November 1984, the first such talks since the nation was divided, and following this the preliminary contact between delegates of the Red Cross organizations of the North and South was held on 20 November for the resumption of full-dress Red Cross talks.

As a result, the door of dialogue opened again between the North and South of our country, more than 10 years after it was disrupted in the 1970's. The dialogue, however, had to suffer ordeals from the beginning. The North-South dialogues, arranged with much effort, were temporarily suspended because of the brutal killing of our side's guard personnel by U.S. Army and South Korean puppet army soldiers at Panmunjom in November 1984; and in 1985 the dialogues failed to open as scheduled due to the "Team Spirit-85" joint military exercises of the United States and those in authority in South Korea, after which the dialogues remained suspended for nearly half a year.

This fact demonstrated that North-South dialogue cannot be held successfully unless the tension between the North and South is first removed. Hence, in the fourth meeting of the Seventh SPA Session on 9 April 1985, our side proposed to the South side that North-South parliamentary talks be held to discuss a joint declaration of nonaggression between the North and South.

Because of its justness, our proposal for North-South parliamentary talks aroused full support among and was sympathized with by all the people in the country and among the world's peace-loving people. The South side, which delayed sending its response to our reasonable and constructive peace proposal for nearly 2 months, had no choice but to respond to it in the face of pressure brought on by public opinion at home and abroad. As a result, the preliminary contact for arranging parliamentary talks, the Red Cross talks, and the economic talks were held last year between the North and South.

During the period of about a year since the resumption of North-South dialogues, the preliminary contacts for the parliamentary talks were held twice, economic talks five times, and Red Cross talks three times. In the course of this, an agreement on forming the North-South joint economic cooperation committee was reached at the economic talks, and in the humanitarian fields, even the mutual exchange of Red Cross art troupes and home-visiting groups on the 40th anniversary of the 15 August national liberation was decided.

The various forms of North-South dialogue have brought about a few such successes over the past year or so. However, in light of the ardent aspirations and expectations of all the people in the country, progress was very limited and none of the basic problems arising in improving North-South relations in particular was solved.

2. It is because of the wrong attitude and stand of the South Korean side toward dialogue that the dialogues -- which made a good start because of the favorable situation created by the delivery and acceptance of relief goods for South Korean flood victims -- have failed to bring about any of the successes they deserve.

For the dialogues between the North and South to make any success, it is imperative that both parties approach the dialogue with a common goal, stand, and goodwill to promote detente [wanhwa] and peace and to establish a single, reunified Korea. If any one party to dialogue tries to use the dialogue to perpetuate national division or realize any impure political goal, no success can be achieved in the dialogue

Out of a noble single-minded idea to promote, at any cost, national harmony between the North and South, to consolidate peace in the country, and to accelerate a peaceful reunification, we have made every possible effort to lead the dialogue to success. However, the attitude and stand the South side has adopted toward dialogue has been exactly the opposite of ours.

From the very beginning, the South Korean side had no intention of making progress. The sole intent of those in authority in South Korea was to make it appear that they were participating in the dialogues for form's sake, while they were actually pursuing purpose of creating an atmosphere for the 1988 Olympics. In this way, from the beginning, the South Korean side did not want the North-South dialogues to bear any fruit. In particular, the South did not try to hide the fact that it's tactics were to delay political dialogue.

This insincere attitude on the part of the South Korean side toward dialogue was first laid bare during the course of preliminary contacts for North-South parliamentary talks.

Since the preliminary contact for parliamentary talks is an advance contact to discuss such working-level procedural issues as the place, date, composition of delegates, and agenda items for the full dress parliamentary talks, there were no complicated issues that had to be dealt with there. However, even these preliminary contacts for the parliamentary talks failed from the beginning to make smooth progress or reach an agreement on agenda items to be discussed at the full-dress talks.

In connection with the agenda items, our side proposed the issue of a joint declaration of nonaggression between the North and South as an agenda item, while at the same time taking a flexible stand that our side could discuss along with our own agenda item the formation of a consultative organization for institutionalization of a united constitution -- an issue proposed by the South side -- all for the sake of progress in dialogue.

Nevertheless, the South side doggedly opposed accepting a joint declaration of nonaggression as an agenda item at the parliamentary talks. The South objected on the preposterous grounds that such an item is not germane to parliamentary issues and the legislation of laws. This is so preposterous an assertion that it convinces no one, considering the strained situation on the Korean peninsula -- an area in which the danger of war is growing stronger with each passing day -- and considering the function of parliament, which considers war and peace issues its major business.

What is more, the joint declaration of nonaggression -- which we insist on discussing at the parliamentary talks -- by which we mean merely to make both sides recognize the need to solve the issue of nonaggression and then entrust to the authorities its realization, is conspicuously different from adopting a declaration of nonaggression, which will later be taken care of by the authorities.

This notwithstanding, the South Korean side adamantly refused to discuss the issue of nonaggression as an agenda item at the first contact and again at the second contact. It stubbornly refused even our side's amended proposal -- where out of consideration for the opinion of the South side, our side proposed to generalize the agenda item and discuss, as a single agenda item, the issue of easing tension between the North and South and of promoting national reunification.

The South side's delaying tactics in the preliminary contact for the parliamentary talks became more naked in the days that followed the second preliminary contact. Designating the date for the next meeting at the end of a meeting is common sense and has been customary at the North-South dialogues. However, at the second preliminary contact, the South side said it would reply through a telephone message after returning home, persistently refusing to desinate the date for the next contact.

In the days that followed, the South side continued to delay designating the date for the third preliminary contact for some time under the pretext of the National Assembly schedule. But even after the National Assembly schedule has been established, it still delayed for nearly 3 months while the senior delegate himself traveled abroad with the parliamentary delegation. Then only in November did he reluctantly suggest that the third contact be made in February 1986.

As a result, preliminary contacts for the parliamentary talks were held only twice last year, producing no agreement whatsoever.

The South Korean side's tactics of delaying dialogue were fully brought to light at the North-South Red Cross talks. At the 8th round of the North-South Red Cross talks reopened toward the end of May last year, our side proposed discussing as a package five agenda items on the full-dress talks as agreed by the two sides during the dialogues held in the 1970's and proposed discussing the issue of realizing free travel by separated families and relatives as the most prerequisite and central way to comprehensively solve the five agenda items as a whole. Later, we also put forward an epochal proposal that the discussion of ways and procedures to alleviate the suffering of families and relatives separated in the North and South be completed before September this year, the 15th anniversary of the first contact between the Red Cross organizations of the two sides.

However, quite insincerely, the South side has not advanced any new proposals and has adopted a negative attitude toward our proposal aimed at realizing free travel, while reiterating an old proposal it came up with 12 years ago. Unable to endure our side's persuasive assertions and pressures brought by public opinion at home and abroad anymore, the South side reluctantly accepted our proposal for free travel, but nevertheless deliberately obstructed any progress on this matter when earnest discussions began. Even after it agreed to free travel, the South side refused to make it a comprehensive method for realizing the five agenda items, while doggedly opposing a general agreement on free travel.

This act by the South Korean Red Cross to block the future of the dialogue was in accordance with the antinational stand of those in authority in South Korea who are pursuing only division and confrontation. The South Korean Red Cross side has no latitude of action as far as the North-South dialogue is concerned and acts only according to the intervention and control of the National Security Planning Agency [NSP].

At the sign of slight progress in the North-South Red Cross talks, the NSP agents reportedly summoned those involved in the Red Cross talks and accused them of having been too speedy in running the dialogue. This is no longer a secret. It is an equally stark reality that after this incident the delaying tactics of the South's Red Cross side became more conspicuous.

Not only did the South Korean Red Cross side obstruct progress on the discussion of agenda items on directives by the puppet NSP Agency, but it also committed the uncouth act of extremely dimming the atmosphere of dialogue outside the meeting site, besides being preposterous.

At the ninth round of talks held in Pyongyang in August last year, we invited the members of the South side's delegation to view a performance of collective gymnastics called "A Shining Korea" in which approximately 50,000 students and children from Pyongyang participated. As for the collective gymnastics program "A Shining Korea," it is the history of our people put to athletic rhythms and therefore had no scenes whatever that were offensive to the delegates of the South side or those in authority in South Korea. Nevertheless, the South's delegation committed the rude act of walking out midway through the performance -- preposterously taking issue with one of the scenes in which the anti-Japanese armed struggle was described -- on the grounds that it showed children doing military drills.

This act was extremely impudent and provocative and ran against even basic common sense and propriety, as it was an insult to the young children who performed the gymnastics and to those who were watching it.

By acting like this, the South side's delegation obstructed the discussion of free travel, which had been set forth as a basic agenda item, from reaching an earnest stage.

The South side's actions designed to obstruct dialogue were expressed in detail while the Red Cross art troupes and home-visiting groups were being exchanged, the first such exchange in 40 years since the national division. In the beginning, the South side came up with the proposal to exchange home-visiting groups with a view to subverting the exchange of art troupes advanced by our side. However, when we suggested the simultaneous exchange of art troupes and home-visiting groups, the South side, finding itself in an awkward position, tried to abort the exchange work by obstructing discussion of procedures for the exchange of art troupes and home-visiting groups.

Having agreed on the formation of Red Cross artistic and home-visiting groups of 50 persons respectively after having caused difficulties over the size of home-visiting groups, the South side willfully complicated this issue while exchanging these groups. Instead of allowing the exchange of home-visiting groups to be carried out smoothly -- because this work was the first significant event after 40 years of division -- the South side committed the unjust act of including those who had defected to the South after slaughtering many patriots in the northern half of the Republic during the war among the 50 members of the home-visiting group. It is clear even to a mere child what complications would develop in the work of the home-visiting group if those who fled after committing barbarous acts during the war were to revisit the North.

To allow at any cost the work of exchanging artistic and home-visiting groups -- which were to be carried out smoothly, we asked the South side to replace those who had fled after slaughtering innocent people during the war. Unable to reject our just demand, the South side was compelled to replace according to our request three persons 2 days before the exchange of home-visiting groups.

Failing to carry out an attempt to abort the work of exchanging artistic and home-visiting groups during discussion of the procedures of this work because of our positive effort, the South Korean side used this work for an anticommunist confrontation campaign. The South side had those who had visited Pyongyang as members of the artistic and home-visiting groups groundlessly slander the northern half of the republic. By mobilizing all propaganda means, the South side conducted anticommunist and antirepublic propaganda in a hackneyed manner, thus leading the people of the world to deride it.

The South side's unjust attitude and stand toward dialogue -- the stand for achieving confrontation and division instead of attaining substantial results from dialogue -- failed in North-South economic talks. To boldly and efficiently resolve issues of economic cooperation and trade between the North and South at economic talks, our side advanced an epochal proposal at the second talks to form an authoritative body -- the joint North-South committee for economic cooperation -- to be chaired by a vice premier-level person exclusively charged with economic work.

After calling for a partial exchange in the initial stage, the South side reluctantly agreed with our proposal during the third talks. While exchanging the letter of agreement in connection with this issue, the South side laid artificial obstacles to the discussion of this letter by coming up with questions concerning such preposterous matters as linking railways and purchasing 30,000 tons of coal. Due to the insincere attitude of the South side, the joint letter of agreement was not prepared despite the fact that talks were later held on two occasions.

The basic questions of improving relations between the North and South and of achieving national reconciliation were not discussed and resolved at multilateral North-South dialogues. This is entirely because of the South side's stand of negating the dialogue, having used dialogue for the impure political aim of confrontation and division under U.S. manipulation.

Pursuing an aggressive strategy for Asia, the United States does not desire alleviation of the situation on the Korean peninsula resulting from progress in the North-South dialogue. This is well shown by the fact that while visiting South Korea in May 1986, U.S. Secretary of State Shultz said openly that there should be no threat to security because of progress in North-South dialogue. The United States has desperately hindered progress in North-South dialogue on the grounds that if tension is alleviated in our country, the theory of the threat of southward invasion would disappear and U.S. forces would be forced to withdraw from South Korea. As long as the United States and the ruling clique in South Korea maintain such a stand, North-South dialogues will be unsuccessful in the future.

3. In order to make the dialogues between the North and South progress according to the will and aspirations of our people, it is imperative that acts that dim the atmosphere of dialogue not be committed in the first place and that both parties make efforts to create an environment favorable to dialogue.

Ever since the economic talks, the Red Cross talks, and the preliminary contact for parliamentary talks were arranged, our side has consistently made every sincere effort possible to create a good atmosphere for dialogue. However, those in authority in South Korea who had no interest in advancing the North-South dialogue from the beginning began to dim the atmosphere of dialogue and lay artificial obstacles to it, supporting a confrontational stand.

The South Korean side's reckless acts of spoiling the atmosphere of dialogue have been committed more maniacally this year in particular. As is known, out of a serious desire to improve North-South relations through dialogue and negotiations, to consolidate peace in the country, and to settle the reunification question bv peaceful means, our side has not only repeatedly supported a favorable atmosphere for dialogue and smoothly advancing it, but has also taken all practical measures to this end.

In his New Year's address, the great leader of our people, Comrade Kim Il-song, stated his desire to make the economic talks and the Red Cross talks come to fruition, to have the parliamentary talks come into being as soon as possible, and, going one step further, to realize the highest-level talks between the North and South.

Fully supporting the great leader's positive stand on the dialogue as such, through talks and statements the delegations of our side to the North-South dialogues repeatedly called on the United States and South Korean authorities to abstain from committing any acts damaging to the atmosphere of dialogaue, and to stop the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise, which is so damaging to dialogue.

In addition, in a Foreign Ministry statement issued on 11 January, the DPRK Government announced that, as an important measure to ease tensions on the Korean peninsula and to create a decisively favorable environment for talks between the North and South, it took the initiative to refrain from conducting large-scale military exercises throughout the whole of the northern half of the republic from 1 February and to stop all military exercises during the period of North-South talks, then proposing that the United States and South Korean authorities respond to this.

The United States and the South Korean authorities, however, have suspended the multichannelled North-South dialogues at one stroke by announcing 4 days before the sixth round of North-South economic talks that they would stage the largest-ever "Team, Spirit-86" joint military exercise, in defiance of our repeated peace proposals and the unanimous opposition and rejection of the people at home and abroad. It is clear to everyone that it is impossible to open dialogue for detente [wanhwa], reconciliation, and peace under circumstances in which a party to dialogue stages a large-scale war exercise in an atmosphere of real war by bringing in tens of thousands of alien troops of aggression and modern operational equipment, including nuclear weapons, threatening to annihilate the other party.

The United States and the South Korean authorities, who have suspended all forms of dialogue by staging the dialogue-denying "Team Spirit" joint military exercise, held a so-called annual security consultative meeting at the climax of the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, instead of taking responsibility for the suspension and apologizing to the nation, as a matter of course, and openly declared that they would continue to introduce modern military equipment en masse into South Korea and continue to strengthen the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise. This is a declaration of total confrontation with us, the other party to dialogue, as well as a declaration of rejection of the dialogue. While committing acts of flatly refusing the dialogue under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, those in authority in South Korea have run amok more maniacally in war and confrontation commotions. One after another they held large-scale military exercises against us, exercises such as "Ttangbol-86" and "Piho-86," with mobilization of the puppet army, police, and civilian military forces of over 3 million strong even before the powder smoke of the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise was dissipated. They even committed such piratic acts as opening fire at one of our peaceful fishing boats on the high seas, killing and injuring many fishermen and sinking the boat.

Because of the antinational policy and confrontational maneuvers of the South Korean ruling clique under the slogan of "defeat communism and annihilate communism", the tense situation in our country has reached an extreme point. Concerning this, out of a desire to resume the suspended North-South dialogues at all costs, we called on the South side to abandon its antinational, confrontational line and take appropriate measures to create an atmosphere of dialogue at an early date by coming back to support dialogue through a joint statement by the delegates of our side to the North-South talks on 24 April.

However, the South Korean ruling clique, instead of creating an atmosphere for dialogue, has not only strengthened its anticommunist confrontational maneuvers under the fictitious pretext of the North's maneuvers to hinder the Olympics or military provocation, but has also responded to our call by brutally suppressing the righteous anti-U.S. struggle for independence and antifacist struggle for democratization of the South Korean youths, students, and people of all walks of life by linking the struggle to us.

As a result, the various forms of the North-South dialogue have not resumed despite our repeated efforts. The way the North-South dialogues were conducted for a period of about a year following the end of 1984 eloquently demonstrates that no problems designed to improve North-South relations can be smoothly solved, nor can an environment designed to resume the suspended North-South dialogue be created without elimination of the danger of war facing our country and without the relaxation of tension.

Proceeding from this, the KPA Supreme Command advanced a new, epochal peace proposal last June for talks among the military authorities, who could, on their responsibility, ease the military tension, out of a sincere desire to remove the danger of war in our country, ease the tension, and create a favorable atmosphere for the North-South dialogue at any cost.

If and when the DPRK minister of the People's Armed Forces, the commander-in-chief of the UN forces stationed in South Korea, and the South Korean defense minister hold talks -- as proposed by the KPA supreme command -- and discuss and resolve such issues as stopping military exercises and the military buildup, reducing troops and armaments, and observing the Korean Armistice Agreement as demanded by its original text, the danger of war will definitely be eliminated in our country, the tension will be eased, and when this happens, the suspended North-South dialogues will be resumed immediately and will advance smoothly.

Indeed, the proposal for the military authorities, newly proposed by the KPA Supreme Command, is a very reasonable and timely peace proposal that has opened a new turning point for detente and peace in our country and guarantees successful progress on the North-South dialogues.

If the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean ruling clique have at least a modicum of concern about the relaxation of tension and peace on the Korean peninsula and want dialogue and negotiations, as a matter of course they will have to come to the talks among the military authorities. But they refused to accept our proposal for talks among the military authorities by coming up with a totally unreasonable and unrealistic assertion and staged again the provocative military exercise "Ulchi-86" from 14 July, creating a murderous atmosphere of war and confrontation throughout South Korea.

All facts clearly show that it is entirely because of the antinational maneuvers of war and confrontation pursued by the South Korean ruling clique under the control of the U.S. imperialists that the North-South dialogues, which had been arranged in the mid-1980's and continued for a period of about 18 months, were suspended once again and have not been resumed to date.

The North-South dialogues for reconciliation, detente, and reunification should be resumed without delay. Our stand to reopen the suspended North-South dialogues at an early date and lead them to success is unshakable. The future of the North-South dialogues in our country depends entirely upon the attitude of the South Korean side.

If the South Korean side is evenly slightly interested in dialogue and negotiations, it should come to the table of talks between military authorities soon.

At the same time, it should guarantee that it will no longer stage such large-scale military exercises as the "Team Spirit" joint military exercises against dialogue and for confrontation and end the policy of anticommunist confrontation it has pursued under the pretext of the nonexistent threat of southward invasion.

It should also put an immediate end to suppressing the struggle of the South Korean youth, students, and people of all walks of life, linking this struggle to us. This is the unanimous will of the people at home and abroad. Babbling about dialogue without taking such measures is falsehood.

We hope that those in authority in South Korea will lend an ear to our just demand and takea convincing step without delay and thus create an atmosphere for dialogue immediately.

S. KOREANS REVEALED AS 'MEAN STOOGES' OF JAPANESE

[NODONG SINMUN 4 September commentary: "Mean Stooges and Cunning Aggressors"]

[Text] The general assembly of the South Korea-Japan Parliamentarians' League held on 2 September in Tokyo ended after announcing an eight-point resolution. Prior to the conference, a series of conspiracies were carried out between the chairman of the South Korean side, who went to Japan to attend the general assembly, and the Japanese Prime Minister and cabinet members.

The recent general assembly was the site of bargains for aggression, nation-selling, and challenging the Korean people's national cause by further strengthening the mutual collusion between the South Korean puppets and the Japanese reactionaries. At the assembly, the South Korean puppets raved that we had suspended the North-South dialogue while the Japanese reactionaries supported the claim. Then, they agreed on taking joint measures. As has been recognized around the world, the North-South dialogue was suspended due to the frenzied northward aggressive war exercise staged by the U.S. imperialists and the puppets against us in defiance of our repeated peace proposals to create an atmosphere for dialogue.

The U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique have endangered the future of dialogue by accelerating war preparations while raving that they would strengthen the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise which suspended the dialogue. The recent assembly was used to produce counterpropaganda to ignore such a solemn reality. Thus, the assembly was shown for the mean, cheating bargain it was. This was also demonstrated by the fact that the puppets and the Japanese reactionaries agreed to cooperate toward the success of the Asian Games and the Olympics reportedly to be held in South Korea.

Today, with the Asian Games near at hand, mass struggle has been staged in South Korea to check them. Voices are also raised in opposition to South Korea's unilateral hosting of the Olympics, demanding the cohosting of the Olypmics by the North and the South. This is a natural demand in view of the circumstances in which the South Korean puppets misuse the international sports games for the two Koreas plot and to extend their hold on power.

However, the puppets and the Japanese reactionaries, ignoring voices at home and abroad, have raved about creating circumstances to facilitate the success of such events and so forth. Their remarks run completely counter to the trend of the times.

The aims pursued by the South Korean puppets and the Japanese reactionaries through such a commotion are clear. Today the colonial military fascist rule in South Korea has reached a serious phase due to the anti-U.S. and anti-puppet struggle of the youths, students, and people that increases each day. The Chon Tu-hwan clique is now attempting to find a way to survive by strengthening the repression of the patriotic people with guns and bayonets internally on the pretext of ensuring international sports games, and by more closely clinging to the sleeves of the U.S. and Japanese maters abroad externally.

Meanwhile, the Japanese reactionaries are attempting to further extend the evil hands of aggression against South Korea by resuscitating the puppets who are suffering from a serious ruling crisis and by helping them create favorable international circumstances for the two Koreas plot through international sporting events in South Korea.

Nakasone's plan to attend the opening ceremony of the Asian Games and the Japanese reactionaries' promise to support the international games include cunning and the wicked intention to gain an enormous amount of money through such international games.

At the assembly, the South Korean puppets make no remark of protest against the issue of the Japanese history textbooks, which had given rise to hot worldwide criticism, but only asked for more things while raving about correcting the imbalance in trade, assistance and so forth, thus showing their mean nature as stooges. The Japanese reactionaries gave no pledge to the puppets while raving about studying the trade deficit and so forth, thus showing their cunning nature as aggressors.

The nation sellers and aggressors cannot avoid denunciation at home and abroad.

ZAYTSEV REITERATES INVITATION TO SITTHI

BK040055 Bangkok THE NATION in English 4 Sep 86 p 2

[Text] A senior official of Soviet Foreign Ministry yesterday said he has reiterated Moscow's invitation for Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila to visit the Soviet Union at the end of the year or early next year.

Anatoliy Zaytsev, head of Southeast Asian Affairs, told THE NATION in an interview that he repeated the invitation when he met Foreign Ministry's Permanent Secretary Asa Sarasin on Monday.

Zaytsev quoted Asa as saying the Thai side agreed in principle to the invitation.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Mikhail Kapitsa first made the offer on behalf of Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze when he met Sitthi here in late April. Sitthi was quoted as saying then that he agreed in principle to the invitation.

Zaytsev said he has also proposed to Asa that Thailand and the Soviet Union should exchange more trade delegations to discuss expansion of their economic ties.

When asked about Asa's response to the proposal, he said "We did not hear any negative response" from the Thai side.

He said the Soviet Union believes there are good prospects for broadening the economic relations between the two countries and hopes that the Soviet trade exhibition to be held here next month will provide impetus to that.

He said the increased trade volume will only benefit Thailand which is facing protectionism with its traditional trading partners in the West.

He said the Soviet Union attaches importance to improving relations with Thailand and the relations have been revitalized recently.

He said Moscow will support a meeting between ASEAN and Indochinese countries to "normalize the situation around Kampuchea" and to create "good neighbours" between the two groups of countries.

He said Moscow will guarantee any agreement which results from such a meeting.

SITTHI ON GORBACHEV PROPOSAL; THACH REMARKS

BK050049 Bangkok THE NATION in English 5 Sep 86 pp 1, 2

[Excerpt] Thailand will "play it cool" in responding to the fresh Soviet overture to Asia-Pacific nations from Mikhail Gorbachev in his Vladivostok initiative and followed up by this week's visit here by a senior Soviet official, Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila told THE NATION yesterday.

In his first response to the new Soviet move in last July, Sitthi said that Bangkok would wait and see whether "the Russians can match their words with deeds. [no closing quotation marks as published]

The statement, regarded as a keynote speech by the new Soviet leader about his policy towards the Asian and Pacific region, calls for the creation of a peaceful atmosphere by halting nuclear proliferation and arms race as well as improvement in Soviet ties with China and ASEAN.

Sitthi said that when ASEAN foreign ministers meet in New York later this month, they would evaluate the new Soviet overture and the joint communique by the Indochinese foreign ministers.

"But I don't think there is the need for us to come up with a joint response to the Vladivostok initiative and the Indochinese ministers' communique. They are not so important for," he said.

Thailand will also take the same position towards the recent Vietnamese move launched when its Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach invited Hanoi-based ASEAN ambassadors to a banquet. "This is a good gesture and there are other indications that Vietnam would tone down its position on Kampuchea in the foreseeable future but we should not jump to conclusions now. We have to wait and see," he said. [sentence as published]

Sitthi also said that he had not made up his mind whether to visit Moscow at the invitation of his counterpart. Director of the Asian Affairs Anatoliy Zaytsev visited here early this week and reaffirmed the invitation to Sitthi.

Foreign Ministry officials said that Zaytsev failed to provide new information on the new Soviet overture. "I am personally disappointed that the Russian official only repeated the Vladivostok initiative but at least the visit was a visible expression of their seriousness on the problems," one official said.

In allusion to the Kampuchean conflict, the Vladivostok initiative calls for Sino-Vietnamese ties normalization to remove Chinese military pressure on the northern frontier of Vietnam and talks between ASEAN and the Indochinese states to settle their problems.

Zaytsev took note of a Thai view that peace envisaged in the Vladivostok initiative could not be achieved unless the Russians played a constructive role in ending the Kampuchean conflict. He also pledged to report the Thai view to his superior on returning to Moscow. [passage omitted]

LAO ENVOY ON ATMOSPHERE OF 'NEW FRIENDSHIP'

[Text] The Laotian ambassador to Bangkok yesterday urged Thailand and Laos to forget their past border disputes and look forward to forging closer relations.

Ambassador Khamphan Simmalavong told THE NATION in an interview at the Laotian Embassy that both countries had shown willingness to resume dialogues and a desire to improve their ties which have been strained in the past few years by a series of problems along their common border; the most controversial of which concerns the dispute over three villages on the Thai-Laotian border.

The two countries both claimed ownership in 1984 over the three villages bordering the northern province of Uttaradit in Thailand. The dispute has since marred their relationships though Thailand has repeatedly said it is not a problem.

Khamphan said Thailand and Laos should "let bygones be bygones."

"We should not dwell on the past because it could easily cause misunderstanding. Now that the atmosphere is conducive to creating new friendship, we should move forward," he said.

Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila last week sent a message to Vietnamese pledging readiness to improve the bilateral relations "in the spirit of brotherhood and neighbourliness." It was in response to a similar message from Laotian Foreign Minister Phoun Sipaseut. Sitthi reaffirmed Thailand's determination to promote closer relations with Laos.

The ambassador also proposed that since this year is the "International Year of Peace" the two countries should institute exchange programmes between mass organizations to strengthen understanding between the two peoples. Khamphan said there should be exchanges of academicians and students at the national level and at the provincial level, contacts such as sports and cultural exchanges should be resumed as soon as possible.

During the past few months, he said, the situation along the border has been good because both nations have avoided disputes, reducing the tension between the two neighbours.

On the Laotian refugees in Thailand waiting to be repatriated, Khamphan said although his government would like to take back as many refugees as possible, there are still certain obstacles.

He said that Vientiane had to make sure that there would be places for the returnees and that they would receive proper vocational training.

As the bilateral ties progress, he said Laos would like to see Thailand remove the embargo on 273 items of "strategic goods" which include products such as monosodium glutamate, bicycle and auto spare parts.

On the international front, he said that the international situation has improved gradually following the summit between the U.S. President Ronald Reagan and the Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev last year.

Khamphan also referred to Gorbachev's speech made in Vladivostok that Moscow wanted to impove the relations with ASEAN countries and the recent Indochinese communique issued in Hanoi that Vietnam, Laos, and Kampuchea also wanted better relations with China, Thailand and ASEAN.

The three Indochinese foreign ministries said in the communique that they supported a recent declaration of Kaysone Phomvihan, the chairman of the Council of Ministers of Laos, on Vientiane's readiness to "do its utmost at the national as well as regional level" to foster mutual understanding and confidence with Thailand in order to normalize their relations in all fields.

SITTHI ON LAO RELATIONS; THACH STATEMENT

[Text] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila yesterday expressed hope that Thai-Lao relations would improve and said that provinces along the border have been ordered to begin talks with local Laotian officials.

ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi's statement was the first sign of improvement in relations between the two countries since the dispute over three border villages in late 1984.

"Let us forget the old quarrels," ACM Sitthi said. He described as "encouraging" a recent statement by the Laotian Government that it was ready to hold talks with Thailand at any level.

Vientiane had previously insisted on talks at the national level only, ACM Sitthi said.

The minister said he had reciprocated the Laotians' friendly gesture by asking the Interior Ministry to order the governors of border provinces to hold talks with Laotian officials and to try to organise joint activities that would help promote relations such as sports events.

ACM Sitthi said he would also ask Laos to accept about 1,200 Laotians who had been declassified as refugees by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. Some 120 of them had already been segregated as the first batch to be repatriated, he said.

ACM Sitthi said he would raise the issue with his Laotian counterpart Phoun Sipaseut when they meet at the UN headquarters later this month.

ACM Sitthi will leave for New York on September 19.

Meanwhile, ACM Sitthi also welcomed Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's statement to ASEAN diplomats in Hanoi last week that Hanoi would eventually like to join ASEAN and hoped that the ASEAN member countries would not close the door when the time came.

But ACM Sitthi cautioned against jumping to the conclusion that Mr Thach's statement represented a change in Vietnam's regional policy.

CABINET INCREASES BUDGET 1.5 BILLION BHAT

BK030155 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 3 Sep 86 p 13

[Excerpt] The Cabinet yesterday decided to raise the investment expenditure for the next fiscal year, starting next month, by 1,500 million baht to stimulate the economy, Finance Minister Dr Suthi Singsaen said after the Cabinet meeting.

The increase of the investment expenditure will alter the total budget originally set at 226,000 million baht for the 1987 fiscal year to 227,500 million baht.

When compared to the budget amount of 211,650 million baht of this fiscal year, which was reduced from the original amount of 218,000 million baht, the 1987 budget will have a growth rate of 7.49 percent, instead of 6.78 percent as initially planned.

However, Dr Suthi said that as Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon announced in the government policy statement, the ceiling of domestic borrowing will not be allowed to increase from the amount of 42,000 million baht.

Before yesterday's meeting, next year's fiscal budget was set at 226,000 million baht and the Finance Ministry has set a target of the revenue collections of 184,000 million baht, making a shortfall of 42,000 million baht which the Finance Ministry is to borrow from the domestic market.

The policy of Gen Prem to limit the domestic borrowing at 42,000 million baht means that the Finance Ministry will have to seek revenues from other sources to offset the higher shortfall.

Dr Suthi said that the Finance Ministry will consider whether it can boost, in any way, the tax collections.

However, it is noted that the revenue collections are unlikely to increase from the target of 184,000 million baht.

This year, the Finance Ministry had to adjust the target twice. The collection target was originally set at 185,000 million baht and was reduced to 165,000 million baht and again to 162,000 million baht.

Although the target for next year was set at 184,000 million baht, lower than the original target of this fiscal year, it is expected that it will not be an easy job for the Government as the economy has not yet fully recovered.

However, Dr Suthi said that Prime Minister Prem has allowed the Finance Ministry to seek money from the Oil Fund to offset the higher shortfall.

The Oil Fund's outstanding balance currently amounts to 4.166 million baht, according to an informed source. [passage omitted]

VO CHI CONG ADDRESSES NATIONAL DAY MEETING

BK041252 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 2 Sep 86

["Text" of Political Bureau member Vo Chi Cong's speech at 1 September Hanoi National Day meeting -- read by announcer]

[Text] Respected and beloved Comrade Truong Chinh, general secretary of the CPV and chairman of the Council of State; respected and beloved Comrade Pham Van Dong; dear presidium members; dear comrades and members of the diplomatic corps and other foreign guests; and dear comrades and friends, on behalf of the CPV Central Committee and the SRV Government, I solemnly convey my warmest greetings to all beloved comrades, compatriots, and combatants in the country and our overseas compatriots as well. I sincerely thank the comrades and friends in the diplomatic corps and other foreign guests for your presence here.

Forty-one years ago, in August 1945, the Vietnamese people throughout the country, from the north to the center and the south, after 15 years of courageous struggle, closely united within the Viet Minh Front and led by the Communist Party of Vietnam, firmly grasping the favorable opportunity created by the victory of the Soviet Union and other antifascist forces over Nazi fascism in Europe and Japanese militarism in Asia, rose up and simultaneously, overthrew the colonial regime, and set up their own revolutionary power.

The August revolution took place through the harmonious combination of armed struggle with political struggle and limited uprisings with general uprisings; and through coordination between the urban and rural areas and between the clear-sighted and centralized leadership of the central government and the determination, dynamism, and creativity of all leading echelons and people throughout the country. This revolution succeeded quickly and very gloriously, opening a shining new page in our nation's history.

On 2 September 1945, at Ba Dinh Square, President Ho Chi Minh, the great leader of the Vietnamese revolution, read a declaration of independence, establishing the Democratic Republic Vietnam, the first worker-peasant state in Southeast Asia, opening a new era in our country's history.

Continuing the historic tasks of the August revolution, our people and their armed forces staged the two sacred, victorious resistance struggles to defeat the two major imperialists -- France and the United States -- liberated and unified the country, and led the entire country to socialism. Another turning point had occurred in our country's history.

This year, our people celebrate the 41st anniversary of the August revolution and National Day at a time when our party is actively preparing for its Sixth National Party Congress where it will review the successes and achievements of our revolution since the Fifth Party Congress and the experiences in revolutionary leadership and define the orientations, tasks, and objectives for the coming years.

We celebrate the 41st anniversary of the August revolution and National Day after our people have fulfilled the 1981-85 state plan and have begun the next 5-year state plan (1986-90). We obtained many important achievements in carrying out the 1981-85 plan. However, several objectives and targets fell below the mark. Entering the 1986-90 state plan, we still face many difficulties such as materials, energy, commodities, finance, money, prices, and market control. Nevertheless, uniting around the party, our entire Army and people are striving to carry out basic and urgent measures to surmount these difficulties gradually, stabilize production and life, distribution and circulation, and prices.

More than ever before, the strength of all-people solidarity is the important guarantee for all new victories of the revolution. Just as in the past half century, every time the revolution faced fierce ordeals, the stability and the high sense of responsibility of the party -- all party members unanimously uniting around the party -- was the important and decisive factor in changing the situation.

We all remember that the revolution was in a very dangerous situation on several previous occasions, but the party's clear-sightedness and the people's steadiness turned defeats into victories. Now, although the revolution faces no small difficulties, they are merely temporary and can certainly be overcome.

Dear comrades and friends, it is actually not easy to analyze correctly and objectively the comprehensive situation of the revolution in our country, especially the socioeconomic situation, because the overall view is rather complicated. Despite successes and achievements, there are still some sluggish aspects, and despite what is correct there are mistakes and shortcomings.

At the recent 10th plenum of the party Central Committee, the overall situation of fundamental tasks were presented and self-criticism was frankly conducted to admit mistakes and shortcomings and to define remedial measures. The conferences of cadres at all levels will gradually review tasks and carry out criticism and self-criticism. This is a great, broad democratic action drive in our party and society.

With an objective attitude and scientific methods, we certainly have an accurate view and can make correct decisions on the various issues concerning lines, policies, objectives, and measures. How have we carried out the tasks and objectives set by the Fifth Party Congress?

Agriculture is the foremost front. Agricultural production in the past years has obviously made substantial progress, especially in food production, industrial crops, husbandry, and land reclamation. The annual tempo of agricultural development in the 1981-85 period was 4.9 percent. Especially, food production increased from 14.4 million metric tons in 1980 to 18.2 million in 1985 despite unfavorable weather and shortages in material supplies. As a result, the annual per capita food production rose from 268 kilograms in 1980 to 304 kilograms in 1985. Nevertheless, the food problem has not been completely solved on a national scale, and food production remains unstable.

Industry has also undergone some definite changes, especially small industry, handicrafts, and local industry. The annual increase of industrial production in the 1981-85 period was 9.5 percent.

In the past years, the southern rural areas have changed and are changing socioeconomically. The exploitative class has been essentially wiped out. Large numbers of peasants have entered the path of collective work. The vestiges and consequences of colonialism are being overcome. A new life has begun.

In the countryside nationwide, socialist production relations continue to be consolidated qualitatively while we gradually improve the management system and expand the autonomy of basic economic units in production and business.

In the matter of material and technical bases of socialism, about 300 major projects have been completed in addition to thousands of medium-and small-sized projects. Fixed capital in 1985 increased by nearly threefold over 1976.

This will not be a small productive force if it is reorganized and used in a balanced and effective way. In the whole of the country, the first material and technical bases of socialism are being laid.

Remarkable achievements have also been recorded in culture, education, public health, science and technology, literature, and art. Through 11 years of building socialism, our people have continued to uphold their revolutionary heroism and their tradition of labor and creativity and have created new and valuable factors.

In the defense of the motherland and the maintenance of political security and social order, our People's Armed Forces and security forces, by fighting courageously and overcoming all difficulties and hardships, have won important successes in countering the land-grabbing attacks on the border and the multifaceted war of sabotage by the hostile forces outside the country.

On the occasion of this glorious national day celebration, the CPV Central Committee, the Council of State, and the Council of Ministers would like to inquire solicitously about the health of all the war invalids and ill soldiers and the families of fallen heroes and to commend warmly the compatriots and combatants nationwide as well as the cadres of various echelons and sectors for their great, praiseworthy contributions to the cause of socialist construction and national defense.

Our victories and successes are very valuable because they are the fruits of a hard struggle in a situation in which the country, immediately after being freed from many long wars for national liberation, has had to cope with a new war and to fight against the policy of encirclement and blockade of the imperialists and the international reactionaries.

Our successes are the direct results of the party's correct lines approved at the Fourth and Fifth CPV Congresses. The general lines of the socialist revolution -- the economic development line, the national defense line, and the international line of the party -- are very correct, for they are imbued with popular principles of Marxism-Leninism, which are inseparable from the reality of our country.

We have, however, also committed mistakes while substantiating our policy lines in the initial stage, especially in matters of determining economic, management, distribution, and circulation structures and applying the objective economic laws of the transitional period.

Errors, subjectivism, impatience, haste, aloofness from reality and the masses, bureaucracy, subsidization, conservatism, procrastination, liberalism, fragmentation, and indiscipline are major obstacles to development and create chaotic and negative phenomena in economic and social activities.

From the central down to the grass-roots levels, various echelons and sectors must, through the party congresses at all levels and the national party congress, conduct criticism and self-criticism and examine and review all fields of our activities.

We affirm that our party and the compatriots nationwide are fully capable of and qualified to assess correctly the overall situation, analyze correctly successful and unsuccessful lessons, and determine accurately the immediate orientation and objectives of the revolution in the advance toward stabilizing the overall situation and pushing our country ahead.

Our economy is now on the initial stage of socialism. There are many imbalances that we cannot promptly overcome. But our existing potentials are also not meager. Furthermore, we are enjoying great assistance from the Soviet Union and are broadening our cooperation with fraternal countries of CEMA.

With efforts directed at exploiting our existing capabilities in manpower, land, and production potentials already built up, we must concentrate our capital and materials on developing agriculture, forestry, fishery, consumer and export goods producing industries, and those heavy industries that directly serve these production branches.

We must work out a program for economic development based on practical capabilities and ensure all the necessary conditions to fulfill it. Our people want to see an improvement in the way of thinking and working that can ensure higher and practical efficiency.

Many urgent problems are arising and need to be tackled. They are the ones encountered in the field of distribution and circulation, in which we have made mistakes.

We must first strive to stabilize prices and real wages gradually. To stabilize prices, we must develop production and control the market. The law of values is an objective law. Only by firmly grasping and applying it to the whole system of those laws now developing their effect in our country's society during the transitional period -- with specific laws of socialism playing a leading role -- and fully understanding plans, the market, and goods-money relations can we control production, circulation, and distribution, thereby generating a strong momentum for socioeconomic development.

On the basis of applying various objective laws correctly, the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers are trying to study and take effective steps aimed at stabilizing production, circulation, distribution, prices, and the lives of our people of all strata.

Dear comrades and friends, the party Central Committee has passed a draft political report for discussion by the entire party and approval by the Sixth Party Congress. At production, work, and residential units, mass organizations will hold discussions to contribute their views to the party on socioeconomic programs for the coming years and on other important issues of our country. Through the mass media, direct meetings, and letters, cadres and the people have enthusiastically responded to the party Central Committee's appeal and contributed their opinions to party congresses at all levels and the national party congress. A broad emulation movement is being organized everywhere to score achievements to welcome the party congress. These are vivid signs eloquently proving that the close bonds between the party and the people and the identity of will and action displayed by the entire party when the revolution is developing favorably as well as when it is faced with complex trials constitute the invincible strength of the revolution.

Revolution is always an undertaking of the people, and the people are those who decide all the successes of the revolution. The party comes from the people and strives for the people's happiness. In the face of immediate difficulties, the party must rely on the people to overcome them. The compatriots throughout the country have clearly displayed their unity around the party by sincerely contributing their views, providing criticism, and offering suggestions while striving to overcome difficulties and step up production and other activities.

The common denominator of the aspirations of our cadres, compatriots, and combatants is expressed in the demand that we change our way of thinking and style of doing business; the demand that we truly transform all our activities; the views criticizing the ills of bureaucratic centralism, the lack of organization and discipline, and irresponsible business methods that fail to consider socioeconomic efficiency as the primary criterion; the opinions strongly condemning officialism and disregard for the masses' legitimate interests; and the stern condemnation against and the demand that the most effective measures be taken to put an end to illegal business practices and negative manifestations concerning lifestyle and ethics.

The demand for new and effective business methods is a revolutionary requirement. The demand for building a society and a lifestyle characterized by ethics and discipline is also an important revolutionary requirement. Such changes will surely generate a new strength and a new vitality for our society.

The people also demand that the party cleanse its ranks and purify the state organs in order to guarantee at all costs the people's right to mastery. These are very legitimate demands that reflect our society's political maturity; and they are also the very potentials of our society and our country's revolution. Highly respecting the views and suggestions of cadres, compatriots, and combatants, the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers are studying them with high revolutionary spirit.

Considering the general difficulties facing our national economy, everyone understands that our life cannot change immediately. More than ever before, everyone must now strive to work, produce, and practice thrift, upholding diligence, thrift, honesty, and justice to contribute to the common cause. Since the party and state are determined to correct shortcomings and mistakes in socioeconomic management, find new business methods, rely on the people and vigorously develop the laboring people's right to collective mastery, it is certain that we will achieve the socioeconomic targets already set.

Dear comrades and friends, concerning the world situation, we are interested first of all and follow with special pleasure the vigorous development of the revolutionary, progressive, and peace-loving forces throughout the world. The socialist community -- the factor deciding the development of the international situation -- is embarking on a new, very important stage of development which will surely lead to even broader and deeper changes when mankind enters the 3d millenium. The 27th CPSU Congress was a historic milestone marking the comprehensive development of the land of the October Revolution and a new step of development of Marxism-Leninism. The extremely rich experience of realistic socialism in the Soviet Union was recapitulated. This is a valuable treasure and an unprecedented source of strength for the world revolution. The broad reforms being carried out in the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries are creating a new strength and an extremely massive upsurge of dynamism and creativity. The economic forces, scientific-techological as well as cultural and social potentials, and the lifestyle of socialism are being harnessed and developed most satisfactorily. The superiority, appeal, and prestige of socialism are increasing before the laboring people and freedom-loving nations the world over.

The biggest obstacle to the development of socialism and man's life is the arms race conducted by U.S.-led imperialism. The world situation is now extremely grave. The danger of a nuclear war is reaching unprecedented levels. Imperialism is the mastermind of a world war and the biggest oppressor, exploiter, troublemaker, and international terrorist.

Preserving peace and repelling the danger of a nuclear holocaust has become a central and urgent task of the entire world. Mankind, not resigning itself to wait for a nuclear disaster to come, is standing up and taking action. Mankind has great material and spiritual strength with which to answer the challenges of imperialism. This is the irreversible equilibrium of the means of retaliation. The Soviet Union and other socialist countries do not use strategic weapons as a threat for political backmail; and they have taken the initiative of putting forward a program for nuclear disarmament in three stages aimed at saving the whole of mankind from the nightmare of a nuclear holocaust before the coming of the 21st century.

Our party, state and people totally support the Soviet Union's renowned peace initiatives successively put forward since April 1985. We warmly respond to and coordinate actions with the Soviet Union in connection with the peace initiative for the Asia-Pacific region announced by Comrade Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, in his speech deliverd on 28 July in Vladivostok. The Soviet Union's decision to unilaterally extend the moratorium on nuclear tests till 1 January 1987 once again proves the goodwill for pace of the largest socialist country. Exactly as Comrade General Secretary Truong Chinh put it, this initiative is deeply imbued with the spirit of the 27th CPSU Congress; and it clearly reflects the loftiest goal of socialism of constantly consolidating peace and the security of nations.

As in the past, today solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union and total reliance on its all-round assistance constitute the principle and fundamental policy of our party and state. The talks between the Soviet party and state delegation headed by Comrade Gorbachev and our party and state delegation headed by Comrade Le Duan back in June 1985 as well as the recent meeting between Comrade CPSU Central Committee General Secretary Gorbachev and Comrade CPV Central Committee General Secretary Truong Chinh markerd new steps of progress and a new quality in the solidarity and comprehensive cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union. At its 19 August 1986 meeting, our party Political Bureau highly appreciated the vigrous support and valuable assistance given by the Soviet party, government, and people to our people in their undertaking to build socialism and defend the fatherland.

On this occasion, we once again express our sincere gratitude to the fraternal Soviet party, government, and people.

The strategic alliance between Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia is not very fine. This is a favorable condition for the revolution in each country to continue advancing. Solidarity, cooperation, and mutual assistance constitute the principle and the law government the development of the revolution in our country as well as of the Lao and Cambodian revolutions.

Our people continue to do their best to contribute toward strengthening solidarity and comprehensive cooperation and consolidating the firm alliance of the three countries on the Indochinese peninsula in their common struggle to safeguard revolutionary gains and build a new life in each country.

Solidarity and cooperation with all fraternal socialist countries on the principles of socialist internationalism has become a reason for the survival of our people and an inevitable condition of our country's revolution. The international factor always remains important for the success of the Vietnamese revolution. We totally support the Mexico statement issued by leaders of six countries -- India, Mexico, Argentina, Tanzania, Greece, and Sweden -- in the interest of peace and nuclear disarmament.

In the spirit of the August Revolution, National Day of 2 September, and our people's wars of resistance against aggression by imperialism, we once again declare our warm support for and stand on the side of the struggles for independence, democracy, and social progress of all nations. We are always standing by the side of the just struggles of the peoples of South Africa, Namibia, El Salvador, Chile, Palestine, Lebanon, and Haiti. We are always standing by the side of heroic Nicaragua.

Now and in the future, just as before, we -- in our capacity as a member -- will always remain loyal to the lofty goals and progressive policy against imperialism and colonialism of the Nonaligned Movement and support the clear-sighted decisions of this movement. We hold in very high regard the important role India, chairman of the Nonaligned Movement, and strongly support the movement's eighth summit now being held in Harare, the capital of the Republic of Zimbabwe.

We continue to struggle for peace and stability in Southeast Asia and persist in the policy of peaceful coexistence and friendship between countries having different social systems in this region. We call for contacts, normalization of relations, frank dialogue, and mutual respect between the group of Indochinese countries and the group of ASEAN countries.

The Vietnamese people highly cherish their traditional intimate friendship with the Chinese people. The Vietnamese and Chinese peoples once united with and supported each other in their struggle against imperialism. The two countries share the same interests of peace, independence, and economic and cultural development. We want to look toward the future and wish to restore normal and friendly relations with China at any level, any time, and anywhere in order to resolve realistic issues in bilateral relations and issues of mutual interest.

Dear comrades and friends, the revolutionary state of the Vietnamese people founded 41 years ago has undergone a series of trials and has constantly grown big and strong. In the process of conducting the socialist revolution, the SRV has gained new, great sources of strength -- national independence and freedom, reunification of the country, the laboring people becoming genuine collective masters of society, and militant solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. All our party, people, and army are closely uniting around the party Central Committee to successfully carry out the two strategic tasks of building socialism and defending the Vietnamese socialist fatherland. No difficulties or challenges can prevent Vietnam from advancing on the glorious road to socialism.

All for the socialist fatherland, all the people's happiness!

Long live the spirit of the August Revolution and National Day of 2 September!

Long live the glorious CPV!

President Ho Chi Minh Lives Forever in our Cause!

Thank you, comrades and friends.

AQUINO VIEWS TALKS WITH MUSLIM LEADERS

OW050229 Tokyo KYODO in English 0048 GMT 5 Sep 86

[Text] Manila, Sept. 5 KYODO -- President Corazon Aquino, who will hold talks with Muslim rebel leader Nur Misuari Friday, expressed confidence about resolving the 14-year old Muslim secessionist rebellion in a meeting with Muslim and Christian leaders Thursday on the eve of her trip to the southern Philippines. "There is room enough within the broad conception of Philippine democracy for all manners of ideas, cultures and societies to coexist and thrive," a presidential press statement quoted her as saying during a dinner she hosted for the leaders at the Malacanang Palace. "What is needed," she said, "is our mutual respect and support for the wide spectrum of ideas and cultures that make up the diversity of this one nation under God."

Misuari, chairman of the Moro National Liberation Front, returned from 14 years of self-exile in the Middle East to attend the four-day Bangsa Moro Congress which began last Tuesday on Jolo Island, Sulu Province, about 950 kilometers south of Manila.

Among those invited at the dinner was Ali Dimaporo, former governor of Lanao Del Sur Province in the main southern Philippine island of Mindanao and a staunch supporter of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos. It was not confirmed whether he attended the palace dinner. Also invited were former Sulu Governor Tupay Loong, Muslim Princess Tarhata Lucman of Lanao, central Mindanao regional military commander Brig. Gen. Rodrigo Gutang, businessman Jesus Ayala from the city of Davao, former MNLF commander Nur Khan and Zamboanga Bishop Frederico Escaler, who was kidnapped and released unharmed by Muslim rebels last year.

"I have invited you here to break bread with me because you are among the chief leaders of Mindanao," she said. "The peace and progress of Mindanao depends on your support." She said she will "fly south to meet with the other leaders who were not able to make it here" to complete the "circle of leadership" of southern Philippines which she will consult regarding the problems of Mindanao.

The meeting with the MNLF leader is expected to pave the way for a peaceful settlement to the fierce guerrilla war waged by the Bangsa Moro Army (BMA), the MNLF's military arm, against the Manila government since 1972. Tens of thousands of people died in the fighting in Mindanao in the early 1970s, with the killing continuing even after the 1976 Tripoli Agreement which granted autonomy to Muslim areas in Mindanao.

Meanwhile, the state-run PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY reported from the central Mindanao city of Cotabato that one of the three factions of the MNLF, the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), will not honor any agreement between Misuari and Aquino. The report quoted MILF vice chairman for military affairs, Al Haj Murad, saying that the faction's involvement in the talks "is a must." Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel [Ramos] flew to Mindanao Thursday but the state-run news agency said their role in the Aquino-Misuari talks would be "advisory."

Separatists Denounce Talks

[Excerpt] [passage omitted] Yesterday [4 September] President Aquino sought the full support of Muslim and of Christian political and religious leaders of Mindanao in her efforts to bring about peace and progress in that region.

She made the appeal at a dinner she hosted at Malacanang for the Muslim and Christian leaders on the eve of her departure for Zamboanga and Jolo where she will initiate consultations with the people there on the direction of her government's policy in those areas. The president said she will also meet with Muslim separatist leader Misuari in Jolo to explore measures to be taken to solve the 14-year-old Mindanao problem.

Meanwhile the scheduled peace talks between President Aquino and Nur Misuari is meeting opposition from the Mindanao Independence Movement led by Reuben Canoy and other Muslim rebel factions. From Cotabato City a report said Moro Islamic Liberation Front [MILF] vice chairman Al Haj Murad said his faction will not honor any agreement reached by President Aquino and Misuari. In an interview with the PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY [PNA] at one of his mountain hide-outs in Maguindanao Province, MILF vice chairman for military affairs and chief of staff of the Bangsa Moro [Muslim Nation] Islamic Armed Forces Murad said the MILF participative involvement in the peace talks is a must to make an agreement with the Philippine Government binding.

In Zamboanga City, former Batasang Pambansa Assemblyman Reuben Canoy, founder of the Mindanao Independent Movement, branded the proposed peace dialogue between President Aquino and Misuari as a ploy to perpetuate the status of Mindanao as a colonized region. Canoy, in an interview with PNA, said autonomy, as provided for in the proposed Aquino Constitution being framed by an appointive commission, is nothing but an expression of intent which has to be detailed and defined. He said only complete and full independence will bring peace to Mindanao.

MNLF CHIEF STANDS FIRM ON SECESSION DEMAND

[By Roy Ramos]

[Text] Jolo, Sulu -- MNLF Chairman Nur Misuari yesterday maintained his original demands of creating an independent Mindanao republic composed of all the provinces in Mindanao and Palawan.

Misuari said it is not a question of dismemberment because "ever since, history will tell you that we have been independent in Mindanao until after the Americans came. The US imposed their will upon us Moros in Mindanao.

"So secession is not the question," said Misuari in a press conference together with Agapito 'Butz' Aquino under a nipa hut in Maimbung, site of the second Bangsa Moro Congress. Maimbung is 13 kilometers from Jolo town proper.

Misuari, clad in camouflage jungle clothes, said he would discuss with President Aquino in a peace dialogue the results of the Moro congress. The Aquino-Misuari dialogue will be on Friday.

Misuari said he does not recognize the autonomy provision approved by the Con-Com [Constitutional Commission] "because it does not have the mandate of the Moro people." On the Tripoli Agreement, Misuari said this was declared null and void by Marcos and he will also consider it void.

But Misuari and Butz Aquino stressed that the Tripoli Pact may be used as reference point in granting autonomy in Mindanao. Misuari added: "The struggle is not the question of majority or minority (referring to the population of Christians and Muslims in Mindanao). The point is that Mindanao is our homeland."

However, the MNLF chairman said that if independence of Mindanao is attained, Christians in his region will be given equal rights as the Moros.

The congress opened yesterday morning with a gun salute and the raising of Bangsa Moro flag.

It was followed by a speech by Misuari which was interrupted several times by cheers from some 20,000 delegates. The delegates include high-ranking MNLF commanders from Lanao, Cotabato, Davao, Marawi, Palawan and the two Zamboanga provinces. Other delegates came from the professional, business, youth, and labor sectors and sympathizers of the MNLF cause.

Security was tight. MNLF guerillas numbering some 3,000, armed with sophisticated firearms, were scattered along the 8-kilometer route to Maimbong.

Misuari said the MNLF over-all force in Mindanao is 200,000. However the military said it is only 5,000.

Aquino Firm Against Secession

HK051123 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in Tagalog 1100 GMT 5 Sep 86

[Text] No portion of the Republic of the Philippines shall be ceded. This was the firm statement pronounced by President Corazon Aquino in her short remarks upon arrival in Jolo, Sulu at 0830 this morning. She said that Mindanao is for all, be it Christian or Muslims. It belongs to the republic and to the heroes who fought and died for the Republic of the Philippines. The chief executive came to Jolo for historic peace talks with Muslim secessionist leader Nur Misuari. The presidential party landed at the airport in Fort General Bautista in Busbos and from there the party proceeded to the town proper. People lined the streets to welcome the presidential party and to catch a glimpse of the president.

AQUINO, MISUARI MEET ON JOLO ISLAND

[Text] President Corazon Aquino met this morning the MNLF chairman Nur Misuari to discuss a solution to the fighting in Mindanao. The PHILIPPINES NEWS AGENCY reported that Aquino and Misuari met inside a mosque on Jolo Island, a stronghold of the MNLF. No details were given, but it was reported that the meeting took place after Aquino arrived in Jolo on board an air force plane from Manila. Misuari returned to the Philippines after years of living in Libya and Saudi Arabia.

Agree on 1 Week Cease-Fire

[Excerpt] Manila, Sept 5 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino and Moslem rebel chief Nur Misuari agreed to a one-week ceasefire Friday at a meeting aimed at solving the 14-year old separatist rebellion in the south, the PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY (PNA) said here. The state run agency said a week-long halt on military operations by government troops and Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) guerrillas would allow the continuation of talks aimed at finding a permanent settlement to the rebellion.

The meeting between Mrs. Aquino and Mr. Misuari was held at a mosque on the remote southern island of Jolo, site of many of the bloodiest episodes of the MNLF's guerrilla campaign to establish a separate state for the five million Moslems in the southern Philippines. PNA did not say when or where future talks will take place or who the negotiators to such talks would be.

Mrs. Aquino later made a brief stopover in the nearby southern city of Zamboanga before flying back to Manila, where a press briefing on the talks are scheduled later Friday. [passage omitted]

To Form Panels for Talks

[Excerpt] Jolo, Philippines, Sept 5 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino and Moslem rebel chief Nur Misuari agreed to continue an informal ceasefire and open peace talks at a meeting here Friday. A joint statement issued after the talks said the two leaders will form panels "for substantive negotiations to be carried out in the future under the auspices of the Organization of the Islamic Conference."

The government panel is to be headed by Major General Jose Magno, the Armed Forces comander for Mindanao and other southern islands where the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) has been waging a 14-year-old guerrilla war for a separate Moslem state. The MNLF panel is to be headed by Abdul Sahrin, chief of military intelligence for the MNLF armed forces, the statement said.

(Information Minister Teodoro Locsin told a news conference in Manila after returning with Mrs Aquino from Jolo that the two leaders met behind closed doors in a convent of the Roman Catholic Carmelite order in Jolo. He could not give further details, saying that nobody else was in the room where the two leaders met.)

The joint statement said the two leaders met for two hours "to talk peace." "They agreed to support the continued cessation of hostilities," the statement added, referring to an informal ceasefire observed bv the military and the rebels shortly after Mrs Aquino came to power following a popular revolt in February.

Apart from the two officials from both sides, Mrs Aquino appointed her brother-in-law and emissary to the MNLF Agapito "Butz" Aquino as "civilian coordinator" for the peace talks. Mr Misuari also appointed his aide, Ustadz Shariff Jain Jale, as a "civilian coordinator." "The meeting ended on a note of sincerity and hope," the statement added. [passage omitted]

In an apparent effort to clarify the boycott campaign launched by left-leaning organizations in recent elections, Sison said: "We must participate in election campaigns if these are relatively clean and honest, and if the people have a good chance of electing candidates, or of using the elections to discredit what needs to be discredited and advancing the revolutionary cause of the people."

The PNB's two-day National Congress was called to discuss various national, regional and sectoral resolutions which were submitted for the body's consideration as well as elect the party's national officers. It was expected to draw in some 1,000 regional delegates representing some 50,000 charter members from the country's 13 regions.

The resolutions included eight which had been drafted by the party's Preparatory Commission (Prepcom) and which were submitted for adoption by the body at large. These resolutions indicated the character of the PNB party platform.

Among such resolutions were those asking support for a genuine land reform program, the "pro-people anti-imperialist and nationalist initiatives" in the Constitutional Commission (Con-Com), and the pursuit of nationalist industrialization and opposition to domination of the economy by transnational firms.

Other resolutions drafted by the Prepcom included one which pushed for autonomous Cordillera and Moro regions; another which condemned an alleged "anti-communist witch-hunt" which the Prepcom said serves no other purpose except "to make it appear that the Aquino government is coddling communists and to create among the people a state of mind similar to the months preceding the declaration of martial rule in 1972"; and another which opposed the presence of American military bases in the country.

The Prepcom likewise included a resolution stating clearly PNB's support for the "democratic initiatives" of the Aquino government while condemning attempts to restore "fascist" rule by either a coup or other means by the military as well as other moves by the civilian bureaucracy to erode the gains achieved by the Aquino administration.

The resolution calling for support of the Aquino government's "democratic initiatives" did not mean all-out support for the administration, stressed some party officials. In fact, acting PNB secretary-general Alan Jazmines said he foresaw a major debate on the question.

Vows to Dismantle U.S. Bases

HK011302 Manila THE MANILA TIMES in English 1 Sep 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Members of the left-leaning Partido ng Bayan (PnB) [People's Party] yesterday vowed to dismantle the American bases in the country and neutralize the continuing dominance of multinational corporations once they assume power.

In resolutions passed yesterday at the end of the two-day national founding congress at the Folk Arts Theater (FAT) on Roxas Boulevard, PnB delegates unanimously opposed the presence of the US bases, saying this constitutes a form of continuing aggression against the Filipino people and transgression of Philippine sovereignty,

The said the country is under threat of attack by enemies of the US in the event of a nuclear war because of the presence of these bases.

The bases, the PnB members said, have also bred prostitution and a host of social problems in the communities that surround them.

On the other hand, the PnB criticized the presence of multinational corporations in the country, saying they are a big stumbling block to the pursuit of nationalist industrialization.

"Industrialization has been carried out only haphazardly and under colonial auspices. With multinationals engaging in the mere assembly or packaging of products for sale here and abroad but without meaningful transfer of technology," PnB said.

The party said this "industrialization" resulted in the slow destruction of the Filipino capitalist class and has plunged the masses to perpetual poverty.

To avoid the same pitfalls, the PnB said it will fight for a genuine industrialization under Filipino direction so that the workers can release their full potentials.

It warned that unless this direction is taken, the country will be perpetually dependent on foreign imports.

The party said these two main issues will be permanently included in its platform of government in future elections.

This early, the party expects to win 20 percent of the seats in the coming local elections next year.

It is said its strength will mainly come from the progressive sectors of the lower and middle class and the oppressed of society, particularly the toiling masses.

The congress also passed resolutions supporting the struggle for autonomy of the Cordillera and Muslim peoples; the pro-people, anti-imperialist and nationalist initiatives of the Constitutional Commission (Con-Com); the struggle for a genuine land reform program, and the prosecution and punishment of all human rights violators.

The PnB members also condemned the anti-Communist witchhunt by certain sectors of the Aquino government as "this only misleads the people and creates an anti-Communist hysteria."

They expressed their full support to the Aquino government, particularly its democratic initiatives, and urged the people to protect and advance the gains of the February Revolution that outsted President Marcos.

Prepares for Elections

[By Ramon R. Isberto]

[Text] Fresh from its founding congress last weekend, the Partido ng Bayan [People's Party -- PB] is preparing to participate in the coming local and national elections. It appears specifically keen on taking the still uncharted course of coalition party politics.

Should it succeed, the fledgling party may graduate from being an electoral experiment by the previously boycott-prone cause-oriented groups into a major wildcard in the changing deck of Philippine electoral politics.

The first item in the new party's agenda, newly-elected PB chairman Rolando M. Olalia told newsmen yesterday, is to register itself with the Commission on Elections.

"We are ready to participate," Olalia said.

Banking on the party's thrust on what it called "new politics" and the "higher level of political awareness of the people," PB officials expressed cautious optimism over the party's electoral prospects. PB vice-president Crispin Beltran said the initial estimates of the party's preparatory commission indicated that it could win 20 percent of the local government posts if elections were to be held immediately.

Party secretary-general Alan Jazmines added that, given adequate preparation, the new party can exceed that estimate. "We had originally targetted getting about 50,000 charter members. Based on the attendance at the congress, we have surpassed that target," he said.

Based on its initial assessment, PB expects to do well in many areas of Mindanao and three regions of the Visayas (Eastern, Western and Central), according to party president Wilfred Asis. He added that the party also expects to score points in the Bicol and Southern Tagalog regions and "some towns" in Metro Manila and the province of Rizal.

Jazmines admitted the party remains "relatively weak" in the two regions of Northern Luzon, except for the Cordillera region where PB aims to post large gains.

Asis, who comes from Agusan del Norte, pointed out that a number of incumbent provincial and municipal officials from the Davao and Agusan provinces have joined the PB and attended last week's congress.

The new party however will have to hurdle serious obstacles. One is the lack of funds, always a critical element for success in electoral politics. Jazmines admitted that although the party was able to raise a "substantial" amount of funds of holding its founding congress, "this was not enough and PB ended up in the red."

PB's other drawback is its lack of experience in the rough-and-tumble world of electoral politics. Its leaders and membership come largely from cause-oriented mass organizations whose main experience with elections and referenda under the Marcos regime has been to boycott these.

Moverover, PB must cope with a "leftish" image that stems partly from its program of action (which includes land reform, "nationalist industrialization" and an independent foreign policy that would be incompatible with the presence of foreign military bases). It also stems partly from the presence of prominent former political detainees in the Marcos era such as Jose Ma. Sison and Bernabe Buscayno. (Sison remains a member but is not an official, preferring instead to concentrate on "political research." Buscayno was elected a director-at-large.)

Previous attempts at organizing a left-of-center party (such as the socialist Party of the Philippines in 1962) floundered in the conservative climate of Philippine electoral politics.

PB officials respond to this concern in two ways. First, it denies accusations that it is just a front of the National Democratic Front and the Communist Party of the Philippines. "We have no links with illegal organizations," Jose Catro, vice-resident for the national capital region, stressed. "Nor [do] we advocate violence."

On the other hand, other PB officials think of transforming the perceived liability into an asset. "It depends on what you mean by 'left.' Orignally, the term referred to which side of the parliament you sat on. Later on, it took the meaning of being progressive and advocating of egalitarian ideas. During the McCarthy era, left meant being communist. As far as we are concerned, PB identifies itself with the workers, peasants and the bulk of the middle class. If that's what you mean by the left, then O.K.," Jazmines said.

In fact, PB is banking on "nationalist and democratic" platform and its advocacy of a "new mass-based popular politics" to gain support. In his speech at the congress, Sison said the new party will shatter the long-standing "monopoly" of traditional parties of electoral politics.

"In Mindanao, people have grown tired of politicians who promise a lot and when they get elected they forget about the people," Asis said. He added that the party hopes to translate the dissatisfacton with "elitist" politics into support for mass-based popular politics.

In any event, PB officials claim that the unsettled state of affairs in the Philippine political scene has created unique opportunities for non-traditional parties such as PB. "Marcos scrapped the traditional two-party system and set up a single-party system. Now, the competing political parties are at rough parity," Jazmines said.

In such a situation, a party that can garner 20 percent of the votes acquires significant leverage, PB vice-chairman Reginaldo Arceo said. "If no single party can get a majority, then there would have to be working coalitions."

In this regard, officials of the PDP-Laban [Pilipino Democratic Party-Lakas ng Bayan] have expressed an interest in putting up a coalition with PB.

LAUREL, OTHERS FAVOR CREATION OF PARTIDO NG BAYAN

HK030617 Dagupan City Radio DZDL in Tagalog 0445 GMT 3 Sep 86

[Text] Vice President and Foreign Minister Salvador H. Laurel announced that he is not opposed to the establishment of the Partido ng Bayan [People's Party] as a political party. He said that ever since he set up the United Nationalist Democratic Organization [Unido] in 1980, he has strongly supported a so-called open and pluralistic society.

At the same time, over at the Constitutional Commission, some commissioners including Edmundo Garcia and Blas F. Ople also favored the creation of the Partido Ng Bayan. Like Laurel, they stated that the birth of the new party is a symbol of a sound and healthy democracy in the Philippines.

Laurel and the others likewise warned that the new party should and must not use armed strength or violence when it registers with the commission on elections in order to become eligible to run in the next local and national elections. In an interview, Laurel stressed that the use of violence by the newly born Partido ng Bayan would disqualify it from taking part in any kind of elections, regular or special.

Meanwhile, former Communist Party of the Philippines chief and founder of the Partido ng Bayan Jose Maria Sison confirmed yesterday that he would not run for president in 1991, but reported that the party would field candidates for congressman, senator, governor, mayor and other offices.

CEBU MILITARY REVEALS REBEL DOCUMENTS

HK260454 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES SUNDAY EXPRESS in English 24 Aug 86 p 3

[By Leo Enriquez]

[Text] Cebu City -- Military authorities here made public Saturday declassified subversive documents, involving a plan by the New People's Army to unleash a series of killings, bombings, robberies, kidnappings and other terroristic activities to create a revolutionary atmosphere designed to embarass the military.

The military said these documents were seized by government forces during raids on known rebel hideouts. The documents were confirmed by several terrorists now under military custody, the armed forces added.

According to the communist plan, this new wave of violence will expose the inability of the military to cope with the growing revolutionary situation in Cebu.

Names of kidnapping targets were not make available although these personalities were understood to be prominent members of the community.

Meanwhile, relatives of self-confessed terrorists under military custody said they have received death threats allegedly from the underground movement.

Allan Climaco, a confessed member of the NPA Sparrow Unit said his parents were warned that everyone in their family will be liquidated if he continues cooperating with the military.

Climaco said it is not surprising for the CPP [Communist Party of the Philippines]/NPA to resort to terroristic activities because they have already lost mass support.

CPP-NPA STEP UP 'TERROR CAMPAIGN' IN CEBU

HK270903 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 26 Aug 86 p 21

[Text] Cebu City -- The Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and its military arm, the New People's Army (NPA), have obviously stepped up their terror campaign in Metropolitan Cebu, according to military authorities.

Col. Edgardo Abenina, Central Visayas Constabulary and police commander said the series of killings in the area is up "to a level of urban terrorism" just like what the CPA-NPA did in Davao City and other known NPA-influenced areas.

Abenina added that the series of killing traced to the NPA "Sparrow Unit" is "pursuant to a top level decision" of the communist-NPA of the Central Visayas.

He said there was a decision at the highest level of the CPP-NPA to convey to the national government that they are in a strong position and that they wield influence and control over these areas.

What happened to the western town of Balamban, 63 kilometers west of Cebu City where a family of nine was massacred and a number of mountain farmers were killed by armed men was part of imposing "terroristic mental control" on the inhabitants of the central Cebu mountains.

Some of terror-stricken families fled the mountain barangays and flocked to the lowlands, abandoning their mountain homes and farms because of rumors subsequently spread about the killings, the Central Visayas PC [Philippine Constabulary] and police chief said.

RECONCILIATION COMMITTEE FORMED IN CEBU

[Text] Cebu, Philippines Sept 1 (AFP) -- Church, government and military leaders in this central Philippines city have formed a committee on reconciliation and publicly invited communist rebels to discuss a possible local ceasefire. Ricardo Cardinal Vidal, archbishop of Cebu, the Philippines' second largest city, told reporters late Sunday after the 13-member panel was formed that the military was guaranteeing the safety of insurgent representatives.

The committee's creation followed reports of the killing of troopers and suspected rebels in the island province of Cebu, and came three days after an experimental local ceasefire was shattered in the southern island of Mindanao. President Corazon Aquino, who came to power after a popular revolt in February, has initiated national-level peace talks with communist and Moslem rebles, and encouraged similar efforts on the local level.

Government emissaries have made initial contacts with the communist-led National Democratic Front (NDF) and the Moslem separatist group the Moro Liberation Front (MNLF). Mrs Aquino is expected to meet this week with MNLF chief Nur Misuari in Mindanao.

Cardinal Vidal, the Cebu committee's spokesman, said that apart from the public invitation to the rebels, he would "try to revive some contacts, and if other people could also inform (the rebels), we will be very happy." He said the military, represented by three officers on the panel, promised to issue safe-conduct passes to rebel emissaries.

The committee was "very hopeful" that the talks would succeed, the cardinal said, adding that "they know that we never wish evil on anybody. So we hope that they will listen to our request."

Asked if the panel could ensure that there would be no more killings if talks were held with the communists, he said: "We cannot ensure anything, but we should never say that it was a failure" because a cessation of hostilities was not achieved. "The mere fact that we were able to sit down and have some talks," would be "already something," he added. The committee includes Political Affairs Minister Antonio Cuenco and Local Governments Deputy Minister Ninita Daluz, both Cebu natives, as well as Cebu Provincial Governor Osmundo Rama, the vice governor, and five city mayors of the province.

Prospects for Talks Look 'Dim'

HK041359 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 4 Sep 86 pp 1, 6

[By Abe Licayan]

[Text] Cebu City -- Ricardo Cardinal Vidal yesterday appeared pessimistic over the projected local level ceasefire talks with communist rebels even as a regional military commander, in a briefing, accused some local government officials of being New People's Army supporters.

Vidal, the Cebu archbishop, and chairman of the newly-formed Local Government-Church Committee on Reconciliation, had expected immediate response from the rebels to his invitation last Sunday for dialogs. But the cardinal, who had been in constant contact with rebels in the past, said he has not received a reply from any of them.

While Vidal voiced misgivings, Col. Edgardo Abenina, Region 7 PC-INP [Philippine Constabulary-Integrated National Police] commander, disclosed some officers-in-charge [OIC] in Cebu are under military surveillance for alleged involvement in the underground movement.

Abenina made the disclosure in a briefing on the peace and order in Cebu given by the military for local government officials.

Abenina told them that at least three OICs have been identified by the military as NPA supporters. However, he did not name names although some of those alluded to were reported present in the briefing.

Meanwhile, military and police units in Central Visayas, particularly the Cebu Metropolitan District and provincial command, remained in red alert in view of the reported NPA plan to stage simultaneous raids in Metro Cebu.

The 48-hour period during which the rebels were supposed to have attacked expired yesterday without any incidents reported. But Abenina said there was no reason to relax as intelligence reports allegedy showed that rebel reinforcements from Bohol, Negros and Mindanao were pouring into Cebu.

In a related development, members of cause-oriented groups in Cebu complained to Cardinal Vidal that human rights violations allegedy committed by the military are continuing.

Those who saw the cardinal included officials of Bayan, [New People's Alliance] the Cebu Alliance for Human Rights, the Free Legal Assistance Group and the Task Force Detainees [TDF] of the Philippines (Cebu chapter). They told the cardinal that they were being accused as communists by the military because of the "nationalist character" of their organizations.

TFD-Cebu also claimed that the number of political detainees in Cebu has increased from 25 during the last days of the Marcos regime to 42 because of the continued arrests of suspected NPA members by the military.

NPA GENERAL STAFF CONCERNED OVER AFP OFFENSIVES

HK211405 (Clandestine) LIBERATION in English Jun 86 p 5

[Item attributed to General Staff, New People's Army]

[Text] We view with deep concern Gen Fidel Ramos' orders to field unit commanders to take more aggressive military actions against the NPA supposedly to preempt an alleged "NPA 9-point military plan to destabilize the government." This irresponsible provocation by the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] chief-of-staff clearly countermands the President commander-in-chief's reconciliatory pronouncements. A virtual declaration of all-out war nationwide, it could only result, once implemented, in an unprecedented escalation of hostilities. This in turn could irreparably damage all efforts towards the negotiation of a ceasefire. If anything, Gen Ramos' order is a poorly disguised attempt to preempt not a fictitious NPA plan, but rather, the President's peace initiative, no less.

The so-called "a-point plan" cited by Gen Ramos is a crude fabrication by the AFP to discredit the NPA, justify their intensifying attacks on us, and cover up their failure to decimate our forces despite their unrestrained use and abuse of military force and superior firepower. We categorically and unequivocally deny having mapped out, much less issued to our field units, such a plan since the Aquino government assumed office. This concoction further bolsters our suspicion that the AFP all along has no desire to work at a ceasefire, merely exploiting the President's call as a propaganda tactic to conceal its preparations for a major attack on our forces and areas. For while it announces a "defensive posture," the AFP has actually intensified its offensive operations in several guerrilla fronts. More ominously, it has stepped up its recruitment and training, even reintegrating notorious elements previously discharged from the CHDF [Civilian Home Defense Force] and other AFP units for abuses and assorted crimes.

We warn Gen Ramos and the AFP command that we shall not sit idly while they scheme and move to destroy us. Even as we continue to restrain our forces and take the position of active defense to help create conditions favorable to the negotiations, we will not relinquish our right to self-defense. Should the AFP implement the order of Gen Ramos to attack us nationwide, we will be forced to respond with nationwide tactical counteroffensives.

We earnestly call on the President, as AFP Commander-in-Chief, to discipline her warmongering generals and order them to stop all provocative actions such as bombings, strafings, hamlettings, harassment of civilians, redeployment in order to concentrate troops in selected "critical" areas, and offensive patrols in areas we control. Recruitment should likewise be stopped, especially that of notorious scalawags, hoodlums, criminals and troublemakers into the AFP.

We also call on the partiotic, sensible and sincerely reform-oriented AFP officers and men not to obey orders that countermand their commander-in-chief's intitiatives toward peace.

We call on them to follow the example of some of their fellow soldiers who have prudently withdrawn from areas we control, desisted from attacking our forces, and avoided potentially provocative actions.

For our part, we offer our assurances that we shall not needlessly be provoked into retaliating, even as we remind the AFP command that neither shall we be intimidated nor gulled into passive defense.

Only in this way can we move closer towards genuine peace: Peace with justice and progress for our people.

LIBERATION EXAMINES NDF GAINS, LESSONS

HK211328 (Clandestine) LIBERATION in English Apr-May 86 pp 14, 15

[Text] The Marcos dictatorship has finally been toppled. Through a combined popular uprising and the revolt of an extremely disgruntled military, the Filipino people have rid themselves of a reign of tyranny whose record of repression and greed stands unparalleled in Philippine postwar history.

As we look back over the fourteeen years since 1972, when the U.S.-Marcos dictatorship openly declared civil war on the Filipino people by imposing martial law, two things stand out. First, the imposition of a repressive dictatorship was the product of irreconcilable contradictions in Philippine society. Second, from a few hundred nationalists and democrats, the popular resistance against the Marcos regime developed into a mighty storm that brought millions of our countrymen to heed the call for militant struggle.

In 1972, the crisis of the prevailing semi-colonial and semi-feudal order had reached a degree of intensity that could no longer be assured by the routine workings of traditional politics. This crisis could no longer be assuaged by congressional legislation designed to control the upsurge of a nationalist and democratic consciousness among the people. It could no longer be assuaged by a judicial system that was incapable of providing even elementary justice to the people. And neither could it be assuaged by a Constitutional Convention which, earlier billed as the "last hope for democracy," fell far short of the people's expectations and fell afoul of even Marcos' own ambitions.

In short, U.S. imperialism and the local ruling elite under Marcos could no longer rule in the old way. To secure the crumbling social order, they instituted barefaced terrorism by imposing martial law on Sept 21, 1972.

But as the adage goes, repression only breeds greater resistance. If anything, the cruel martial law years taught the people the correct path of struggle -- vigorous, united and militant struggle. In the countryside and cities, in the open and underground movements, inside the country and overseas, through armed and non-armed means, the filipino people moved as one. The armed counter-revolution that was mounted by U.S. imperialism and its premier puppet was eventually scuttled by a people's movement that culminated in the events of February.

The National Democratic Front [NDF] developed in the midst of this broad anti-dictatorship movement. It was on April 24, 1973 that the NDF first aired its revolutionary Ten-Point Program. Though extremely repressive conditions and the inadequancy of resources forced the NDF to mimeograph only a limited number of copies of the program, it boldly issued the call: "Unite to overthrow the U.S.-Marcos dictatorship!" The NDF program affirmed the road of people's war as the peoples revolutionary response to combat the Marcos dictatorial rule.

In the course of 13 years, the NDF served as the broad and comprehensive revolutionary united front organization that fused and mobilized various sectors and organizations, galvanizing them into a powerful force. Under its leadership, workers and peasants, students and teachers, progressive church people and professionals, businessmen and even people in the government, took their positions at the frontline of the struggle to end dictatorial rule and to achieve national freedom and genuine democracy.

With the help of the NDF, underground mass organizations were set up or reinvigorated in key sectors to further advance the anti-dictatorship struggle. These included the Kabataang Makabayan (KM) [Nationalist Youth] for youth and students, the Christians for National Liberation (CNL) for church and lay people, the Katipunan ng mga Gurong Makabayan(KGM) [Association of Nationalist Teachers] for teachers and the Maka Bayang Samahang Pangkalusugan (MSP) [National Health Association] for the health sector.

Many of these sectoral organizations have established provincial and regional chapters, convened their national congress and elected national officials. In the process of formalizing the national structure of their organizations are the Makabayang Kilusan ng Bagong Kababaihan (MAKIBAKA) [Nationalist Movement of New Women] for the women's sector, the Pambansang Kaisahan ng mga Magbubukid (PKM) [National Farmers Organization] for the peasantry, and the revolutionary organizations for the workers, the urban poor, lawyers and businessmen.

The NDF also played a major role in institutionalizing the people's militant efforts through a revolutionary army that has steeled and developed itself in the service of the people. From the very start, NDF member organizations and committees at various levels have provided political, material and even cadre and personnel support to help build up the New People's Army and strenghten its influence in all of the major provinces of the country.

The expansion of the NDF's grassroots base enabled the formation of NDF leadership bodies at the municipal, provincial and regional levels. Working jointly with the Communist Party of the Philippines (which is an NDF member) and its military organization, the NPA, the NDF has established numerous organs of political power in the guerrilla fronts in the countryside, through which the people actualize revolutionary self-governance. So far, two islands -- Mindanao and Panay -- have already set up provisional councils. Other regions of the country are also set to formalize soon their own councils which will prepare the way for the formal establishment of regular and elected NDF councils in their territories.

During the dark days of the dictatorship, these NDF councils and committees were instrumental in consolidating the people's organizations in the legal and underground spheres and in coordinating political and military offensives against the dictatorship. In many big cities like Davao, the NDF was pivotal too in developing the welgang bayan, or people's strike, as a new form of mass struggle which combines the paralyzing impact of labor and transport strikes with street and community barricades, student boycotts and demonstrations, and even with small-scale NPA partisan actions.

This year, as the NDF enters its 14th year of struggle for basic revolutionary change, it is determined to eliminate all vestiges of fascist rule ajd foreign and feudal domination -- the very same problems which it had vowed to battle 13 years ago. it extends the hand of cooperation to all progressive forces -- even to those within the present government -- who would sincerely work for the attainment of genuine national independence and democracy.

GOTODA TO ANNOUNCE PARTICIPATION IN SDI RESEARCH

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 7 KYODO -- The government will officially approve at a cabinet meeting Tuesday Japan's participation in the research phase of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) antimissile defense system. After the cabinet meeting, Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda will announce the decision to pave the way for both Japanese private companies and government-affiliated research bodies to participate in the SDI research.

The government will then start negotiations with the U.S. Government to conclude a concrete agreement on Japan's participation, which was requested by U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in his letter to then Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe in March last year. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone expressed Japan's "understanding" of the SDI in his meeting with U.S. President Ronald Reagan in Los Angeles in January last year.

In his announcement, Gotoda is expected to stress the significance of Japan's participation in the SDI research phase for Japan-U.S. alliance. Gotoda is also expected to give the government's views that participation will not go against Japan's three-point nonnuclear principle and a 1969 Diet resolution for peaceful use of space. The government appreciates the technical and strategic advantages expected from participation in the SDI research. Gotoda is not expected to refer to secrecy protection regarding military technology involved in the SDI research, which will be dealt with under existing relevant laws.

LDP EXTENDS NAKASONE TERM TO OCTOBER 1987

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 5 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone has gained endorsement from his Liberal-Democratic Party to stay in power through October 1987, LDP sources said Friday. The LDP's five major factions went into last-stage consultations Friday to agree on a plan to extend Nakasone's tenure as party president for one more year. Representatives from the five major intraparty groupings agreed to add a new party rule which allows extending the two-year term of office for an LDP leader for one year if two-thirds of LDP Diet members support it, the sources said. The LDP presidency carries with it the post of prime minister in the LDP-controlled Diet.

The LDP's three most prominent figures, Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, party Secretary General Noboru Takeshita and party Executive Council Chairman Shintaro Abe, will meet Monday, September 8, to confirm the agreement, the sources said. The party will adopt the new rule at a meeting of all LDP Diet members on September 11, the opening day of an extraordinary session of the Diet, they said. Nakasone's second two-year term of office was originally due to run out on October 30 under present party rules which limit leadership tenure to four years in two consecutive terms. However, the ruling party has shifted stance to allow Nakasone to stay in power following a landslide victory for the governing party in the July 6 election of both houses of the Diet.

ROK ANGERED BY EDUCATION MINISTER'S REMARKS

ROK-Japan Diplomatic Crisis

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 8 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su said Monday he will not go to Tokyo for the first South Korea-Japan foreign ministerial meeting Wednesday in protest against what Seoul calls Japan's attempt to "justify" its colonial rule of Korea between 1910 and 1945. Choe notified postponement of the conference in a meeting with Japanese Ambassador Kiyohisa Mikanagi at the Foreign Ministry. Diplomatic sources here wonder if Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will visit Seoul September 20 as scheduled to attend the opening ceremony of the 10th Asian Games hosted by the South Korean capital.

The South Korean action refers to a statement by Japanese Education Minister Masayuki Fujio that South Korea should share the responsibility with Japan for its colonial rule over the Korean peninsula because it was based on a bilateral agreement. South Korean Government leaders described the statement in a Japanese magazine as an "attempt to justify Japan's colonial rule." In the meeting, Choe called the statement "extremely regrettable" and urged the Japanese Government to take "appropriate action" swiftly to resolve the problem, according to Japanese sources.

Choe told Mikanagi he favors postponing the ministerial meeting until a day when it can be held in a "relaxed atmosphere," the sources said. The Japanese envoy asked the foreign minister to reconsider his intention of putting off the ministerial meeting, but the sources said they foresee no change in the South Korean attitude. The sources said the envoy brought a message of Japanese Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari. In the message, Kuranari quoted Nakasone as saying the premier looks at the situation with "seriousness." Kuranari also assured Choe that he will make his utmost efforts to settle the diplomatic row.

Prime Minister No Sin-yong, Foreign Minister Choe and other cabinet ministers discussed the matter in an emergency session Sunday and agreed to respond strongly to Fujio and the Japanese Government.

Diplomatic sources here earlier said South Korea will postpone the Choe-Kuranari meeting if Fujio does not resign by Tuesday evening when Choe is scheduled to leave for Tokyo. Fujio said in Tokyo Monday he will not resign but that he expects Nakasone will dismiss him from the Cabinet post. The sources said the Japanese government is considering sending a special envoy here to defuse the crisis.

Nakasone Fires Fujio

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 8 KYODO -- In less than seven weeks Japan's outspoken education minister has created tidal waves in the country's delicate relations with China and South Korea. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone took the ax to outspoken Education Minister Masayuki Fujio late Monday, demanding his resignation following strong condemnation from South Korea over a recent remark maintaining that Japan's 1910 annexation of the Korean peninsula was "justified."

Fujio, appointed in the July 22 Cabinet line-up told reporters earlier Monday that he would not take the initiative and resign following the eruption of a diplomatic row between Japan and South Korea over his annexation remark. Afterwards, the education minister was summoned to a meeting at the prime minister's residence and stripped of his first-time portfolio.

A diplomatic row erupted Monday when South Korean officials announced a delay in the first regular Japan-South Korea foreign ministerial meeting scheduled for Thursday in Tokyo. Although senior members of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) as well as Fujio's mentors, former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda and former Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, had called on the education minister to resign, Fujio challenged Nakasone to do the firing himself.

While a number of Cabinet ministers have handed in their resignations in the past, Fujio will become only the third portfolio holder to be "fired" from the job. Nakasone's action is expected to become official after Tuesday, following the completion of formalities including the required "approval" of Emperor Hirohito who is also responsible for endorsing Cabinet appointments. In 1947, Japan's first socialist Prime Minister Tetsu Katayama ordered Agriculture Minister Rikizo to leave his post. Six years later, then-Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida gave another agriculture minister, Kozen Hirakawa, the sack.

The latest controversy stems from an interview Fujio recently gave to the Japanese journal BUNGEI SHUNJU, to be published Wednesday in the monthly's October issue. Fujio touched on a number of controversial issues such as the Nanjing (Nanking) incident and the duty of Cabinet ministers including Nakasone to visit the Yasukini Shrine, Japan's war dead memorial denounced by China and South Korea as a symbol of militarism. However, his remark that Japan annexed Korea in 1910 following an earlier agreement between Korea's emperor and Japan's government representative touched off heated criticism from South Korea, just before the scheduled foreign ministerial meeting with South Korea and Nakasone's attendance at the September 20-21 opening of the Seoul Asian Games.

Shortly after Fujio stormed from the prime minister's residence Monday night, government officials announced that Masajuro Shiokawa, a member like Fujio of Shintaro Abe's political clique within the LDP, will be appointed the new education ministers. Meanwhile in Seoul, newspaper headlines Monday declared that the bilateral foreign ministerial meeting in Tokyo had been canceled in wake of the Fujio problem observers in Japan have pointed out that Fjio, anti-Nakasone in his political stance, has been deliberately attempting to disgrace the prime minister with outspokenness.

Shortly after his appointment in July, Fujio created the first diplomatic problem with China in South Korea in a comment on government approval of a slanted Japanese history textbook prepared by a well-known nationalist group, denounced by the two countries. Fujio said that those countries critical of the textbook should look back and examine their past for acts of invasion similar to that of Japan's.

In an address to the Japan National Press Club in August, Fujio slammed U.S. occupation period policies which he charged had been praised while prewar policies had been denounced as all bad by postwar government officials.

Fujio has also slammed Parent-Teacher Associations (PTA) as "unnecessary" and called on the nation's parents and teachers to install patriotism in the younger generation.

USSR'S MARCHUK BEGINS VISIT, MEETS YANAGIYA

OW080637 Tokyo KYODO in English 0557 GMT 8 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 8 KYODO -- Visiting Soviet Vice Premier Guriy Marchuk told Japan Monday that his country wants to discuss food production development of marine resources and space exploration as well as biotechnology in the coming meeting on scientific and technological cooperation, a Foreign Ministry official said. Marchuk, who is concurrently chairman of the National Science and Technology Commission, also said his nation is interested in discussing medical matters in the bilateral scientific talks, which have been held twice under a 1973 accord on bilateral cooperation. The talks had been suspended since 1982 as part of Japan's sanctions against Moscow in connection with the crackdown in Poland. Previous talks focused on agriculture and nuclear power.

Marchuk proposed the new areas in a meeting with Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Kensuke Yanagiya at the Foreign Ministry. Marchuk has been here since Sunday as a guest of the ministry to prepare for the four-day bilateral scientific and technological cooperation talks on September 16-19 in Tokyo, the official said. Yanagiya told Marchuk that it is prefarable to promote agriculture and nuclear power first, but added that participants will be able to discuss the new areas freely, the official said. Marchuk said the Kremlin attaches importance to his Japan visit, and he will report on his visit to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and other key leaders, the official said. Marchuk and Yanagiya agreed on the importance of continuing dialogue on the improvement of bilateral relations, the official said. During his stay in Japan until September 13, Marchuk will meet with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari and Science and Technology Agency Director General Yataro Mitsubayashi.

MIYAZAWA'S 6 SEP MEETING WITH BAKER VIEWED

[Text] San Francisco, Sept. 6 KYODO -- U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker, in a hurriedly arranged meeting Saturday with Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, urged Japan to expand domestic demand to create increased demand for U.S. products, observers speculated Saturday. Responding to U.S. demand, Miyazawa is believed to have explained details of a comprehensive package of reflationary economic measures to be submitted for discussion at an extraordinary session of the Diet in mid-September, the observers said. Baker is understood to have expressed strong concern over whether Japan is determined to attain its target, worked out early this year, of real economic growth of 4 percent for the current fiscal year, the observers said.

Miyazawa and Baker presumably confirmed the importance of strengthening multilateral surveillance over national economic policies, to which seven industrialized democracies -- Japan, the U.S., Canada, France, Britain, Italy and West Germany -- agreed during the Tokyo Summit in May, they said. In a closed-door meeting which lasted for some two hours and 30 minutes, only Toyo Gyoten, vice finance minister for international affairs, and David C. Mulford, assistant treasury secretary for international affairs, accompanied the Japanese and U.S. finance ministers.

Following the meeting, Miyazawa told a press conference, "We have talked about a wide range of economic issues, such as world economy, monetary situation, Japanese and U.S. economies, and pending issues between Japan and the U.S."

The U.S. has urged Japan to cut its 3.5 percent official discount rate to stimulate its economy following the U.S. reduction of its discount rate by 0.5 points to 5.5 percent August 21 to perk up the faltering U.S. economy. The Miyazawa-Baker meeting was requested by the U.S. side. It was Miyazawa's first meeting with Baker since Miyazawa was appointed finance minister in Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's new cabinet formed after the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's landslide victory in the July 6 national elections.

NEW JSP HEAD DOI COMMENTS ON PLANS FOR PARTY

Tokyo KYODO in English 1141 GMT 6 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 6 KYODO -- Takako Doi was elected leader of the Japan Socialist Party Saturday and told reporters she is determined to rehabilitate it to rival the ruling party of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone. Doi, who will officially succeed Masahi Ishibashi to become chairwoman on Monday -- the first woman ever to lead a Japanese political party -- was overwhelmingly elected in a ballot of the membership. Her expected confirmation as leader of the no. 1 opposition party brought congratulations from Nakasone and all the other main opposition parties expect the communists. Doi, who has the backing of the JSP Executives Committee, garnered 58,670 ballots or about 83 percent of eligible votes cast by about 85,000 party members across the country. The other candidates, Tetsu Ueda, gained 11,748 votes, about 16.7 percent.

The voter turnout reached 84.7 percent, compared to 92.7 percent in the previous chairmanship election in 1981, when Ichio Asukata was named party head. The 57-year-old Doi, often dubbed the "Margaret Thatcher of Japan" collected a sweeping vote of more than 80 percent in the Kansai districts and 76 percent in Tokyo. Ueda conceded defeat in a speech at the party's headquarters, saying he will fully support the new party leadership. But he added, "The election was unfair because the party executives onsidedly the party membership list to the Doi camp." Nakasone, president of the Liberal-Democratic Party, said that the JSP under the new leadership should aim to resolve three issues facing the party -- recognition of the Japan-U.S. security treaty and Japan's Self-Defense Forces, support for nuclear energy and recognition of South Korea.

Following the announcement of the vote, Doi began selecting new party executives by consulting top party officials. Unofficial maneuvers indicated that Tsuruo Yamaguchi, director of the party's Diet Policy Committee, is almost assured ofthe party's no. 2 post as secretary-general. Commenting on the lineup of the party executive, Doi said, I'd like to add a woman's post to the party's Central Committee to build up a fresh image." Doi appealed to the party rank and file for the party to establish regional councils consisting of groups that reflect party policies. Shesaid, "These bodies would be required to examine what the public really wants or expects of us." She also stressed the need to set up a committe on party reforms which will be charged to make recommendations on how to rehabilitate the party and produce a report before the annual convention set for December. Referring to the controversial statement by Education Minister Masayuki Fujio on Japan's military actions before and during World War II, Doi said, "I'd like to see how the Nakasone Cabinet handles the matter. Diet action can follow after that." Touching on her feelings at being elected party head, Doi said, "I'd like to aim at being a politician who cares about people. The fact that I'm a woman won't worry me in my job as head of the party." Doi, a former lecturer on constitutional law at Doshisha University in Kyoto, has filled posts such as director of the party's Foreign Affairs Committee and chairwoman of the lower house Special Committee on Prices. She was first elected to the House of Representatives in 1969, and was vice chairwoman under Ishibashi.

TRANSFER OF 150,000 TROOPS TO ECONOMIC WORK VIEWED

[NODONG SINMUN 7 September editorial: "Peaceful Construction and an Epochal Step To Ease Tension"]

[Text] The KPA Supreme Command has taken an important step to have combined KPA units and the units of the Korean People's Security Forces participate in peaceful construction work in the country in a full-fledged manner. In accordance with this step, the troops of KPA divisions and brigades and of the Korean People's Security Forces, which number more than 150,000, are moving to the important fronts of socialist economic construction form frontline areas and outposts.

This step has been taken to make the fatherland much more prosperous and to promote the people's happy life and welfare by accelerating socialist construction in our country. This is our people's peace-loving ideal and aspiration for easing tension on the Korean peninsula and for preserving durable peace there this year, the year of international peace.

While taking this step, the KPA Supreme Command expressed a will to take a greater and much more advanced step in Korea for peace if the United States and the South Korean authorities take as equal a peaceful step as we did or if they take a certain step to ease tension in Korea at a time when our vast troops are being mobilized for peaceful construction work.

The recent step for removing a large number of troops from frontline areas and from outposts to have them participate in peaceful construction work was taken under militant circumstances in which socialist construction in our country has reached a new, higher stage and in which the great task of much more rapidly developing the people's economy as a whole by achieving ahead of schedule at the earliest possible date the assignment for socialist economic construction has been set forth by the party.

Our KPA soldiers have performed brilliant exploits by displaying mass heroism and devotion by advancing to socialist constructon sites, including the construction site for the Nampo lockgate. The recent step will greatly contribute to much more firmly consolidating the socialist material and technical foundations in our country, to solidifying the country's peace and security, and to achieving happiness and prosperity for posterity, generation after generation.

The recent step for having a large number of KPA and Korean People's Security Forces soldiers participate in peaceful construction work under circumstances in which the situation is strained reflects the consistent peace-loving stand of our party and the government of the republic and will greatly help to ease tension in Korea and preserve durable peace there. Our people ardently support and welcome the step taken by the KPA Supreme Command and sincerely hope that this step will positively contribute to accelerating socialist construction in the country and to easing tension in Korea.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Today our people have exerted every possible effort to ease tension on the Korean peninsula, to eliminate the danger of war, and to achieve the country's peaceful reunification. Easing tension and preserving and solidifying durable peace in Korea are a consistent policy and an invariable stand firmly pursued and assumed by our party and the government of the republic. Only by preserving and solidifying peace can we successfully forge ahead with socialist construction to achieve the prosperity of the fatherland and pioneer a peaceful phase to achieve the fatherland's reunification.

Desiring to ease tension in Korea and peacefully resolve the people's internal question through dialogue and negotiations, we have exerted every possible effort to achieve this end. This year alone, as an important step to alleviate tension, we decided to stop large-scale military exercises in the entire northern half of the republic, beginning 1 February, and to suspend all military exercises while the North-South dialogue is in progress. We then urged the South side to respond to this. In June, we advanced a proposal for holding talks between persons in military authority who hold real power in the military sector in the North and South, to stop military exercises and the act of increasing military capability, and to discuss the question of reducing troops and armaments.

Failure to implement our repeated steps to ease tension and preserve peace is entirely due to this policy of the United States and the South Korean authorities for confrontation and war. Instead of responding to our sincere effort to ease tension, the United States, and the South Korean authorities have worked toward accelerating war preparations under the pretext of the nonexistent threat of southward invasion and toward heightening tension.

Because of the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers to increase military capabilities more than 40,000 U.S. troops and regular local mercenary army troops, which number nearly 1 million, have constantly assumed a posture of mobilization in South Korea, and more than 1,000 nuclear weapons have been deployed there. In accordance with a newly formulated tactical plan for an intensive surprise offensive, all troops in South Korea have been reorganized into offensive troops; mobile power and nuclear military capability have been strengthend; and 180,000 commando troops have been newly activated.

Today more than 80 to 90 percent of U.S. forces and puppet army troops have been deployed in forward areas near the Military Demarcation Line, thus assuming a combat posture for launching offensive tactical operations for northward invasion at any time. In addition to South Korea, the United States has continuously increased military capabilities at many military bases on the Japanese mainland, on Okinawa, and in the Pacific region aiming at the Korean Peninsula.

Clamorously babbling about the North's armed infiltratrion and provocations with the Asian Games as the momentum, the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets stepped up anticommunist confrontation and war rackets. On 1 and 5 September, the U.S. imperialists had warships of the U.S. imperialist 7th Fleet visit Pusan port with the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier "Carl Vinson" and the battleship "New Jersey" as the principal axis. Following this, they plan to stage a large scale naval mobile exercise on the East Sea during the Asian Games by mobilizing more than 30 warships with this aircraft carrier and battleship as the pivotal point.

Today the Korean peninsula has become the most strained and acute area in the world, and a dangerous situation had developed to the effect that a war might be touched off at any time. Those concerned have increased military capabilities under the pretext of countering the threat of southward invasion. Our recent step once again proved that this threat is fictitious.

The fighting goal of our party and people is to accelerate socialist construction. Our people very dearly value the revolutionary gains they have won through blood and sweat through a grim and protracted struggle, and they do not want to reduce them to ruins. While ardently desiring durable peace, our people are carrying out projects everywhere for construction of many lasting edifices. This eloquently proves that they do not want war, nor do they intend to attack the South.

By refusing to accept our proposal for holding talks between those in military authority -- a proposal for taking a step toward detente in the military sectors -- the United States and the South Korean authorities have admitted that what they desire is not peace but war.

Originally, we intended to use KPA troops for the country's economic construction by greatly reducing them if signs of reduced tension in Korea began to surface as a result of the convocation of talks between those in military authority as proposed by us. Under circumstances in which the United States and the South Korean authorities have not responded to this, we have been compelled to have KPA soldiers participate in peaceful construction work in the country wearing military uniforms.

It is clear to everyone that if the United States and South Korean authorities had responded to our proposal for holding talks between those in military authority by showing interest in alleviating tension, an epochal phase would have opened in preserving and solidifying peace and security on the Korean peninsula. Instead of traversing the road of confrontation and war by clamorously babbling about the nenexistent threat of southward invastion, the United States and the South Korean authorities should respond to our proposal for holding talks between those in military authority and should take a step toward reduced tension, responding to our epochal step to alleviate tension in order to carry out peaceful construction work.

Undoubtedly, if the North and South of Korea repeatedly take measures to ease tension and if these measures are expanded, the feelings of mistrust and confrontation will be dispelled between them, understanding and trust will develop, and the road to peace and peaceful reunification will open gradually.

The United States and the South Korean authorities should stop their advertisement of the threat of southward invasion, which no one will believe, and maneuvers for confrontation and war, and should not use for their impure aim the period when vast troops are being mobilized for peaceful construction work as a result of implementation of the step of the KPA Supreme Command.

It is a great honor and matchless source of pride for our KPA soldiers to participate in the socialist construction battle for the prosperity and development of the fatherland and for the happiness of the people. Today our people are assigned the worthwhile fighting task of much more firmly consolidating the material and technical foundations of socialism and of achieving the prosperity of the fatherland by quickly completing the construction of important edifices and by achieving ahead of schedule the magnificent 10-point prospective goal of socialist economic construction set forth at the Sixth Plenary Session of the WPK Central Committee.

The soldiers of the People's Army, who have dashed to socialist construction sites with a new faith and mettle in accordance with the step taken by the KPA Supreme Command, should loyally return the confidence shown by the party and the leader by brilliantly performing the honorable duty assigned them by creating a new construction speed with the revolutionary fighting spirit of self-reliance. All the people should highly display the traditional spirit of accord between the army and people by greeting the soldiers of the People's Army, who have advanced to peaceful construction sites with the feelings of blood kin, and by sincerely aiding them.

The noble revolutionary spirit to be displayed by KPA soldiers in the sacred struggle to safeguard the fatherland and to much more successfully build the country, and the achievements to be attained by them in this struggle will shine forever amid the prosperity of the fatherland and the endless happiness of our people.

PYONGYANG WANTS TO HOST 8 OF 23 OLYMPIC EVENTS

[Text] Pyongyang, Sept. 8 KYODO -- North Korea wants to host eight sports events out of the total 23 Olympic sports items in the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, North Korean sports sources said Monday. According to the sources, Pyongyang has such sports as wrestling, boxing, gymnastics and rhythmic gymnastics in mind in addition to the International Olympic Committee (IOC)-proposed four sports -- table tennis and archery events and parts of the soccer and cycling competitions. One top sports official said some sports in which there are both men's and women's competition can be divided between the two nations. He also said North Korea is now in the process of constructing Olympic facilities like a main stadium, soccer stadium, athletes' village and facilities for press people.

The fourth round of sports talks between North and South Korea under the initiative of the IOC should be held soon so that the situation can be settled at a general assembly of the IOC slated for mid-October in Lausanne, Switzerland, the official said. While the IOC proposed that the communist North stage the specified four events after the third round of the sports talks last June, Pyongyang later upped its demand for the number of sports it wishes to host.

ANNIVERSARY OF CULTURAL PACT WITH USSR MARKED

[Text] Pyongyang September 5 (KCNA) -- Papers in Pyongyang dedicate signed articles to the 30th anniversary of the signing of the agreement on cultural cooperation between the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Noting that the conclusion of this agreement marked an important occasion in expanding and developing cultural exchange and cooperation between Korea and the Soviet Union, NODONG SINMUN says:

Our people rejoice over the multilateral and constant expansion and development of cultural exchange and cooperation between the DPRK and the USSR over the past 30 years. Today cultural exchange and cooperation between the two countries are constantly developing in scope in the interests of the two peoples and in conformity with the demand of socialist and communist construction. Cultural exchange and cooperation have been developing on a new stage since the Soviet visit of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the meetings between the leaders of the party and state of the two countries in Moscow in particular. They strengthen the friendship between the peoples of the two countries and actively inspire them in the struggle to accelerate socialist construction and defend world peace.

Today the fraternal Soviet people under the leadership of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union headed by Comrade Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev have made great achievements in the endeavours to implement the decisions of the 27th party congress. Our people sincerely congratulate the fraternal Soviet people upon their successes. Pursuing the consistent peaceloving foreign policy, the Soviet party and government actively strive to prevent a new world war and ensure a durable peace and security in the world. The Korean people firmly support peaceloving initiatives and proposals of the Soviet Union.

MINJU CHOSON says the Korean people will in the future, too, make all efforts to develop and strengthen the friendly and cooperative relations with the Soviet people in all domains of science, education, literature and art.

VIOLENCE REPORTED IN BUDDHIST, STUDENT PROTESTS

Riot Police Storm Temple

[Text] Seoul, Sept 8 (AFP) -- Riot police Monday stormed a Buddhist temple in Seoul firing barrages of tear gas bombs to break up an anti-government rally by several hundred Buddhist monks, Buddhist sources said. The monks were protesting alleged government control of the nation's Buddhist temples. They also demanded the immediate release of three Buddhist priests arrested by police recently for allegedly taking part in anti-government demonstrations in the port city of Inchon, west of Seoul, early in May, the sources said. Riot police stormed the temple, firing barrages of teargas bombs to break up the protest.

Some 2,000 Buddhist Monks had gatthered at the Hae-in-Sa Temple, some 300 kilometers (180 miles) south of Seoul, one of the nation's most important Buddhist temples, Sunday, to adopt a resolution demanding the repeal of a law governing control of the nation's temples and their land, press reports said. The Chogye Sect, the nation's dominant Buddhist organization, was demanding the "autonomy of Buddhist religion" in the country without government interference. The Buddhist sources said that no priest could be appointed to head one of the nation's 1,000 temples without approval from the government. The post of chief abbot of the Chogye Sect had been held by a priest cooperative with the government, but last month a new leader, 50-year-old Su Ui-hyun, replaced him. The new chief abbot reportedly declared that he would fight for the restoration of Buddhism "for the people and not for the government."

The Buddhist Monks are also said to still bear a grudge over a crackdown by President Chon Tu-hwan during his rise to power in 1980, in which several dozen monks were arrested for allegedly being corrupt and immoral. They had been accused of misappropriating vast temple fortunes and also of harbouring concubines.

Students Clash With Police

[Text] Seoul, Sep 5 (AFP) -- Riot police clashed Friday with 300 dissident students who oppose the Asian Games taking place in Seoul later this month, eyewitnesses said. The half-hour campus confrontation broke out after the students set up a committee to oppose the Asian Games, scheduled to take place September 20 to October 5. There were no immediate reports of injuries or arrests. Eyewitnesses said 200 riot police stormed the campus through the back gate, as students threw stones and molotov cocktails at another contingent of police at the front. Police retaliated with tear gas.

The students shouted slogans including "Let's fight to oppose the Asiad" and "Let's drive out the U.S. imperialists." The demonstrators were also opposed to the special parliamentary committee on constitutional revision, denouncing it as an attempt by President Chon Tu-hwan's government to prolong its rule.

After dispersing the demonstrators, scores of police were seen guarding the school's gymnasium, where the Asiad volleyball event will be held. It was the first time dissident students had launched a committee to prevent the Asian Games, which they say has heightened tension with communist North Korea while hitting the nation's poor and underprivileged.

A similar demonstration involving 200 students was reported Friday at state-run Seoul National University, where the Asian Games table tennis event is to take place.

Police sources said an estimated 1,000 dissident students are bent on taking part actively in anti-Asiad demonstrations during the games. They also said police have decided to break up any student unrest in its early stages by storming campuses -- a departure from their earlier policy of avoiding university grounds.

In another development Friday, police set up a road block around the Asian Games athletes' village in southeastern Seoul and strictly controlled traffic. The road block will be extended to the area comprising the nearby Olympic stadium and all facilities, while nearby roads will be guarded by an estimated 8,000 special security troops.

Policeman Held Temporarily

[Text] Violent demonstrations by students are once again taking place on campuses and streets since the opening of the fall semester, opposing the coming Asian Games and calling for democratization.

Approximately 2,900 students of 11 universities across the country staged demonstrations separately Friday, destroying school facilities and a police box. At least, 14 of the student demonstrators were taken into by [as published] police in Seoul for having joined in the violent demonstrations.

At the state-run Seoul National University, about 1,000 students gathered at the Acropolis Plaza to attend a stumping for the upcoming election of the students association around 1 p.m. Friday. The meeting lasted for three hours.

The gathering was followed by demonstration by some 200 students on the campus.

Approximately 300 students of Sogang University continued their protest overnight at the school's main hall, demanding for the immediate release of their fellow students who were taken by police.

They also called for a stop to the inspecting of their campus by investigation authorities. A policeman, Sin Ki-chol, 24, of the Mapo Police Station, was held as a hostage by the students. The students dispersed by themselves early yesterday morning.

A police report showed that about 10 Chungang University students, with their faces masked with handkerchiefs, broke into the offices of professors around 4 p.m. Friday and destroyed many desks, windows and other facilities. The violence occurred following a rally by some 200 students.

Similar radical acts were committed by some 20 students at the Ansong campus of Chungang University. There they assaulted a professor who had tried to pursuade them not to resort such "savage" activities.

About 250 students of Yonsei University and Ewha Womans University took to the streets in front of an inter-city bus terminal in Pulkwang-dong, northwestern Seoul, around 6:40 p.m. chanting anti-government, anti-American and anti-Asian Games slogans.

They hurled stones and molotov cocktails into the Taejo police box and a combat police bus.

FOREIGN MINISTERS' MEETING WITH JAPAN POSTPONED

Fujio, in another inflammatory statement concerning Japan's neighbors, sought to justify Japan's 1910 annexation of Korea, which led to 35 years of colonial rule. In an interview with the popular Japanese monthly magazine BUNGEI SHUNJU, Fujio contended that the annexation was based on a "formal agreement" between the two countries and that Korea should share responsibility for the action. Choe told the Japanese envoy that Fujio's "outrageous" remarks have created a "serious and important problem in the basic relations" between the two nations and have greatly stirred up the Korean people's sentiments against Japan. Under the circumstances, Choe said, the foreign ministers meeting, slated for Wednesday and Thursday, is considered inappropriate. Even if it were held, he said, it would hardly produce any useful results.

The Korean foreign minister also delivered a strong protest from his government, demanding that Tokyo take steps acceptable to the Korean Government and people in the interest of amicable relations and the future of the two neighboring countries. A Foreign Ministry spokesman, in accordance with established diplomatic practice, declined to reveal specifically what steps Tokyo should take. He implied, however, that Seoul would demand more than a simple apology or a formal clarification of the matter. In response, the Japanese ambassador told Choe that Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari take the situation seriously and regret the controversy it has caused to Korean-Japanese relations. Appropriate measures are being taken by the Japanese Government, the ambassador added. The Korean Government's protest against Fujio's statement followed a high-level meeting on Sunday. In the meeting, presided over by Prime Minister No Sin-yong and attended by the ministers of foreign affairs, education, and culture and information, the participants agreed to take strong countermeasures.

NORTH'S DIPLOMACY AT NONALIGNED SUMMIT VIEWED

[Text] With only two weeks left until the opening of the Seoul Asiad, North Korea is now engaged in a hectic diplomatic swing to muster support from its allies concerning its policy on inter-Korean questions. Particularly eye-opening are its activities in Harare, Zimbabwe, where the summit of the non-algined countries is now being held.

North Korea is planning to sponsor what it calls an "International Conference for Nuclear-Free Peace on the Korean Peninsula" in Pyongyang for three days starting Sept 6.

North Korea is desperately attempting to capitalize on the Pyongyang meeting and the non-aligned summit as forums of propaganda to garner support from neutral and Third World nations for its long-winded call of the withdrawal of American troops in South Korea.

For the projected three-day Pyongyang conference, North Korea has been intensifying "invitation diplomacy" to attract as many foreign delegates as possible to the internationally little-known meeting.

Around the end of last month, North Korea invited a delegation from the Finnish People's Democratic League, a delegation of the Danish Socialist Democratic Party, and a government delegation from Guinea. On Sept 1, it also invited a "revolutionary government delegation" from Tanzania and a "delegation of grand national conference" from Romania. Most of the foreign delegates were received by North Korean head Kim Il-song and Vice Premier Kim Pok-sin.

Timed with the opening of the non-aligned summit, North Korea invited the heads of diplomatic missions from the non-aligned nations, stationed in Pyongyang, to a reception on Sept 1.

At the unusual gathering of foreign diplomats, North Korean officials called for their government's supoport for the pullout of U.S. troops from the South. They then laid the entire blame for the suspension of inter-Korean dialogue on South Korea.

The South-North talks on the different channels of the Red Cross, parliamentarians, economic officials and sports delegates have been deadlocked for several months since North Korea unilaterally suspended them, carping on the annual ROK-U.S. "Team Spirit" Exercise.

North Korean diplomats dispatched to Harare, the place of the Eighth Non-Aligned Summit, are notably busy making contacts with other delegates to gain support for the North Korean formula on Korean reunification. North Korea is a member of the 101-nation Non-Aligned Movement, which is the largest voting group in the United Nations.

Pak Song-chol, vice president and also a leader of the North Korean delegation to the non-aligned meeting, has been intensively lobbying influential figures of the non-aligned world since his arrival in Harare on Aug 26.

On Aug 26 and 27, Deputy Premier-Foreign Affairs Minister Kim Yong-nam, also in Harare met in sequence with foreign ministers of Zimbabwe, Yugoslavia, Cuba and other countries.

What North Korea seeks to achieve in the on-going non-aligned summit was well indicated in commentaries in the NODONG SINMUN, organ of the North Korean Workers Party.

On the opening day of the non-aligned summit, the daily expressed fervent hope that the North Korean calls for the withdrawal of the American forces will be accepted in the non-aligned forum.

In an editorial, the organ contended, "The realization of peaceful unification of the divided Korean peninsula is the most urgent international issue to be solved at this time."

It went on to say that North Korea believes that the non-aligned countries will show solidarity in support for the North Korean position.

At the climax of its propaganda, North Korea declared its boycott of the Seoul Asian Games through Pyongyang Radio on Monday, the deadline for entry to the Asiad.

Such North Korean manoeuvres are felt to pour cool water on the festival of the Asian peoples, which will begin Sept 20.

VOPB MARKS PARTY 47TH FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

BK171452 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese 1200 GMT 17 Aug 86

[Unattributed "The Path of March Shown by 47 Years of History"]

[Text] The Burma Communist Party [BCP], which raised to a new level the course of history regarding the struggle of the people of all nationalities in Burma against imperialism, feudalism, and reactionary rule, is now 47 years old. The history of the BCP, the oldest political organization in Burma, is marked by a tortuous path of various overt and underground struggles, including armed struggle. On this auspicious day of pride and inspiration, we pay our solemn tribute to the fallen comrade martyrs who laid down their lives along the 47-year-old tourtuous path strewn with sacrifices of all kinds. May they be enshrined in glory eternally!

While paying tribute to the glorious martyrs, we also extend our heartfelt revolutionary salutations to the party members; the combatants of the People's Army; the allies, the patriots, and the indigenous people throughout the country who are opposing and waging all forms of struggle against the military government.

It is true that although the struggle has been waged for many years and at the risk of many lives, the great cause of the thousands of martyrs and the entire people have not yet achieved victory. But, the long course of history has already proven that only the communist party -- and no other -- is capable of establishing a people's democratic republic in Burma.

The party has experienced numerous twists and turns and ups and downs along its tortuous revolutionary path which is approaching its half a century mark. However, unlike the early days of its inception, the present situation does not require the party to operate clandestinely or in secrecy for its survival. Not only has the party been time-tested and have rich experience, it also has a line which integrates Marxist-Leninist-Mao Zedong thought with the concrete stalwart people's army which not only fought in the resistance war against the Japanese fascists but also the revolutionary war for more than 38 years.

Thus, a review of the past 47 years of history ensures party members that they have nothing to fear from or worry about regarding the difficulties that may lie ahead. They can be more confident that the party and the masses can overcome any sort of difficulty. In contrast to this, the Burma Socialist Program Party [BSPP] one-party dictator military government -- the common enemy of the entire people -- continues to face one inextricable problem after another.

In practice, the military clique can no longer put up a pretense about or claim that the country is free from dependence on imperialists -- a boast made by all consecutive reactionary governments. It has become clear that they cannot do without imperialist aid and assistance in not only military and economic matters but also in social; political, and all other spheres.

This is evident from the fact that 40 percent of the investments projected in the 20-year long-term plan of the BSPP one-party dictator military government is to be financed through external loans. It is understood from the clues in the words of the so-called ministers that in recent times the military government has had headaches over external loans. Loans constitute half of their total annual foreign exchange earnings while more than one fourth of overseas spending is financed by foreign loans. Moreover, more than (?30) percent of the annual foreign aid and loans is being used to pay back loans. They will no longer be able to settle their debts without loans.

In trade, Burma is unable to counter the repercussions from the market manipulation of major imperialist countries and is fighting hard just to not be swamped under by the effects. Burma's rice exports plummeted drastically even though the rice war has barely begun. Income from rice exports in the last fiscal year fell by about 24 percent. Total income from exports in 1984-85 was 3.6 billion kyat, but the trends indicate that it will only be about (?2.5) billion kyat in 1985-86.

Naturally under such conditions, foreign exchange reserves and gold bullion in the military government's hands have dried up. The present foreign exchange and gold reserves of the military government are very low and cover only about 1-month worth of imports listed by the military government. It is indeed also shocking to learn that the total repayable foreign debt is 60 times the total of foreign exchange and gold reserves on hand.

However, the military clique is not affected by the declining economy in the country. It is only the people of all nationalities in Burma who directly bear its brunt.

The world oil price has fallen by half this year, but the price of oil and oil products has doubled in Burma. The import of raw materials has also fallen because of the burden of foreign debt and lessening foreign exchange reserves. The reduction in imports has led to a shortage of industrial raw materials and consequently of industrial goods such as cigarettes and soap. Their prices have spiralled unbelievably. Is it not so?

Under such conditions, the so-called state economic enterprises under the military government take billions of kyat in loans from local banks just for domestic use and, as a result, the military government has to continue printing its own currency to meet the demand. The military government officially claims that the inflation rate is 7 percent, but foreign observers believe it is between 20 and 30 percent. Even worse than this is the pernicious policy of the military clique regarding the local currency. The people live in fear and have no confidence in local currency notes. Rumors that the 75 and 25 kyat notes will be demonetized have spread to all parts of the country and people are haunted by them.

As economic difficulties worsened, crime rates have also soared to such an extent that the military government can no longer cover them up. Of the crimes that have spread from rural to urban areas and from small towns to big cities, the ones that stand out most are the corruption and bribery cases of the BSPP bureaucrats. These cases are so rampant that they have to be discussed even in their own rubber-stamp assembly. Actually, these cases are small when compared in quantity and extent of depravity to the corrupt practices of the leaders of the military clique.

Recently when the news of Duvalier of Haiti, Marcos of the Philippines, and Suharto of Indonesia were making headlines, some observers earnestly waited for the news about Burma. But only the news about the top boss of the military clique going on a tour of Europe in that period cropped up. The suppression of the media in Burma is even worse than under Marcos and Suharto, and therefore nothing came out into the open. Perhaps, the military clique's G-3 [automatic rifle] democracy is still potent for the moment.

Under such a democracy of the BSPP, the people will continue to live in the dark. Likewise, the welfare, economic, social, education, health, and other conditions of the people can never be good or pleasant as long as the military government exists.

If we look at the 24-year rule of the BSPP military clique, it is evident that the military clique not only does not want to transfer state power to anyone, it also does not want to share it even with other reactionaries. Therefore, practice has shown that to fight the government, which usurped power with arms and is propped up by all sorts of imperialists, the people have no other choice than to resort to armed struggle.

The indigenous people can establish a new Burma where people are completely free, which is fully democratic, which has equality for all nationalities, which has genuine unity among nationalities, and is peaceful and prosperous only if the common enemy -- the BSPP one-party dictator military government -- is toppled. For this reason, the BCP's Third National Party Congress laid down the following task to be implemented.

We must keep our military tasks as the central pillar and integrate them with all other tasks; strengthen and build the party, the army, the cadre force, and the base area; expand while strengthening our own forces; carry out an extensive guerrilla warfare behind enemy lines and extend and build up guerrilla bases; and unanimously unite with all the armed revolutionary forces as well as the patriotic forces throughout the country and start to direct the fight against the common enemy -- the military government -- and attain even greater victories without fail.

HENG SAMRIN, HUN SEN GREET NONALIGNED COUNTRIES

BK030800 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0442 GMT 3 Sep 86

[Text] Phnom Penh, 3 Sep (SPK) -- On the occasion of the holding of the Eighth Nonaligned Movement Summit, PRK Council of State Chairman Heng Samrin sent a message to the movement's member states expressing the Cambodian Government's position within this great community of nonaligned nations. The message was sent to 63 countries and national liberation movements.

"Born out of a general election," the message reads, "the PRK Government which controls the whole Cambodian territory is the only one entitled to represent the Cambodian people in all international fora. Through its policy of peace, independence, and nonalignment, it should retake its legitimate place at all meetings of the nonaligned countries.

"However, aware of its responsibility within the great community of nonaligned countries, the PRK to [as received] foil the divisive and diversionary maneuvers of the enemy forces attempting through the expedient of the so-called 'Cambodia problem' and other minor problems to divert the efforts of the nonaligned countries from current urgent tasks.

"For this reason, the PRK regards as relevant and wise the decision of the sixth and seventh nonaligned summits to keep the Cambodia seat vacant and, therefore, agrees for the time being to maintain this decision. For its part, in spite of this voluntary absence at the meetings of the nonaligned countries, the PRK will continue to make all efforts to contribute in a dignified manner to the common struggle of our movement for peace, national independence, and economic and social progress."

On the same occasion, Heng Samrin, chairman of the Council of State, and Hun Sen, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the PRK, also sent messages to Z. Singh and Rajiv Gandhi, president and prime minister of India, appreciating the historic role India played during the past 3 years in its capacity as the chairman of the Nonaligned Movement as well as its active contributions to the movement.

In another message sent to Robert Mugabe, prime minister of Zimbabwe, Chairman Hun Sen stated:

"We sincerely would like to express our best wishes to your excellency and to the Zimbabwean people on the election of Zimbabwe to the post of chairman of the Nonaligned Movement. We firmly believe that under your leadership, the Nonaligned Movement will become firmer in its struggle for peace, disarmament, national independence, democracy, and social progress."

HUN SEN GREETS VIETNAM ON ANNIVERSARIES

[Text] Minister of Foreign Affairs, Comrade Hun Sen, recently sent a message of greetings to Comrade Nguyen Co Thach, SRV minister of foreign affairs, on the 41st anniversary of the August Revolution and the 2 September National Day of the SRV. The message read:

The victory of the August Revolution and the founding of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam on 2 September 1945 constituted a resounding historical event of the Vietnamese people who waged a persistent struggle full of heroism and great sacrifices for independence, peace, and socialism. It is a victory of the correct revolutionary line drawn up by the CPV, founded and led by President Ho Chi Minh.

I take the opportunity on this occasion to express profound gratitude to the CPV, the SRV Government, and the fraternal Vietnamese people for providing the Cambodian people with both moral and material assistance and support in the cause of defending and building the Cambodian fatherland. I highly appreciate the policy of peace, friendship, and cooperation pursued by the SRV and thank you for your personal efforts in the tireless diplomatic struggle aimed at protecting the rights and raising the prestige of the PRK and the three Indochinese countries in the defense and establishment of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world.

I am glad to note that the relations and cooperation between the two foreign ministries are strengthening and becoming more effective, thus contributing to the victory of the revolution of each country for independence, peace, and socialism.

May the bonds of militant solidarity and special friendship between Cambodia and Vietnam and among the three Indochinese countries last forever. I wish you and your colleagues good health and more successes in your lofty cause.

Chea Sim Greetings

[Text] On the occasion of the 41st anniversary of the August Revolution and the 2 September Independence Day of Vietnam, Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the KUFNCD National Council, has sent a greetings message to Comrade Huynh Tan Phat, chairman of the Vietnam Fatherland Front Presidium. The message noted:

I would like to extend warmest and most cordial greetings to the comrade chairman, all members of the VFF committee, and the fraternal Vietnamese people. The victory of the August Revolution constituted a great achievement of the Vietnamese people in their valiant struggle against the feudalists, French colonialists, and Japanese fascists. The victory of the August Revolution greatly contributed to the collapse of the era of the imperialists' colonial system. This is also a common victory of the three Indochinese countries' militant solidarity.

Thanks to the victory of the August Revolution, the SRV -- the first worker-peasant state in Asia -- was born through the historic declaration of independence read by President Ho Chi Minh on 2 September 1945. Since then, despite some difficulties caused by the imperialists' and expansionists' policy of intervention and encirclement, the Vietnamese people under the wise leadership of the CPV have successfully made achievements in all fields in their socialist construction.

The all-around development made by the Cambodian revolution during the past nearly 8 years is attributable to the sincere assistance of the Vietnamese party, government, front, and people.

The entire Cambodian people express their gratitude to the Vietnamese party, government, front, and people and wish the VFF Central Committee, party, government, and fraternal people of Vietnam greater victories and good health. May the Cambodia-Vietnam solidarity, friendship, and all-round cooperation further strengthen and last forever.

CGDK STATEMENT ON INDOCHINA CONFERENCE

BK010254 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 31 Aug 86

[31 August "Statement of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea on the 'so-called' foreign ministerial conference of the Indochinese countries" -- read by announcer]

[Text] The Vietnamese authorities recently held another so-called foreign ministerial conference of the Indochinese countries in Hanoi and issued a joint communique. The CGDK government would like to issue the following statement on this matter:

1. Democratic Kampuchean President Samdech Norodom Sihanouk had noted that there is nothing new in this joint communique since it has not shown Vietnamese flexibility.

2. As the world knows, the so-called foreign ministerial conference of the Indochinese countries as well as all other matters in Laos and Cambodia, which are controlled and occupied by Vietnam, are all ordered and organized by Vietnam.

3. The Hanoi authorities have further posed themselves as the masters of the Indochinese Federation by persistently demanding the elimination of one of the three CGDK factions. In fact, what they want is to make the CGDK surrender to them. Having failed to realize their aim of crushing the Cambodian patriotic resistance forces on the battlefield, they have tried to fulfill this aim through diplomatic maneuvers. Their main aim is to weaken the Democratic Kampuchean patriotic resistance forces so that they can crush and occupy Cambodia forever.

4. The Vietnamese announcement of the withdrawal of all Vietnamese aggressor troops from Cambodia in 1990 is only deceitful propaganda. This Vietnamese promise is just the continuation of their diplomatic maneuver of getting everything by hook or by crook. The world knows well that Vietnamese promises are unreliable. The Hanoi authorities' diplomatic affair only serves their aim of winning on the battlefield. The Vietnamese have never kept their promises -- the 1954 Geneva agreement, the 1962 agreement in Laos, the 1973 Paris agreement, Vietnam's solemn promise in 1967 that it would respect Cambodian territorial integrity within the then current frontiers, Pham Van Dong's promise made in 1978 to Thailand and other Southeast Asian countries that Vietnam would not attack Cambodia -- all these promises were broken.

5. The Hanoi communique is also an attempt to threaten those countries which support the Cambodian people's struggle, accusing those countries of trying to create a confrontation. Therefore, Vietnam has accused the 114 countries which voted for the UN resolution on Cambodia of being a small group of forces wanting confrontation

6. The Hanoi communique echoed Gorbachev's Vladivostok statement in an attempt to weaken the world forces which support the Cambodian people's struggle under the leadership of the CGDK with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as president of Democratic Kampuchea. This is useless because the world is well aware of this Vietnamese-Soviet scheme.

7. Vietnam should listen to the appeal of the majority of the people in the world. Vietnam should realize that its increasingly serious difficulties -- political, economic, and social -- and the feeling of hopelessness which is overwhelming the Vietnamese cadres at all levels, as well as Vietnam's extreme isolation in the world, are caused by its aggression against Cambodia and being bogged down in Cambodia. Only by responding to the offer by the CGDK by accepting the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal made public on 17 March 1986 will Vietnam be able to extricate itself from its current complicated difficulties.

8. The significant point in the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal is that first, it paves a way for Vietnam to withdraw from Cambodia orderly and honorably; second, it calls for respect for the Cambodian people's sacred right to self-determination, free from any outside interference through a free election under UN supervision. The 8-point peace proposal considers the interests of both the Cambodian people and that of Vietnam; this proposal has been made with the aim of reconciling the Cambodians and of bringing about a neighborly coexistence between Cambodia and Vietnam. This 8-point proposal will also restore peace, security, and stability in Southeast Asia which are essential to turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, freedom, and neutrality. The Cambodian problem can be resolved through political and peaceful means only after the SRV Government -- the aggressor -- holds talks with the CGDK, which is the sole legitimate representative of Cambodia -- the victim of the SRV aggression.

THAI FOREIGN MINISTER'S STATEMENT VIEWED

BK290608 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0500 GMT 27 Aug 86

[Unattributed commentary: "Can Words be Put Into Actual Practice?"]

[Text] At present, the necessity to normalize and improve relations between Thailand and neighboring countries has become a topic for discussion by the people in the capital of Thailand. On 13 August 1986, Thai Foreign Affairs Minister Sitthi Sawetsila said in an interview by a BANGKOK POST correspondent that the new Thai Government will resort to various measures to improve relations with all neighboring countries and that Thailand will not allow [anyone] to use Thai territory as a base from which to carry out activities to sabotage or overthrow governments of those neighboring countries. This is considered a good move by the general public which desires peace, friendship, and cooperation. But, whether or not Sitthi Sawetsila can put what he has said into actual practice is a matter that the public will follow up and see in the future.

Not allowing its own territory to be used for aggression against other countries, respect for one another's independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity, nonaggression, noninterference in one another's internal affairs, and peaceful coexistence are considered principles of good-neighborly relations. These principles can possibly be achieved if the Thai side is sincere about normalizing relations with the various neighboring countries. As in the past, the peoples of the Indochinese countries -- Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia -- have persistently made efforts to seek ways and means to restore and normalize relations with neighboring countries. But, their efforts have not yet been successful because there still remain many obstacles.

One major obstacle to the normalization of relations between the Indochinese countries and the countries in the ASEAN grouping, in particular Thailand, comes from the Cambodian-Thai border where the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea has its base to infiltrate into Cambodian territory. The use of Thai territory as the base for carrying out aggression against the PRK and the continued use of Thai territory as a sanctuary and place for fostering and training exiled Lao reactionaries to oppose the LPDR have caused the tense situation in the Lao-Thai and the Cambodian-Thai relations.

Nevertheless, all these problems can be settled. The Indochinese countries are ready to hold creative negotiations with the various neighboring countries in Southwest Asia in general and with Thailand in particular to discuss these problems. In their recent 13th conference, the foreign affairs ministers of Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia also reiterated their reasonable policy on the respect of Thailand's independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity, because they have considered the normalization of the relations between Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia and the Kingdom of Thailand as the very important factor for the maintenance of peace and stability in southeast Asia.

On the basis of this spirit, in the joint communique of the recent 13th conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers, the SRV has explicitly announced that it is ready to hold talks with Thailand to seek means to settle basic problems in their relations as well as to establish and expand the friendship and good-neighborly relations within the framework of peaceful coexistence.

In his speech at a meeting of the Council of Ministers in early August this year, with regard to Lao-Thai relations, Kaysone Phomvihan, chairman of the LPDR Council of Ministers, explicitly noted that Laos is ready to do everything possible, both at the national and local levels, to achieve the mutual understanding and trust with the Kingdom of Thailand. This clearly showed the good faith of Laos to resume talks with Thailand with a view to normalizing relations in all respects between the two countries.

As for the PRK, it also reiterated its desire to exchange views with Thailand on the problem of Cambodian refugees and the problem of Thai nationals captured in Cambodian territory. It is possible that these initiatives of Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia can lead to a settlement of the problems if the Thai side is sincere in settling them.

Therefore, it is obvious that whether or not the confrontation between the ASEAN and the Indochinese countries, in particular the confrontation between Thailand and Cambodia, can come to an end; whether or not the Cambodian-Thai border can become tranquil; and whether or not the relations between Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia and Thailand can be normalized depend on the Thai side. However, all these issues can be realized if Thailand comes to understand that it is very necessary to settle all the problems on the grounds that its national interests will be affected if it continues to follow another country's strategic line, if it continues to allow the so-called CGDK to use Thai territory as its base from which to infiltrate into Cambodia to sabotage the revival of the Cambodian people, and if it continues to allow the exiled Lao reactionaries to use Thai territory as their base from which to carry out sabotage activities against the LPDR. If the Thai side continues to do so, it means that Sitthi Sawetsila's statement which says measures will be taken to improve relations with all neighboring countries and that Thailand will not allow anyone to use its territory as a base from which to sabotage governments of neighboring countries is merely deceitful propaganda, a political deception, and a trick aimed at deceiving public opinion.

[Feature Article: "Political Life Campaign in Vientiane Province"]

[Text] After the LPRP Central Committee Secretariat had issued an instruction on the holding of meetings to study and contribute views to the draft political report to be submitted to the Fourth Party Congress, from early June to the latter part of July, in addition to the meetings held by various branches of work throughout the country to study and contribute views to the draft report, Vientiane Province repeatedly launched political life campaigns by organizing three meetings. The first one was for more than 300 leading cadres at the district level and of various branches of work under the provincial administration. The second and third meetings were held in various districts and offices and organizations in the province and were attendedd by more than 1,700 comrades.

The atmosphere prevailing in the above meetings was different from that in other meetings held to study various resolutions of the party. At these meetings the secretary of the provincial party committee explained the importance of the study on the draft political report which will be submitted by the party Central Committee to the Fourth Party Congress.

After the study cadres at all levels unanimously agreed with the assessment made by the higher echelons on our great victories and shortcomings. The cadres assigned to all sectors of work have now adjusted their plans to the new requirements and adopted methods to rectify their weaknesses and remaining problems. Regarding this, they will concentrate on fulfilling the plan for the 2d half of 1986 and will adjust their Second 5-Year Plan to the main orientation outlined by the party Central Committee. They will also concentrate on further perfecting their plans starting from now until the year 2000.

During the important political campaign, it was observed that cadres of various age and sexes, particularly the leading cadres and party members, vigorously studied and contributed views to the political report. They studied in depth each aspect of the work under their responsibility and were aware of their strong and weak points and of the methods to correct them. At the same time, criticism and self-criticism were conducted in such a manner that everyone was encouraged to correct their attitude in order to fulfill their own plans as well as those mapped out by the provincial administration, thus bringing about a new change and a new position to the province. In addition, emulation campaigns have been repeatedly mobilized to splendidly fulfill their own 1986 plans and to score achievements to welcome the coming Fourth Party Congress.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS END IN PHONG SALY PROVINCE

BK010859 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 31 Aug 86

[Text] Political life campaigns in Phong Saly Province to contribute views to the draft political report to be submitted by the LPRP Central Committee to the coming Fourth Party Congress have basically ended. Thousands of cadres, party members, and the masses took part in the campaigns.

During these important political life campaigns, the cadres, party members, and masses vigorously studied and sincerely, extensively, enthusiastically, and promptly contributed views to the draft political report. As a result, they are now aware of the great achievements and victories recorded by our people as well as the general weaknesses and shortcomings that must be rectified. At the same time, our cadres have profoundly grasped the strategic orientation, tasks, and objectives of each period outlined in the draft political report. They have also applied them to their action plans, particularly provincial plans running from now until the year 2000.

After concluding these important campaigns, various branches of work and production sectors in Phong Saly Province are currently concentrating their efforts on carrying out the contents and spirit of the campaigns by launching socialist emulation movements and by contributing to fulfilling the tasks entrusted to them.

In return, Thai authorities also responded with a positive move by ordering provincial officials along the Thai-Lao border to hold talks with Laotian officials and urging them to organize sport and cultural activities to promote the friendship across the Mekong River.

Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila also said he would meet with his Laotian counterpart Phoun Sipaseut in New York for the annual UN General Assembly to discuss ways and means to strengthen the bilateral ties which have strained in the past few years following numerous border conflicts.

Sawanit said Thailand hopes that there will be more contracts at the local level to promote the ties and pave the way for government-to-government talks.

Thailand, through the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, has requested the Laotian Government to accept a group of 120 Laotians, who entered Thailand illegally. The refugees will be the first batch of 1,200 Laotians awaiting repatriation by the Thai Government.

SITTHI TELLS UNHCR OF REFUGEE CAMP CLOSURE

[Text] The Khao I-Dang holding centre will close at the end of this year, Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila told United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Jean-Pierre Hocke yesterday.

ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi told Mr Hocke Thailand is willing to coordinate with any country wanting to take in Khmers for resettlement before the camp closes.

Former National Security Council chief Sqn Ldr Prasong Sunsiri has said the camp would be closed but this is the first confirmation at a high level.

Sqn Ldr Prasong also said the remaining refugees would be moved to the border, joining their countrymen in camps for displaced persons. The camp, which has 25,728 Khmers of whom 7,100 are ration card holders, would close at the end of the month, he said.

UNCHR officials expect about 20,000 Khmers to be left unsettled at the end of the year with about 4,000 to 5,000 resettled abroad.

UNHCR representative Gerald Waltzer has been quoted as saying the organisation is waiting for further discussion with Thai officials about the future of the Khmers left at the camp, and the possibility of delaying the closure.

Ministry spokesman Sawanit Khongsiri quoted Mr Hocke as saying the UNHCR would soon donate $800,000 to the Thai anti-piracy programme.

In a speech at a dinner in honour of Mr Hocke, the Foreign Minister said that with UNHCR help, Thailand had been "able to reduce the rate of pirate attacks by nearly 70 percent in four years.

"At the same time, the rate of apprehension and prosecution has increased fivefold."

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi also said that he had met U.S. Ambassador to Thailand Mr William Brown at the foreign ministry on Wednesday and has expressed the concern over the impact of U.S. sugar dumping on Thai sugarcane planters and the sugar industry because it had caused prices of Thai products to drop. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said that the U.S. aambassador promised to help solve the issue, and adds it would help also effect Thailand's economic and social development program.

FOREIGN MINISTRY CITES LAO 'POSITIVE' RESPONSE

[Text] The Foreign Ministry yesterday welcomed what it described as a positive response from Laos to the Thai Government's newly-announced policy to improve relations with its neighbours.

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Sawanit Khongsiri told a news conference that the Laotian reaction was contained in an article of PASASON newspaper, the official newspaper of the Laotian Government on Sept. 4. The article expressed appreciation for the foreign policy outlined by Premier Prem Tinsulanon during the presentation of the policy of his government to the Parliament on August 27.

The Laotian daily also made reference to Sections 1 and 2 of the government's foreign policy which says that Thailand will continue its efforts to improve and promote ties and understanding with every neighbouring country based on the principle of reprocity, equality, justice and peaceful diplomatic means to solve mutual political problems.

The Foreign policy outlined by the Prem Government also said that Thailand will promote peace and peaceful coexistence with these countries on the principle of independence, equality, sovereignty and territorial integrity and non-interference in domestic affairs.

Sawanit's comment came after the Laotian Ambassador to Thailand Khamphan Simmalavong called on both countries to forget the past border problems and look ahead to build a new friendship.

The spokesman also said that Thailand would also consider to open more checkpoints to facilitate trade between the two nations. He said as in the past Bangkok did from time to time open extra border checkpoints in various provinces along the Thai-Lao border for specific purposes.

Kaysone Phomvihan, the Laotian prime minister, recently sent a congratulatory message to the Prem Government saying that Vientiane was ready to discuss with Thailand at all levels to improve the bilateral relations between the "brotherly" neighbours.

NGUYEN HUU THO ADDRESSES NONALIGNED SUMMIT

BK051707 Hanoi VNA in English 1551 GMT 5 Sep 86

[All quotation marks as received]

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept 5 -- Vice President of the State Council Nguyen Huu Tho on Sept. 4 delivered his speech at a plenary meeting of the 8th Nonaligned Summit, bringing out the stance of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam with regard to the Nonaligned Movement as well as to the major world and regional issues of the movement's concern. He said:

"The past 25 years is a period full of trials and difficulties for the Nonaligned Movement. During that period, mankind has witnessed the escalation of the bellicose policy pursued by the imperialists, their dangerous adventures in the arms race and their schemes to push mankind to a nuclear holocaust. We have also witnessed the United States' obstinate attitude in deploying mass-extermination weapons. It has set forth reactionary military theories to legalize the utilization of these weapons while trying to abolish the treaties of prime importance in disarmament achieved after long negotiations and much difficulty. At the same time, the United States has refused to respond to a series of peace initiatives (?and) acts which may lead to a new situation in which tension could be replaced by detente, confrontation by dialogue and all nations would be able to live and work in peace without the danger of war.

"Nowadays, nobody still retains the misleading conception that the arms race is merely an issue between the "super-powers", instead nations have realized that it directly concerns the existence of the whole mankind. There have appeared two clearly opposite stands: One is our stand, the stand of the nonaligned countries, the socialist countries and all nations that wish to exist and develop, and the other is the stand of the extremely bellicose, militarist and reactionary imperialists who want to break the present military equilibrium -- a factor to prevent the explosion of a nuclear war pending the realisation of complete disarmament.

"Over the past 25 years, the valiant struggle of the nations for (?independence) and freedom has dealt heavy blows to imperialism, colonialism and other reactionary forces and has gained big successes. The imperialist and reactionary forces have failed to draw any useful lesson from their defeats though having had to refrain from embarking on a "second Vietnam", the U.S. imperialists are continuing with their policy of the threat of force, they are ready to commit direct armed intervention wherever an opportunity offers while accelerating military pressure upon other nations, applying the policy of state terrorism and economic blockade, conducting subversive acts or proxy wars with intent to repress nations struggling for independence, freedom and social progress.

"The unbridled ambition of the imperialist forces to reverse the wheel of history is directly threatening the existence of mankind. While it is not yet possible for them to kindle a new world war, they have committed and are committing so many crimes against nations in struggle and provoking hotbeds of war on various continents".

Vice President Nguyen Huu Tho condemned the imperialists' policy of economic enslavement toward the developing countries. He said:

"The struggle against poverty and backwardness can achieve its immediate and long objectives by the strengthening of international solidarity among the revolutionary forces of our time. If the coming into being of the world socialist system has created the requisites for the victories of the national liberation movement over the old-type colonialist forces on the world scale, the all-round development and consolidation of the world socialist system is creating and will create favourable conditions for nations in struggle, to develop in peace, national independence, and social progress".

Denouncing the racist regime in South Africa, Vice President Nguyen Huu Tho said:

"In the south of Vietnam in the past, when the Ngo Dinh Diem regime, lackey of the U.S. imperialists, dragged guillotines from one place to another to behead Vietnamese patriots that was actually the foreboding of the end of an extremely brutal anti-national regime. The Vietnamese people have been following with deep sympathy the sacrifices and hardships experienced by the South African people in their struggle for national independence and freedom. The apartheid regime cannot escape complete collapse before the resolute struggle of the people in South Africa and Namibia, with close solidarity and support of the people in the whole African Continent, especially of the frontline countries, and the support of the whole mankind.

"It is now more imperative than ever to concentrate all our power and effort to quickly eliminate apartheid, a tumor on the body of Africa, and a stain in human history. Since the foundation of the Nonaligned Movement (N.A.M.) we have fully supported and united with the southern African people's struggle. We are firmly convinced that with this historic summit, the support for the struggle of the southern African people will become ever more effective."

Turning to the situation in Southeast Asia, Vice President Nguyen Huu Tho said:

"Realities in Southeast Asia, over the past eight years have testified on the one hand to the just stance and goodwill attitude of the three Indochinese countries which have been indefatigably struggling for peaceful co-existence among nations inside and outside the region and on the other, to the unjust stance and injudicious attitude of those who are seeking to run against the trend of time. The three Indochinese countries' stand for the withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea alongside the elimination of the genocidal Pol Pot clique which, within less than four years, committed a gencide never seen in human history by killing millions of its fellow countrymen. As the Kampuchean people's patriotic armed forces have constantly grown in very arduous conditions including the armed attacks and other sabotage activities conducted by outside reactionary forces by the hand of the Pol Pot clique, Vietnam has over the past five years effected five drives of partial troop withdrawal and announced that all Vietnam Army volunteers will be withdrawn from Kampuchea by 1990 when the Kampuchean People's Army are fully capable of defending the country's security. It should be stressed that Vietnam has also declared that it will pull all its troops out of Kampuchea right after a political solution that guarantees the elimination of Pol Pot is achieved. On the contrary, the other side has persistently insisted on the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops while refusing to stop its assistance to the Pol Pot clique. In other words, it is seeking to quickly restore the genocidal regime in Kampuchea.

Though having taken full control of Kampuchea, the People's Republic of Kampuchea has expressed its willingness to embark on negotiations with opposition individuals and groups aimed at achieving national concord on the basis of eliminating the genocidal Pol Pot clique. The essence of the eight-point proposal of March 17, 1986 which everyone knows has been masterminded by a hegemonistic force is to demand the abolition of the People's Republic of Kampuchea and recognition of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea", the core of which is the genocidal Pol Pot junta, with a view to bringing the latter back to power in Kampuchea, a thing that it has failed to obtain by force over the past eight years."

At present, public opinion, both inside and outside the region, considers the elimination of the Polpotists an unquestionable necessity. If all the parties concerned agree that the two fundamental questions are the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops and the elimination of the Polpotists, it is possible right now to start negotiations on a plans to settle these two questions so as to reach a political solution to the Kampuchean issue and achieve peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The three Indochinese countries are ready to cooperate with all the parties concerned to soon reach such a solution. At the same time, they wish that the Nonaligned Movement, in the spirit of its resolution on Southeast Asia adopted at its New Delhi summit and reaffirmed in the draft resolution of this summit, will help promote dialogues with a view to reaching a political solution at an earlier date than 1990, date for the complete withdrawal of the Vietnamese Army volunteers from Kampuchea already agreed upon and announced by the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

ENGINEERING MINISTER SAID ACCUSED OF GRAFT

[Text] Hanoi, Sept. 5 KYODO -- An incumbent cabinet minister is under fire in Vietnam for alleged involvement in large-scale corruptive practices at a model factory, according to a labor union weekly. Nguyen Van Kha, minister of engineering and metals, is accused of graft at a national automobile factory, along with eight factory executives, said LAO DONG, weekly organ of Vietnamese Federation of Trade Unions though it did not give details of the minister's involvement.

The weekly said the factory executives were pocketing money by falsifying the accounts, increasing the figures for expenditures and reporting the sales lower. Many instances of use of money with falsified slips were also reported, LAO DONG said. The executives, including the factory head, got bonuses 25 times larger than the regular monthly pay of ordinary factory workers, it said. They also illegally obtained rationed goods, and spent their ill-gotten money for dining and trips, the labor journal said. The weekly also said the corrupt officials gave large bonuses to factory accountants to keep their mouths shut.

Disclosure of the minister's involvement was seen by political sources here as reflecting Communist Party General Secretary Truong Chinh's wish to put an end to widespread corruption, which the leadership admitted prevented the nation's healthy economic growth. The political sources believe the minister will be dismissed in the near future.

NHAN DAN ON PRECINCT, DISTRICT CONGRESSES

[NHAN DAN 6 September editorial: "Precinct and District Party Congresses"]

[Text] Advancing toward the Sixth CPV Congress, basic party organizations throughout the country have completed their party congresses. Party congresses are now being conducted in 400 precinct and district party organizations. These congresses are designed to continually make suggestions on the draft documents of the party Central Committee which will be presented at the Sixth Party Congress. They are also aimed at reviewing the situation of the party organizations in implementing the Fifth Party Congress resolution and their own resolutions, and at discussing the guidelines and tasks of precinct and district party organizations in the coming tenure.

The results of recent grass-roots-level congresses constitute an important factor for the success of party congresses at precinct, district, and higher levels. The comments of millions of party members and party chapter delegates, and of basic party organization congresses on the various documents of the Sixth Party Congress and the various political reports of provinces, precincts, and districts constitute precious assets.

The basic party organization congresses have, on the basis of the situation in their localities, firmly understood the central viewpoints, and have referred to the projects, guidelines and tasks of districts and provinces to outline the tasks, norms, and measures for their struggle, and to formulate their own revolutionary action programs for the coming years.

Precinct and district party congresses should adequately review the suggestions of party members and delegates to the grass-roots-level congresses and continue to make suggestions to the documents of higher level congresses. Precinct and district party committees should collect and study the suggestions of grass-roots-level congresses in order to substantiate and qualitatively enhance their own reports. They must refer to the Fifth Party Congress resolution and other resolutions of the party Central Committee to review their leadership and guidance in the past on the strength of the last precinct and district party congress resolutions. At the same time, they must put forth guidelines, tasks, objectives, and measures for a positive and fundamentally scientific struggle suitable to the local situation.

Many good results have been achieved in building and perfecting the district level in the past few years. Many districts have become good production units where the economy is developing, the people's livelihood is stabilized, and national defense and security remains strong and firm.

Districts are the level of comprehensive socioeconomic and administrative management and the area for developing agricultural production and building the economic structures for agroindustry or agro-forestry-industry and agro-fishery-industry. In districts agriculture is connected with the development of industries, handicrafts, processing industries, production of consumer and export goods, and circulation and distribution. Districts are the broad and great area in which to exploit all potentials in terms of land, labor, trades and jobs; the fortresses for national defense; and the place where combat and combat stand-by forces are organized to firmly ensure national defense and security and where the people's material and cultural lives are well taken care of and new socialist men are built.

Each precinct and each district should set up an economic structure suitable to its own conditions and potentials, closely link village plans with sector plans and general district plans; closely combine agriculture with industry at the very grassroots level; develop the various service sectors; and build an infrastructure of inter-village communications, postal networks, economic and technical centers, and so on in order to effectively support agricultural and handicraft production and circulation and distribution.

The management tasks in districts should be renovated to promote the dynamism and autonomy of primary installations, consolidate cooperatives and production collectives, organize and care for the people's livelihood, and promote the people's mastery over all areas.

Precinct and district party congresses should be well aware of the new requirements of building firm and strong precinct and district party organizations in the new situation so as to set forth guidelines and measures to the leadership of precinct and district party committees, basic party organizations, and the contingent of cadres and party members. A scrupulous attitude must be adopted at congresses to overcome negative aspects detected during the last self-criticism and criticism and to resolutely eliminate unqualified members from the party.

The experience of some precincts and districts where party congresses have already been completed, shows that the quality of political reports by precinct and district party committees is of decisive significance to the success of the party congress. These reports must be well prepared, focus on the main issues, correctly evaluate achievements as well as shortcomings, and point out realistic guidelines, tasks, objectives, norms, and measures.

We should thoroughly understand the guiding thought of using the people as a base, ensure the people's mastery, uphold autonomy and creativity, and advance the movements in precincts and districts.

Precinct and district party congresses will elect new party committees and delegations to higher party congresses. Whether the contingents of cadres in precincts and districts can be renovated and leadership and management -- especially socioeconomic management -- in precincts and districts can be enhanced, all depends primarily on the election of party committee echelons.

We should elect to the precinct and district party committees those comrades who typify the new era and who possess good qualities, abilities, new thinking -- especially economic thinking -- new behavior, dynamism, creativity, and daring. They must stay close to the people, wholeheartedly serve the people, respect the people's right to mastery, and enjoy the people's confidence.

We absolutely will not elect incompetent and unqualified comrades to the party committees and the delegations to higher party congresses. The election of young, well forged, and qualified members to the new party committees is an urgent and important requirement.

The precinct and district party congress resolutions must be turned into seething revolutionary movements among the masses in the advance toward the party congresses of provincial, city, and special zone party organizations, and toward the Sixth CPV Congress.

[Station editor's review of Armed Forces units' activities]

[Excerpts] To date, almost all basic party organizations in the Army have finished holding congresses. At present, the various armed services and branches are preparing to hold party organization congresses at the divisional level. By mid-August 1986, virtually all basic party organizations belonging to the Rear Service General Department had held party congresses. Thousands of suggestions contributed the party Central Committee's draft report were promptly reviewed and submitted to higher echelons. The party committee of the Rear Service General Department has guided a number of pilot units in holding congresses initially to develop experience. The party committee's standing body and the political organ of the general department closely monitored the congresses, especially those held by pilot and major units. The experience gained from the congresses held by the party organizations of Military Hospital No. 354, the Military Medicine Department, the 71st Group of the Gas and Oil Department were studied and disseminated, ensuring strict observance of the prescribed procedures for holding congresses.

By 30 August, many party organizations above the grass-roots level of the Rear Service General Department had finished holding congresses. They include the Gas and Oil Department, the Military Medicine Department, the Military Provisions Department, the Quatermasters Department, the Barracks Department, and the Transport Department. The Rear Service General Department's party organization has carried out control work intensively. Urgent, determined efforts have been made to investigate and resolve cases of violations of discipline by party members named in letters of denunciation and to help the various party committee echelons reach a conclusion on the composition of party committee personnel and the nomination of delegates to attend party congresses at higher levels. [passage omitted] Meanwhile, basic party organizations of the local armed forces also held congresses. [passage omitted]

Hanoi City Congresses

[Text] As the 10th congress of delegates of the Hanoi municipal party organization is approaching, all the party organizatons in precincts, districts, and towns have recently held congresses of grass-roots party units. At these congresses, party members positively contributed realistic views toward the draft political reports of the party Central Committee, the municipality, and the various localities. At the same time, the grass-roots party units also carefully discussed the implementation of the immediate, pressing tasks facing them and their localities in production, social welfare, maintaining public order and security, and the movement to develop a new lifestyle.

As of 30 August, some 71 percent of the local grass-roots party organizations had completed their congresses. Gia Lam, a pilot district, was the first in the municipality to finish organizing congresses at 133 basic party units. Hoan Kiem Precinct, also a pilot unit, finished second by organizing congresses at 171 out of 181 basic party units.

Meanwhile, in Dong Da, Ba Dinh, and Hai Ba Trung Precincts, in Tu Liem, Tranh Tri, Dan Phuong, Soc Son, and Phuc Tho Districts, and in Son Tay City, 50 percent and more of the local basic party units have held congresses. However, some districts such as Me Linh, Thach That, and Ba Vi have been slow in holding congresses.

During the same period, party organizations of public organs, enterprises, schools, and hospitals directly subordinate to the municipal party committee have either completed or are holding congresses at more than 50 percent of the grass-roots units. In particular, the party organizations of United Transportation Enterprise No 8 and the Export-Import United Corporation have completed congresses at all of their basic party units.

In the coming days, congresses will be held urgently and carefully at the remaining units so that all basic units in the entire municipality will complete their congresses by 10 September.

Kien Giang Congresses

OW281055 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 27 Aug 86

[Text] Nearly all basic-level party organizations in Kien Giang Province have finished holding their congresses. Under the provincial party committee's guidance, Tan Hiep District has held basic-level party congresses and the district party organization congress to draw lessons. To date, all party chapters and basic-level party organizations in the district have finished holding their congresses.

Before holding congresses, the Tan Hiep District party committee completed some specific tasks to effect new changes in the entire district. It paid attention to developing the results of the self-criticism and criticism drive, considering it a process of educating and training cadres and party members in perfecting the party committee echelons and of preparing personnel for the district and basic-level party congresses.

The standing committee of the district party committee reviewed its tasks in the 1st 6 months and remedied a number of shortcomings which surfaced in the recent self-criticism and criticism drive. It also reviewed the mass motivation and agricultural transformation work, the development of small industry and handicraft production, and the task of building the party at the basic level. This review helped basic-level party congresses and the district party committee assess the situation more accurately and promote confidence among cadres, party members, and the masses.

The standing committee of the Tan Hiep district party committee also held working sessions with various boards of basic-level party committees and chapters to point out good points, shortcomings, strengths, and weaknesses of each unit while contributing views on guidelines for socioeconomic development, national defense and security, and the staffing of basic-level party committees.

Before holding congresses, Tan Hiep District launched an emulation movement to boost production and care for the people's livelihood. Nearly all members of party organizations and chapters in the district attended the congresses and contributed many practical views concerning the documents of the center and the reports on the work of the provincial and district party congresses. The basic-level party congresses set forth guidelines for the future tasks of localities and units.

The emulation movement carried out to greet the party congresses has achieved good results. Villages and hamlets concentrated efforts on fighting drought on 1,500 hectares of rice, saved some 2,150 hectares of rice from being ravaged by pests, repaired and improved many road sections, repaired 16 classrooms, and built 2 more village health stations and 30 apartments for disabled soldiers and fallen heroes' families.

After organizing the basic-level party congresses in Tan Hiep District, the Kien Giang provincial party committee will guide other districts in completing their basic-level party congresses during the month of August and preparing for the convening of district party organization congresses in the entire province.

Ha Nam Ninh Congresses

[Text] The party committee of Ha Nam Ninh Province is conducting party organization congresses at the grass-roots level. The organization committee coordinated with the training, propaganda, control, and civic action committees of the provincial party committee to organize a refresher training conference to train five key cadres -- including secretaries and deputy secretaries of party committees, chairmen of cooperatives, and so on -- for each basic unit in the fundamental contents of the draft documents to be presented at the Sixth Party Congress and the various reports by provincial and district party congresses. Following this conference, the key cadres and all the party committees referred to the specific situation in their localities and units in order to prepare reports at the grass-roots-level congresses, setting forth the guidelines and tasks for the struggle in the coming years. The party committee of Ha Nam Ninh Province has attentively trained a contingent of qualified lecturers to convey the contents of party congress documents to each party member. Before holding the congresses, the provincial and district party committees have completed the first phase of self-criticism and criticism drive, completely settled all outstanding problems, and resolutely remedied shortcomings. Several delegations from the provincial level have been sent to districts and basic units to control the correction of shortcomings and preparations for the congress.

The party committee of Ha Nam Ninh Province has drawn upon the experiences from a previously held congress in Hai Dong village (Hai Hau District) to guide other villages and hamlets in holding their congresses. Some 20 districts, towns, and units in the province have all examined the experiences of congresses held in some grassroots-level units before holding congresses in other party organizations.

In Hai Hau District, 12 villages have completed their congressese and the remaining villages are holding theirs, which are scheduled for completion on 29 August so preparations can be made for the coming district party organization congress.

USSR OFFICIAL DENIES MILITARY BUILDUP IN PACIFIC

BK040926 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 4 Sep 86

[Text] A senior Soviet official now visiting Australia says assertions of a Russian military buildup are untrue. But the official, (Ludvik) Chizhov, defended the increased Soviet commercial presence in the region. Mr Chizhov is head of the Pacific Department of the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Radio Australia's Canberra office says his visit is being interpreted in diplomatic circles as an attempt by the Soviet Union to explain its increasing interests in the Pacific. Mr Chizhov says the Soviet Union was only doing the minimum necessary for its own defense in the Pacific, taking into account the American buildup in the region. On the subject of the Soviet Union's fishing agreement with Kiribati and a proposed agreement with Vanuatu, Mr Chishov says his country was interested in developing good relations with all countries in the region. But he stressed the Soviet Union had no military goals in mind when reaching such agreements.

HAYDEN ON INDONESIA'S BAN OF AIR FORCE PLANES

[Text] The foreign affairs minister, Mr Hayden, has ruled out any Australian retaliation against Indonesia's sudden ban on Australian Air Force flights. He says the cause of the ban on Australian Air Force planes landing in Indonesia remains unknown. However, it is believed to be in response to the publication of a book by a Perth academic, which includes details of President Suharto's family wealth. A Radio Australia reporter, (Bruce Bertram), has the story:

[Begin recording] [Bertram] Mr Hayden estimates that about a score of Australian Air Force aircraft would have flown through Indonesia by next January, mostly for training in Singapore and Malaysia. With Indonesia's sudden and mysterious ban, the aircraft are now expected to take other routes. Mr Hayden says while the cause of the ban remains unkown, he is not panicking and there will be no thought to taking retaliatory action.

[Hayden] If we elevated the level of intensity of this retaliating, then where would it end? Qantas goes through Indonesia, too. I think it is just one of the things we have got to try to sort out -- what has happened -- with patience and restraint, but with firmness in defense of our values and our position. And not to overreact.

[Bertram] Australia's ambassador in Jakarta, Mr Morrison, has been instructed to try to find the cause of the ban. [end recording]

Hayden Defends Response

[Text] A member of the federal opposition's defense committee says it is time for Australia to put an end to what he describes as repeated humiliation at the hands of Indonesia.

The Liberal Party member from Denison in Tasmania, Mr Michael Hodgman, says the ban on Australian Air Force landing rights is the latest in the long list of unacceptable actions by the Indoesians. He says the foreign affairs minister, Mr Hayden, should tell the Indonesian ambassador that Australia is not prepared to tolerate such treatment.

[Begin Hodgman recording] Hawke and Hayden believe the way to win the respect of Indonesia is to appease Indonesia. The opposite is the truth. Unless Australia stands up and is counted on issues and behaves as a responsible and authoritative nation, Indonesia will continue to treat us with contempt and I, as an Australian, am not prepared to accept that, and I am sure the overwhelming majority of Australians would feel exactly the same. [end recording]

However, Mr Hayden has defended the government's response to the Indonesian action. He said there was no point in laying a formal complaint with the Indonesian ambassador until the reasons for the Air Force ban had been established. Mr Hayden said Australia's respones to previous Indonesian problems had worked.

[Begin Hayden recording] The way the Australian Government handled the previous incident, which arose from an article in the SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, left the Indonesian Government in a position where they found that they had to backtrack from the very tough set of reprisals they had taken against Australia. I think it is very important that we do not overreact; and when we do act, we act with calmness, confidence and firmness. And the time to act is when you establish what has gone wrong -- and we are in the process of trying to do that. [end recording]

Envoy Says Ban Ended

[Text] A ban by Indonesia on landing rights for Australian military aircraft appears to have been resolved. Radio Australia's correspondent in Singapore, John Lombard, says this follows the meeting between the Australian ambassador in Jakarta, Mr Morrison, and the chief of the Indonesian Armed Forces, General Murdani.

Lombard says a statement released by Mr Morrison had clarified the situation. The ambassador says assurances were given that the procedures for landing approvals which had been followed in the past would continue to be observed.

Mr Morrison said some confusion had been caused by the term "landing rights." He said Australia recognized that such approvals could not be regarded as automatic. Mr Morrison said Australia had no difficulty with those procedures, and he appreciated the cooperation it had received from the Indonesian authorities.

GOVERNMENT REJECTS NONALIGNED DEFENSE PROPOSAL

HK080457 Wellington THE EVENING POST in English 3 Sep 86 p 2

[Text] NEW ZEALAND PRESS ASSOCIATION [NZPA] -- The Government would be maintaining its position that New Zealand should remain part of the Western alliance in spite of a Labour Party conference resolution calling for a non-aligned defence policy Defence Minister Frank O'Flynn said yesterday.

The Government, he said, had no intention of withdrawing from the Anzus alliance even though it had become inoperative between New Zealand and the United States.

New Zealand was "part of the broad Western alliance" whose interests it would continue to protect in the South Pacific region with conventional forces.

However, the future of the New Zealand battalion in Singapore -- the withdrawal of which was called for by a conference vote -- would be reconsidered during the upcoming defence review, the Minister said.

After the conference voted for a defence policy based on no military alliances with the superpowers or their blocs, Mr O'Flynn declined to answer reporters' questions immediately, saying they should be put in writing to his office.

The NZPA submitted questions on Monday, asking what action the Government now planned for Anzus, what steps if any would be taken towards a non-aligned position, and what was planned for the Singapore battalion.

Mr O'Flynn replied to the questions in writing yesterday.

He said the anti-nuclear policy was compatible with Anzus and would not change.

And in addition to the Western alliance, New Zealand would continue to maintain and extend close military co-operation with Australia.

"New Zealand does not intend to become non-aligned in the political sense or in any other sense, let alone join the Non-Aligned Movement."

PRESIDENT AQUINO REAFFIRMS STAND ON SECESSION

BK051701 Hong Kong AFP in English 1657 GMT 5 Sep 86

[Text] Jolo, Philippines, Sept 5 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino stood firm on her refusal to allow any part of the Philippines to secede in her talks here with Moslem separatist leader Nur Misuari, a government emissary said Friday. In a press conference at the Philippine Marines Headquarters here after the talks, government emissary Agapito Aquino said Mrs. Aquino "made it clear that dismemberment, secession from the Philippines is non-negotiable."

Mrs. Aquino and Mr. Misuari gave no details on the substance of their two-hour meeting, except for the formation of their negotiating panels. Mr. Misuari, who heads the Moslem insurgent Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) had declared before the talks that he was seeking the secession of various Moslem-inhabited areas from the largely Roman Catholic Philippines. Mrs. Aquino said before the talks that she would not allow secession.

In the same press conference, Mr. Aquino said that the 1976 Tripoli agreement and a provision for Moslem autonomy in a new Philippine constitution currently being drafted would serve as reference points in the negotiations. The Tripoli agreement was a ceasefire negotiated by the previous government and the MNLF in 1976, granting partial autonomy to Moslem-inhabited regions.

Mr. Aquino said Mrs. Aquino invited Mr. Misuari to the presidential palace in Manila but the MNLF leader said he had to consult his people first. Mr. Aquino also said Mr. Misuari, who returned to the Philippines this week after a self-imposed exile, "will be staying for a while in the country to visit his followers in other provinces of Mindanao."

MISUARI TO CONSULT WITH MINDANAO MNLF LEADERS

[Text] Chairman Nur Misuari of the Moro National Liberation Front will start a series of consultations with other MNLF leaders in Mindanao this week, beginning in Basilan and the Zamboanga peninsula. The 5-day Bangsa Moro Congress held in Sulu, which ended Friday, gave Misuari a free hand in deciding what solution should be worked out to bring peace to the southern Philippines.

Agapito Butz Aquino, official government emissary to the negotiations, along with the chairman of the Partido Demokratika Socialista Ng Pilipinas, (Carberto) Gonzalez, met with Southern Command chief Major General Jose Magno Jr in Zamboanga city to work out a system to ensure the safety of Misuari as he moved around in Mindanao for the consultations. Butz Aquino said that despite reports that some other rebel factions may not agree to what Misuari will do, it is their internal problem, because the government will talk only to the MNLF as a whole, and not to several factions.

This was announced yesterday by Rene Saguisag, outgoing chief presidential spokesperson.

The presidential party to the US includes Philippine Ambassador to the US Emmanuel Pelaez, Finance Minister Jaime Ongpin, Trade and Industry Minister Jose Concepcion Jr., Central Bank Governor Jose B. In another statement Saguisag said President Aquino accepted Villadolid's resignation "with deep regret."

He added that President Aquino expressed her gratitude for all that Villadolid had done for her government and hoped that the former NEW YORK TIMES Manila correspondent could be called on to serve the administration again in the future.

AQUINO TO DISCUSS MARCOS WHILE IN U.S.

HK031016 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 3 Sep 86 pp 1, 6

[By Cristina Pastor]

[Text] Deposed President Marcos' "continuing interference" in Philippine affairs will be in the agenda of President Aquino's talks with United States President Ronald Reagan when she visits the U.S. this month.

This was revealed yesterday by Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra Jr who was a panelist in a Makati forum on "Perceptions on the Aquino Visit to the U.S." University of Washington professor Peter Bacho was the main speaker.

Mitra, a member of the President's official party to the U.S., said the "friendship" between Marcos and Reagan was one of the things that "could be discussed."

"Why is he (Marcos) able to do it while he is in the U.S.? What has the U.S. government done (about this)? If it aware of (Marcos') activities? What are the mutual interests between the Philippines and the U.S. insofar as Marcos is concerned? These are things which could be clarified in the visit," Mitra said.

Marcos, who lives in exile in Honolulu, is widely believed to be financing anti-Aquino demonstrations in Manila. One particularly violent rally resulted in the death of a park promenader at the hands of loyalists.

Mitra said Marcos' role in efforts to destabilize the Aquino government would be "privately" discussed by Reagan and Mrs Aquino.

"They will discuss the matter away from their advisers who may sometimes not be helpful," he said.

Mitra also contradicted Prof Bacho's view that the Philippines would "not be secure" in the President's absence, by saying the country has a "stable government and a confident president."

Mitra said that while most Cabinet officials felt the President should postpone her U.S. trip for early next year, "tremendous letters of goodwill" from the Americans have convinced her to go this month.

'UNSOLICITED ADVICE' FROM REAGAN CRITICIZED

HK031012 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 3 Sep 86 p 4

[Editorial: "Reagan Advances Unsolicited Advice"]

[Text] In a report by the THE NEW YORK TIMES, published by THE MANILA CHRONICLE yesterday, the Reagan Administration has expressed concern at what it considers President Aquino's lack of effectiveness in handling the Communist insurgency. Reagan officials said the Administration believed that her efforts to seek a cease-fire with the New People's Army were not succeeding and that they wanted her to take tougher measures against the insurgents.

This expression of concern is a clear signal from Washington that it is increasingly becoming uneasy over the conciliatory direction of the Aquino Government towards the Communist guerrillas. It indicates that the Reagan Administration is now taking an overt step to pressure her Government from further flirtation with the insurgents.

It further indicates that President Aquino does not enjoy the unqualified support of the Reagan Administration, despite the fact that Senator Richard Lugar had handed her a letter from Mr Reagan assuring her that his administration stood firmly behind her government.

The Reagan concern should at least jolt her to shed off whatever illusions she had about his support. It foreshadows issues in which she must anticipate some hard questioning from American officials. Forewarned is forearmed.

From this end, the White House conclusion that the cease-fire efforts are not succeeding are a bit too premature. The objective views seems to be that both the armed forces and the NPA are responsible for one form of provocation or another. Apparently, both sides are trying to gain positions of strength while talks are under way between Government and rebel negotiators to establish a cease-fire.

The problem with the view of some Reagan officials urging the Government to take tougher measures against the insurgents is that the armed forces are not at this stage ready to undertake an all-out guerrilla war. Neither the Government nor the NPA is prepared for a slugging campaign.

On the part of the Government, the depleted treasury does not permit it to pour resources into a total military campaign without dragging down the economy. Moreover, the hard-line anti-insurgency campaign of the Marcos regime tells us that it resulted only in the rapid growth of the NPA.

A confrontational policy for the Aquino Government is probably the worst possible option. Its high financial and political costs in terms of draining the treasury and sharpening national divisions could be a guarantee that no economic recovery takes place.

That would be a recipe for further unrest -- a condition that could eventually put at risk the viability of US bases here.

LAUREL DOUBTS U.S. SENATOR'S ALLEGED STATEMENT

LAUREL STRESSES CONTINUITY IN FOREIGN POLICY

HK031424 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 3 Sep 86 p 24

[Text] Vice-President and Foreign Affairs Minister Salvador H. Laurel yesterday called for continuity in the country's foreign policy.

In a speech before diplomats at the Hotel Inter-continental Manila, Laurel said a country's foreign policy is governed by geographical location, economic needs; people's accumulated concept of foreign affairs, their ideological predilections, and prejudices; pressures from other countries, external forces beyond government control; and current agreements with other countries which have to be respected.

"In no other area of policy is continuity more important or unavoidable than in foreign affairs," Laurel said.

He said in the past the Filipinos have not been consulted in the formulation of some of its foreign policies which directly affect them.

He cited the RP-US military bases agreement which "has existed for 39 years since 1947 by acquiescence of the Filipino people."

Laurel said the Filipino people have not really been heard on the US bases issue.

Laurel proposed that one year before the expiry of the bases agreement a plebiscite would be held to determine the people's consensus on the issue. If the people agree on the stay of the US bases, Laurel proposed that negotiations should start from scratch that a new agreement should be made. [sentence as published]

Meanwhile, in Angeles City, Deputy Defense Minister Wilson Gamboa has called for the removal of a provision in the RP-US bases agreement which allows the United States "unhampered military operations in the country."

Gamboa issued this statement in his lecture before some 400 students and faculty members of the Angeles University Foundation here Monday, the PHILIPPINES NEWS AGENCY reported.

The provision stipulated that the United States can launch any military offensive against any country from the Philippines.

"Unhampered military operations allows the United States to store nuclear arms in the country making it vulnerable to a nuclear attack," he said.

Gamboa stressed that the removal of the provision will reduce the risks of a possible nuclear attack in the Philippines.

The deputy minister also said within the next 10 years, U.S. military installations in the Philippines would not be very important any more because the U.S. present "star wars" project would render current methods obsolete.

He said, however, that presence of the U.S. bases in the country is still necessary "for leverage."

TERRORISTS BLOW UP POWER LINES IN ZAMBOANGA

HK081037 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 1000 GMT 8 Sep 86

[Text] The entire Zamboanga Peninsula this afternoon suffered a blackout as a result of a terrorist attack yesterday on the main transmission line of the Maria Cristina power grid. The grid is located at Barangay Magsaysay, Lanao del Norte. The Zamboanga City Electricity Cooperative reported that the main line from the grid's Tower 85 was cut after saboteurs blew it up. Cooperative officials said they hoped the lines would be replaced by the National Power Corporation [Napocor] on Thursday or Friday. The electricity cooperative at present is utilizing power through its emergency connection from the Napocor station based in Zamboanga City.

ARMY REFORMISTS TO CONTINUE GROUP'S EXISTENCE

[Text] The vote was unanimous: most of the 84 military officers who attended last Thursday night's meeting of the Reform the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] Movement (RAM), the loose but influential organization which played a pivotal role in deposing the Marcos government last February, supported the movement's continued existence.

In the process, the RAM, which from 1984 (when it first came into being) to early 1986 had to function underground for fear of the wrath of then Armed Forces chief, Gen. Fabian Ver, also elected the new members of its eleven-man steering committee, the group's overall decision-making body.

Elected that night were: Col. Gregorio Honasan, Lt. Col. Vic Batac, Lt. Diosdado Valerosos, Lt. Raffy Tadeo, Capt. Felix Turingan, Maj. Sonny Razon, Lt. George Javier, Lt. Antonio Cruz, Maj. Hotchkiss, Maj. Dagudag and Lt. R.S. Lee.

The results of the Thursday meeting dispelled, at least from the time being, rumors of an alleged split within the RAM (a speculative tidbit which was later denied by a RAM spokesman and subsequently verified by NEW DAY as totally unfounded) and of a view among RAM's reform-minded officers that the movement had outlived its usefulness and should therefore be dissolved.

The issue of dissolving the RAM came into being when certain members conveyed their inclination early this month to disband, erase the perceived split in the military (said to be heightened by the existence of fraternal organizations among the other military personnel), and stand united behind their institution and the chain of command.

At the core of the tension that has surrounded RAM during the past months following the February revolution is the realization by some of its members that the organization was becoming more and more political. For one thing, the distrust by some sectors towards Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has spilled into RAM's affairs due to accusations that RAM members are "Enrile boys." This charge never fails to rankle the younger RAM members, particularly those who are not members of Enrile's elite security group. Often, they are quick to argue that "Enrile is not the founder of the RAM, contrary to what has been claimed."

It is clear, however, that Enrile articulates much of their concern (equal investigation on human rights violations, more hardline stance against the communists, etc.). Cautiously, they do not hide the fact that they would be "apprehensive" if Enrile were suddenly fired because he articulated the views they share.

The political undertones of these developments had only served to dampen what remained of the idealism which had at one time, necessitated the founding of the RAM. "It's no longer worth it," noted one officer, referring to maintaining the organization.

He admitted that prior to the Thursday meeting, many of the RAM members were seriously rethinking their position about continuing RAM because there seemed to be more negative than positive results, and RAM is now seen as division of the AFP.

"We want to be identified with the new AFP," another officer noted. "RAM is getting too political. Besides, some of the reforms we had initially been seeking are now being acted upon since Gen. Fidel Ramos became the chief of staff. In essence, reform within the AFP is now bing institutionalized, so what would be the function of a movement like RAM?"

All this, however, became moot and academic last Thursday when a battery of RAM members -- both old and new -- took to the stage to speak out on behalf of RAM's continued existence.

"This is the first time I attended a RAM meeting and now, suddenly I am confronted by all this talk that RAM will be dissolved...Ang malas ko naman ngayong gabi (Boy, I'm unlucky tonight)," a captain said. "Anyway, what I just want to say is that RAM shouldn't be dissolved since a lot of reforms, particularly for those soldiers like me in the field, have yet to be accomplished."

RAM spokesman Lt. Valeroso, made his own appeal from the floor. "After all we have been through, how can we abandon our campaign for reforms now?" he asked.

Col. Hector Tarrazona, a former RAM steering committee member, on the other hand, reminded the officers that RAM is not a fraternal organization and never had been. "RAM is a movement, an ideal represented by reform-minded officers of the armed forces," he said. "Its function is merely to guide the reformation process upon recommendation of the general membership. Our objective is to transform the AFP into one big reform movement and we need an organized effort, through the RAM, to initiate reforms."

Honasan said that should RAM be disbanded, the spirit that gave birth to the movement could peter out: the pursuit of reforms, professionalism, integrity, economic decency. "We only need to address ourselves to this question: have the reforms which we initially wanted to accomplish been achieved? Should the reformation process within the AFP -- which is slowly being institutionalized -- be allowed to run its course without the movement which is its heart and soul?" he asked.

Honasan had only one request: If the movement's members vote that RAM should continue, he recommended that General Ramos be made honorary chairman inasmuch as he "represents professionalism at its best in the Armed Forces."

As it turned out, there were no speakers for the dissolution of RAM. And when the vote was brought to the floor, the motion was carried overwhelmingly. The voting for the new members of the steering committee quickly followed.

In retrospect, most officers interviewed by NEW DAY noted that the argument of reformation within the AFP being a continuing process carried the day.

It was clear that most of the officers believe that even if many of the RAM's visions have been institutionalized in the new armed forces, RAM must continue to exist for as long as there are reforms to be undertaken in the military," said Honasan. "RAM will act as the second conscience of the NAFP [New Armed Forces of the Philippines]."

Pessimistic on Misuari Talks

[Text] Officers identified with the Reform the Armed Forces Movement (RAM) expressed pessimism yesterday over the scheduled peace talks between President Aquino and Nur Misuari, self-exiled leader of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

RAM sources said the President should not make policy agreements with Misuari but with the Moro people. They said Misuari merely reprsents one of the factions of the MNLF. The talks will be useless if the two other factions of the MNLF will not agree, they added.

Misuari is believed to espouse for Muslim secessionism, while the other MNLF factions headed by Hashim Salamat and Dimas Pundato are more "reformist in goals" and seek only for autonomy.

The sources said the three leaders differ ideologically and personally.

The RAM officers said Misuari is formerly a communist, pointing out that he was a Kabataang Makabayan [National Youth] (KM) member and Samahang Demokratikong Kabataan [Democratic Youth Association] (SDK) leader before the martial law period.

Misuari, they said, is also being accused of being a slave of foreign powers, specifically Libya, and of malversation of MNLF funds contributed by the World Muslim League and the Organization of Islamic Conference.

Other military sources also expressed disagreement with the President's discussion [as published] to meet with Misuari in the South.

They said Misuari should be the one to go the the President.

"It could be a sign of the President's humility but it will affect our national prestige and give Misuari's group some legal status or status of belligerancy because it is the head-of-state dealing with them," they said.

GOVERNMENT REBELS HOLD 2ND MEETING ON CEASE-FIRE

HK070156 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 0030 GMT 7 Sep 86

[Text] The Philippine Government and communist rebel negotiators met for the second time in one month yesterday somewhere in Metro Manila on the government's proposal for an immediate cessation of hostilities to last 30 days, during which substantive peace talks between them would start. In a joint statement signed by the government and the rebel panels, the insurgents' group said however that although they agree to a cease-fire at the soonest possible time, they have to consult on the matter with their people for final decision. The group said nevertheless that the cease-fire will provide the proper climate for contiued talks for permanent peace.

Joint Communique Issued

HK070524 Hong Kong Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 7 Sep 86

[Text] The second round of talks in Manila between the Philippine Government and the communist rebels has come to an end. During the talks, the government put forward a proposal for a 30-day cease-fire, as Keith Dalton reports:

[Begin Dalton recording] In a joint communique issued after the talks, it was stated that while the communist negotiators agreed in principle that a cease-fire should be called as soon as possible, the rebel side asked for time to consult the leadership of the banned communist party and the New People's Army. Both negotiating teams have agreed to meet again in 2 weeks.

Gauging from the working of the joint communique, the criterion for a cease-fire differs for both sides. While the Aquino government sees a cease-fire as providing a proper climate for substantial peace talks, the communists believe a cease-fire should form part of a comprehensive political settlement. This, according to the communists, differes fundamentally from the immediate cease-fire proposal of the government, and makes consultations imperative.

In the communique, the communists pointed out that the premises and guidelines of such a cease-fire would have to be clearly defined. They also said that the deployment of government troops against the rebels is the main cause of continuing clashes, a claim the military would disagree with.

The 4-hour meeting between the 2-member panels of the government and the national democratic front, an umbrella left wing organization, was held in a suburban house in Manila. The chief government negotiator, Ramon Mitra, later said that Mrs Aquino was pleased about the progress of the talks, but wanted a quick decision on the cease-fire proposal. [end recording]

MITRA ASKS FOR MORE CONFIDENCE IN NEGOTIATIONS

[Text] Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra yesterday practically begged defense and military officials to have "a little more confidence" in the official negotiators even as Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile continued to talk tough on the peace talks.

Mitra, a member of the Government panel, said unwarranted public commentaries on the details of the peace talks are creating an unhealthy atmosphere for the talks.

Mitra said nobody should be alarmed on whatever the demands of the National Democratic Front (NDF) are. He said government negotiators composed of himself, Commission on Audit Chairman Teofisto Guingona and former Sen Jose Diokno have not agreed nor disagreed on anything yet.

"We are trying to arrive at a common denominator which is agreeable to both parties," he said. "But we have to be let alone and handle these things by ourselves to enable us to arrive at the right formula."

Mitra's plea came on the heels of Enrile' warning against the government making any deals which would cede any part of the country to communist rebels.

Speaking before members of the Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity at the Quezon City Sports Club Wednesday night, Enrile outlined the defense and military establishment's stand on the peace talks with the communist insurgents.

He said that the government should not enter into any agreement with the "Marxist-Leninist movement" that would surrender sovereignty over any part of the national territory.

Also, any agreement drawn up between the two sides should not recognize any area as being politically or militarily controlled by the rebels, he said.

Meanwhile, the Partido ng Bayan [PNB -- People's Party] denounced Enrile's naming PNB as a communist front.

Rolando Olalia, PNB national chairman, said Enrile's statement only "manifests his rabid anti-communism and anti-people stance."

Olalia added the PNB is a political party of the workers, peasants and middle class.

"This is very explicit in the Constitution and program of action that were unanimously approved by more than 2,000 delegates during the party founding congress at the Folk Arts Theater Aug. 30 and 31, "he said.

He accused Enrile of spreading outright lies against a party that is committed to national freedom and popular democracy. It can only be explained by his sharing similar anti-people views with his former boss (Marcos) and his US supporters," Olalia said.

The military Bagong Alyansang Makabayan (Bayan) [New People's Alliance] expressed fears that Enrile's accusation against PNB may be a prelude to an eventual crackdown against "progressive" organizations.

In a press statement, Bayan said Enrile's accusations are "not anymore surprising" since it came in the wake of a similar charge which he had made against grade-schoolers of St. Scholastica's College.

It added that Enrile's charges only "forebodes the closing down of a venue for democratic expression," and may drive those who have opted to walk the path of peace, back to the hills where they have a better chance of speaking and being heard."

Bayan also said that if indeed there are communists within the PNB, it is a "clear proof" that they have "chosen the peaceful way in articulating and realizing their political convictions."

ENRILE STATES STAND ON PEACE TALKS WITH REBELS

HK041355 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 4 Sep 86 pp 1, 16

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile disclosed yesterday the stand of the Ministry of National Defense and the New Armed Forces of the Philippines in the peace and ceasefire talks between the government and the communists and their front organizations.

He disclosed the stand of the ministry and the military in a speech before the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity at the Quezon City Sports Club. He said:

"It is our position that the government should not enter into an agreement with the Marxist-Leninist movement that would result in any or all of the following conditions:

"1. The surrender of sovereignty by the government over any part of the national territory.

"2. The recognition of any area as being politically or militarily 'controlled' by the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP], the New People's Army, or the National Democratic Front [NDF].

"3. The acknowledgement that any area or community is 'defended' by any armed force other than the legitimate police and military forces of the government."

The defense chief said that several months ago, a feeling of optimism was generated among the people by the prospect of a peaceful settlement of the insurgency problem.

He said that many people thought that with the exit of the old regime, the dissidents would come down from the hills and join the mainstream of political and socio-economic life.

According to Enrile, the dissidents made the peace overtures to cater to popular will and sentiment and went though the motions of acceding to the wishes of the people by sending emissaries to dialogue with government.

The defense chief said that the NDF-CPP-NPA had set up a political party to signal their alleged readiness to enter the arena of democratic politics.

He said their leaders came out in the open and spoke of reformist programs, rather than of a violent revolution. Their "fellow travellers" and sympathizers in various sectors, he said, also came out in a chorus of support and encouragement.

But underneath the veneer of these development, "we now see the stark realities that continue to haunt the nation," he said.

The first reality, Enrile said, is that the armed and violent struggle continues to be waged by them. Government soldiers are being killed together with innocent civilians, he added.

The second reality, Enrile said, is that the people who are making the peace overtures and who had purportedly set up a political party to engage in democratic processes are the same people who are leading the armed struggle.

"The Marxist-Leninist movement," the defense chief pointed out, "thrives on class tension and class struggle. When they come to the negotiating table, they do not intend to make peace. For them, negotiating with non-Marxists is merely a continuation of the class struggle. It is not a permanent avenue to peace, but a strategic move in a never-ending war."

Calls New Party Communist Front

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday branded the newly formed Partido ng Bayan [People's Party] political party as another front organization of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP]. He said the formation of the party is part of an orchestrated move by the leftist to advance their armed and unarmed struggle. Enrile also accused the leaders of the underground movement in indulging in double-talk in the ongoing peace talks with the government. He said the CPP does not intend to make peace but will use the negotiations for a strategic maneuver. At the same time he warned the government leadership against entering into an agreement with the movement that would result in the surrender of sovereignty by the government of any part of the national territory, recognition of any area as being politically or military controlled by the CPP and the New People's Army and the National Democratic Front, and the acknowledgement that any area or community is defended by groups other than the legitimate police or military force of the government.

PIMENTEL URGES ENRILE TO KEEP QUIET OR RESIGN

[Text] Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel Jr yesterday [4 Sep] asked Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile to resign if he cannot put up with President Aquino's policies towards the rebels. Speaking before the Foreign Correspondents' Association of the Philippines, Pimemtel said it is improper for Enrile or any cabinet member to be questioning the policies of the president, especially on the ongoing cease-fire talks with the rebels. He said if Enrile is not happy about the ongoing negotiations, he should criticize this in the presence of the president and should refrain or desist from criticizing her policies publicly.

LAUREL DEFENDS ENRILE CRITICISM OF AQUINO POLICY

[Text] Vice-President Salvador H. Laurel yesterday said that criticisms of President Aquino's policies in dealing with the communist insurgency by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile "should be taken in the right spirit because it is his duty to be concerned with anything that affects the peace and order situation."

Laurel also said that members of the Cabinet should not ask fellow members to resign but instead they should work together.

He was reacting to a statement made by Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel who said that Enrile must resign or risk dismissal if he keeps criticizing President Aquino's policies in dealing with the communist insurgency problem.

"I think it is unfortunate that a member of the Cabinet should tell a fellow member to resign, especially in public. The Cabinet is like a carriage being pulled by several horses. The horses should pull together in the same direction in order for it to get anywhere," he said.

Laurel said that he is assuming that Pimentel was quoted correctly.

Laurel said that Pimentel has no authority to talk on the issue of the peace talks because he is not the one involved in the negotiations.

He said that while the peace talks should be given every chance to succeed, "it must succeed in the right direction. It must not result in a worse situation. That will be a different matter."

A prominent Marcos loyalist leader warned yesterday of the possible dire consequences if President Aquino would decide to fire Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile.

Lawyer Oliver Lozano said the government is courting a political disaster if it would kick out Enrile.

She said she did not know how the incident took place or who the persons responsible for the bombing are. [end recording]

MILF Threatened Local Mayor

[Text] Cagayan de Oro, Philippines, Sept 8 (AFP) -- At least eight people were killed and 96 others injured Sunday in a grenade attack by Moslem rebels on a church near here, a military official said Monday. Six worshippers at the Roman Catholic Church have died and two of the attackers were killed after the attack by a breakaway faction of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), army brigade commander Colonel Ramon Aquino told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. In Manila, a Philippine National Red Cross official said in a report carried by government-run television that she had been informed that nine people had died.

The attack came two days after MNLF chairman Nur Misuari formalized a truce with President Corazon Aquino which was disapproved of by the faction -- the Moslem Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) -- but Col. Aquino indicated that personal motives could be behind the attack. He said five men exploded a fragmentation grenade in the church in Salvador, in southern Lanao del Norte Province, after the priest had read the gospel before 200 churchgoers, including the local mayor.

Mayor Ricardo Bliss had received death threats from members of the MILF, a fundamentalist faction of the MNLF, weeks before the attack and one of the dead was his mother-in-law, he said. "We are preparing to neutralize the rebel group," Col. Aquino, whose brigade covers Salvador Town, said in an interview.

The MILF, led by self-exiled former Misuari aide Hashim Salamat, operates mainly in Moslem-dominated Lanao del Norte. One of those killed by pursuing security forces was identified by the military as MILF commander Manalamba Tambayao. The meeting between Mrs. Aquino and Mr. Misuari was in Jolo Island off western Mindanao, where the MNLF main faction led by Mr. Misuari operates.

NPA REPORTEDLY ACHIEVES 'STRATEGIC STALEMATE'

HK310144 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 0130 GMT 31 Aug 86

[Text] A ranking military commander has admitted that the communist New People's Army has already achieved a strategic stalemate with the Armed Forces of the Philippines in the northern Ilocos region. It means that the NPA, the guerrilla wing of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines, is now capable of launching renewed attacks against government forces. This according to Regional Unified Commander Brigadier General Jesus Dela Cruz.

Gen Dela Cruz attributed this to the defensive posture of the military brought about by the Aquino government's reconciliation policy. He deplored that while the military refrained itself from launching counterinsurgency operations, the rebels continued to mount attacks, particularly in the northern Philippines. He explained a strategic stalemate occurs when the guerrilla forces have established their mass base, control wide territories, and pack a fighting force a regular army could not longer defeat.

OFFICIAL SAYS CPP-NPA COULD 'TAKE OVER COUNTRY'

HK011240 Manila THE SUNDAY TIMES in English 31 Aug 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Retired Brig Gen Isidro Agunod, assistant secretary for plans and programs of the defense ministry yesterday said the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and the New People's Army (NPA) have the present capability to take over the country.

Agunod said in an interview with the defense press corps: "Militarily they can take over. Right now they have de facto military control over large areas in the rural areas."

Agunod explained that the communists have control over large areas in the countryside because government troops have been asked to pull out of the communist-controlled areas and the soldiers are being charged with human rights violations.

"The troops are physically immobilized and psychologically paralyzed," Agunod said.

Agunod said the subversives have taken advantage of the democratic space and good will offered to them by the present government.

Agunod said: "The present government has given a lot of human considerations for our citizens and they (NPAs) are taking advantage of this. That's the pity of it, the good will of the new government is being taken advantage of to proselytize or brainwash the people to use the press to subvert the new government, and if it continues before the election, we might have NDF-controlled areas while the cities will become contested areas."

The government troopers are doing their best and are facing a lot of fire from the enemy, Agunod said, adding that, they are living below the poverty level and they are being criticized by the press and their own people.

REBELS ADMIT RAID ON CEBU POLICE SUBSTATION

[Text] Communist rebels in Cebu have admitted that they carried out the attack on the Tuburan INP [Integrated National Police] substation last August 26. Three policemen and 1 civilian were reported killed in the raid, which was carried out by 30 rebels who made off with 6 armalities and 3 service pistols. The rebels said the raid was in line with their aim of destroying all vestiges of the past regime's facistic machinery.

PARTIDO NG BAYAN HOLDS FIRST CONGRESS 30-31 AUG

[Text] Emerging political parties are inevitably classified nowadays under certain labels: "left" for those which lean toward communism, "right" for those which favor capitalism, and "centrist" for those which try to strike a balance between the two ideologies. As if these were not enough, there are those which claim to be "left of center," "right of center," and so forth.

The Partido ng Bayan (PNB) [People's Party], primarily because it is headed by known communist leaders like Jose Ma. Sison, Bernabe Buscayno and Alan Jazmines, has always been branded as the party of the "left."

Such classification Sison disputes. In a prepared speech before delegates to the PNB's Founding Congress at the Folk Arts Theater during the weekend, at which President Aquino has been invited, Sison said the party is not "strictly a party of the left."

"It is a party of both the Left and the middle," he said. "It is a party of all the oppressed and exploited people who are fighting for their own liberation, and all round social progress."

Sison also said that the he had often been asked whether PNB is a rival or an extension of the Communist Party of the Philippines. "My simple answer is that with a national democratic character and has its own political and organizational integrity," he said. "Quite clearly, the Communist Party of the Philippines remains the Marxist-Leninist vanguard party of the proletariat."

PNB, said Sison, is different from the other political parties that have been formed in that it is mostly composed of the members of the working class. The other parties, according to him, are controlled by the "reactionary classes" of big compradors and landlords, who are susceptible to the dictates of the United States.

To ensure popular representation in the party, Sison said that the PNB constitution states that at least 60 percent, but no more than 70 percent, of all members must come from the toiling masses.

His party's decision to join the political fray Sison attributed to the perception that "there is not a single party or a combination of parties that can offer a solution to the ever worsening political and economic crisis" in the country.

He said the ascendancy of Mrs Aquino to the presidency has failed to solve the country's problems brought about by both the United States and the "local reactionary classes."

"The Aquino government," according to Sison, "is pulled by two contradictory trends." The principal trend is allegedly represented by the rabid pro-imperialists and the reactionaries and the secondary trend, by those who call themselves the liberal democrats.

Using both a financial squeeze and the threat of a coup, the US has been pressuring the Aquino government into making an early commitment on the retention of the US military bases beyond 1991, said Sison.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCES SDI PARTICIPATION

Kuranari Informs U.S.

OW090937 Tokyo KYODO in English 0933 GMT 9 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari Tuesday sent a government statement on Japan's decision to start talks on participation in the U.S.-proposed strategic defense initiative (SDI) to U.S. Secretary George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, a Foreign Ministry official said. The statement was approved by the Cabinet meeting earlier the same day. The SDI program, popularly called "star wars" plan, is a space-based defense system research project announced by U.S. President Ronald Reagan in 1983. Weinberger requested Japan to participate in the project in March last year.

Talks To Begin Soon

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Japan said Tuesday it will start talks with the United States to lay an overall framework for Japan's participation in the research phase of the U.S. strategic defense initiative (SDI), popularly known as the "star wars" project. In a statement released Tuesday, chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda said participation in the SDI research is in line with Japan's basic policy of seeking stable relations between the West and the East through a drastic cut in nuclear arms and the abolition of nuclear weapons.

The decision to participate was approved by the Cabinet in a meeting Tuesday morning. The government's decision will not violate a 1969 Diet resolution banning military exploitation of Japan's space development efforts, the statement said. The Japanese decision came after the government dispatched three missions to the U.S. to examine the program. The ministers concerned, under Gotoda's chairmanship, held a series of meetings which started last April to discuss the technology, strategy, and legal framework after the U.S. asked Japan to join the research.

U.S. President Ronald Reagan, who announced the project in 1983, told Japan early last year that the program is aimed at nullifying ballistic missiles with a non-nuclear defense system and seeks a total abolition of nuclear arms the statement said. The United States has asked 10 countries to participate in the SDI project. So far West Germany, Britain and Israel have accepted the request.

In a meeting with Reagan in January last year, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone expressed "understanding" of the U.S. decision to go ahead with the SDI program but he stopped short of making any commitment about Japan's participation. In a report issued last April following the last fact-finding trip to the U.S., a joint government-private mission paved the way for the government decision, saying that participation could result in "enormous progress" in Japan's high technology.

The government statement Tuesday sought to stress the role of SDI as a strategic deterrent in East-West ties and a defense system to eliminate nuclear weapons. Nakasone has already confirmed with Reagan that the SDI program seeks no U.S. unilateral military superiority to the Soviet Union and is aimed at reducing offensive nuclear arms drastically, the statement said.

Reagan has also affirmed that the project will help maintain and strengthen deterrents in the West and that consultations with the U.S. allies and talks with the Soviet Union should be the precondition for the system to be developed and deployed, it said.

The government's talks with the U.S. will focus on setting up a government-to-government framework to smooth the path for the private sector's participation in the various SDI research programs. The government will not propose new legislation for the technological transfer and the protection of classified information on military technology. This will be left to the present domestic laws nd the Japan-U.S. agreement in the defense sector, the statement said. Participation in the research program would help improve Japan's technological standards and lead to further Japan-U.S. cooperation under the bilateral security treaty, it said.

MITI To Set SDI Guidelines

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- The Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) will map out guidelines to enable Japanese firms to better participate in the research phase of the U.S. strategic defense initiative (SDI), MITI officials said Tuesday. The officials said that such guidelines are needed because no Japanese firm has ever concluded a consignment contract with the U.S. Department of Defense.

The Japanese Government, which made the formal decision earlier Tuesday to participate in the SDI research, plans to pressure the U.S. to allow Japanese private firms to fully utilize the results of the research, the officials said. But MITI and other government agency officials speculated that SDI talks between the two countries will be tough, particularly on protection of industrial secrets and the rights by participating private firms to use the newly acquired technologies. Nevertheless, the officials agreed that the multibillion dollar project has the potential of producting advanced technological innovations.

Kuranari Questioned in Diet

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari said Tuesday Japan's participation in the research phase of the U.S. strategic defense initiative (SDI) will not breach a 1969 Diet resolution banning military exploitation of Japan's space development efforts.

Responding to a question from a socialist Dietman in a House of Councillors Audit Committee session, Kuranari said the resolution called for "a peaceful use of space" when Japan develops and utilizes space. Kuranri said the SDI project, a space-based antimissile plan known as "star wars," will be developed by the United States, and the Diet resolution therefore does not apply to it.

Hiroaki Fujii, director general of the Foreign Ministry's North American Affairs Bureau, asked about U.S. research on x-ray lasers for use in connection with nuclear weapons, said the research is aimed at matching similar research being conducted by the Soviet Union. He said the SDI was aimed at producing a non-nuclear defensive system, and the x-ray laser research is only a part of the program.

High-Tech Firms Supportive

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Japan's major high tech firms welcomed the government's decision Tuesday to participate in the U.S. strategic defense initiative (SDI) but stopped short of immediately committing themselves to the multibillion dollar project.

Toshiba Corp., a leading electronics manufacturer, said in a statement that it has a strong interest in possible spin-offs from SDI and its potential for upgrading of technology. "We as a maker of general electrical products believe we hold the technological potential to participate in many of the fields subject to the SDI research," the statement said. "The most crucial issue for private corporations is how to utilize the results of the SDI research," Toshiba said. Toshiba was one of the 21 Japanese firms whose engineers went on a fact-finding mission to the United States last spring.

Hitachi Ltd., which also sent an engineer to America as part of the investigative mission, said it will closely follow government-level consultations between the two countries on the type of participation and the right to use results of research.

Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd., Japan's biggest heavy machinery concern and the flagship of the giant Mitsubishi group, also said it expects the SDI research to produce many spin-offs. A Mitsubishi heavy industry engineer was also on the last SDI mission, which included nine government officials.

During their stay in the U.S. from March 31 to April 8, members of the delegation visited the Pentagon, the Los Alamos national laboratory, the U.S. Army's strategic defense command, Lockheed Missiles and Space Corp. and other places, depending on their fields of concern -- directed energy weapons (DEW), kinetic energy weapons (KEW) and surveillance acquisition tracking kill-assessment (SATKA).

Government sources said the U.S. is seeking Japan's technological assistance in the fields of optoelectronics and millimeter wave and related technologies in the five-year, 26 billion dollar research phase of the project. Mitsubishi Heavy Industries said Japan's participation in the SDI research is extremely significant in that massive investment in a wide variety of high tech fields and an assortment of talents will be brought together.

Yataro Mitsubayashi, director general of the Science and Technology Agency, noted that the government put national interest ahead of other issues in reaching the decision to start talks with the United States on the SDI research.

JAPAN EXPRESSES REGRET OVER FUJIO REMARKS

Gotoda Statement

OW081441 Tokyo KYODO in English 1435 GMT 8 Sep 86

["Text of Gotoda's Statement" -- KYODO headline]

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 8 KYODO -- Following is an unofficial translation of a statement issued by Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda:

Japan roots its diplomacy in maintaining and promoting friendly relations with South Korea, China and other neighboring countries. The government has made efforts along this line with greatest care. There were, however, some important contents in a magazine interview with Education Minister Masayuki Fujio that appeared in the BUNGEI SHUJU. These contents damaged the sentiments of peoples of neighboring countries and triggered harsh reactions. Needless to say, in a free and democratic state there are a variety of opinions on historical incidents. Fujio's remarks were made as the personal views of one politician. But, as a matter of course, remarks by a cabinet minister who is responsible for running state affairs are significant even if they are personal.

Fujio's statements are strongly regrettable because they have caused useless doubts not only about Japan's reflections on the past war and determination for peace which our country has repeatedly expressed, but also about Japan's fundamental diplomatic policy which calls for maintaining and strengthening friendly and good relations with neighboring countries. From this point of view, (the government) took action to dismiss the education minister after examining his real intentions.

(The government) expresses deep regret to South Korea and China and other countries for having created such a situation. Through this action, (the government) makes it clear that there is no change in its basic diplomatic position and that it will continue further efforts to promote friendship with neighboring countries.

Kuranari Meets ROK Ambassador

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 8 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari informed South Korea of the dismissal of Education Minister Masayuki Fujio and a statement by Chief Secretary Masaharu Gotoda that expressed regret over Fujio's controversial remarks on Japan's military actions before and during World War II. Kuranari called South Korean Ambassador Yi Kyu-ho to the Foreign Ministry late Monday night to inform him of Fujio's dismissal and Gotoda's statement issued that night. He also instructed Japanese Ambassador to Seoul Kiyohisa Mikanagi to convey the same points to South Korean Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su. Kuranari said he will take the same procedure for China.

Choe told Mikanagi earlier in the day that his government decided to postpone the first South Korea-Japan foreign ministerial meeting scheduled for September 10 in protest against remarks by Fujio, who defended Japan's 1910 annexation of Korea and the Nanjing (Nanking) massacre. China expressed displeasure over the remarks.

Kuranari said he advised Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone that the earliest possible solution to the issue would be necessary. Kuranari said he hopes that the visit to Seoul by Nakasone on September 20-21 to attend the Asian Games will proceed as planned.

In handing [as received] the statement, Kuranari told Yi that it was regrettable that the remarks caused difficulty in carrying out Japan's diplomatic policy which stresses friendly and good relations with South Korea. Kuranari called for South Korea's understanding on the Japanese position, pledging there will be no change in the Japanese policy toward South Korea, the official said.

Another ministry official said Kimio Fujita, director-general of the ministry's Asia Affairs Bureau, delivered a similar explanation to acting Chinese Ambassador Xu Dunxin in Tokyo. Both the South Korean and Chinese diplomats replied that they will convey the Japanese message to their home governments.

In Seoul, Japanese Ambassador Kiyohisa Mikanagi visited Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su to tell him that Fujio was sacked and inform him of Gotoda's statement. Choe told Mikanagi that he will report the information to his superiors and that South Korea will make known its position later, Japanese officials said.

ROK Reinstates Talks

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone expressed hope Tuesday that Japan-South Korea relations would be mended with the dismissal of Education Minister Masayuki Fujio. But Nakasone said he was not sure whether the Fujio controversy would affect his planned trip to Seoul September 20-21 for the opening of the Asian Games. Fujio was dismissed Monday after he refused to step down following a controversial magazine interview in which he sought to justify Japan's 1910-1945 annexation of Korea and the Japanese military's war-time atrocities in China.

When asked by reporters if he thinks Manday's government statement apologizing for Fujio's remarks would help mend Japanese-South Korean relations, Nakasone replied, "I hope so."

Speaking to reporters at the prime minister's official residence, Nakasone also accepted part of the blame for the diplomatic row triggered by Fujio's controversial remarks over Japan's historic role in China and Korea. "This is something which I must severely reflect upon," Nakasone said when asked to comment on his responsibility in appointing Fujio as education minister last July.

Nakasone defended his decision Monday to dismiss Fujio, saying the action "was something I can't help." Nakasone also repeated this sentiment during a Cabinet meeting later in the morning, telling his Cabinet colleagues that he hopes the Fujio affair would not jeopardize Japan's relations with South Korea and China, government sources said.

In a related development, Justice Minister Kaname Endo said Tuesday the Fujio controversy would not affect government plans to revise the system of fingerprinting foreign residents in Japan. South Korea has urged Japan to relax the fingerprinting requirement, which is compulsory for all foreign residents in Japan.

Later in the day, Nakasone welcomed a South Korean decision to hold the first regular consultation between the Japanese and Korean foreign ministers, Tadashi Kuranari and Choe Kwang-su, on Wednesday as scheduled. In a brief exchange with reporters at his office, Nakasone said it was good news. The prime minister said he would make his best efforts to stem any after effects from the diplomatic row.

ROK Accepts Apology

[Text] Seoul, Sept 9 KYODO -- South Korea Tuesday welcomed the dismissal of education minister Masayuki Fujio and reversed its earlier decision to postpone a bilateral foreign ministers' conference scheduled to begin Wednesday in Tokyo. Japanese Ambassador to Seoul Kiyohisa Mikanaga also told reporters here following a meeting with South Korean Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su that the scheduled meeting will go ahead as planned.

Senior South Korean officials decided Tuesday to accept the apology of Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda over the Fujio affair and proceed with the Tokyo conference. The South Korean Government had reacted swiftly to reports concerning Fujio's remarks in a magazine interview that Japan's 1910 annexation of Korea was justified. The controversy arose just prior to the start of the first regular foreign ministerial meeting, and as Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is preparing to visit Seoul September 20-21 for the opening of the Asian Games.

Officials of the leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party, however, demanded cancellation of Nakasone's visit to Seoul. "The dismissal of Education Minister Fujio is not sufficient to fully solve the problem of distorted history," the party declared Tuesday, adding that the entire Nakasone cabinet should offer apologies to Japan's Asian neighbors over the incident.

In Tokyo, Japan also announced that Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari and his South Korean counterpart Choe will meet in Tokyo for the first such regular consultation on Wednesday as scheduled. High on the agenda will be the Fujio issue, the bilateral trade imbalance now with Japan's favor, the system of fingerprinting of Korean residents of Japan, the fisheries issue, South Korean companies' participation in the projected new Kansai international airport and medical treatment for Korean survivors of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, a Foreign Ministry official said.

The Kuranari-Choe meeting will also focus on the political situation on the Korean peninsula, the Soviet Union's Asian policy and assessment of the Non-aligned Movement summit recently held in Zimbabwe, the official said. He said Choe is expectd to meet with Nakasone on September 11.

S&T CHIEF, USSR'S MARCHUK VIEW N-PLANT SAFETY

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 9 KYODO -- The Science and Technology Agency Chief Yataro Mitsubayashi met visiting Soviet Vice Premier and the National Science and Technology Commission Chairman Guriy Marchuk Tuesday to discuss possible bilateral cooperation on nuclear power plant safety. In the meeting, Mitsubayashi, referring to the Chernobyl nuclear power plant accident in April, told Marchuk of Japan's intention to include nuclear safety cooperation on the agenda of the Japan-Soviet science and technology talks to be held starting next Tuesday, the first such talks in seven years, Japanese officials said.

Marchuk said that such cooperation would be possible given Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's suggestion on establishing a new high safety nuclear reactor based on multinational cooperation.

Marchuk invited Mitsubayashi to visit the Soviet Union. Mitsubayashi expressed thanks for the invitation and replied he would study when he is going to Moscow.

Marchuk later met Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari. Kuranari said he welcomes improved relations between Tokyo and the Soviet Union through scientific, technical and other cooperation. Marchuk, in Tokyo since Sunday as a guest of the Foreign Ministry, said development of cultural and scientific exchanges will lead to improved bilateral political relations, an official said. Kuranari said he hopes both countries will have substantial talks in the scheduled Japan-Soviet science and technology meeting September 16-19, the official said.

S. AFRICAN FOREIGN MINISTER LEAVES FOR TAIWAN

[Text] Osaka, Sept 7 KYODO -- South African Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha left Japan for Taiwan Sunday, ending a mainly private five-day visit during which he met with his Japanese counterpart Tadashi Kuranari in the first ministerial level meeting between the two countries.

Botha will stay in Taiwan three days, during which he will meet with President Chiang Ching-kuo and senior government officials, Botha's press secretary Awire Marais said. Next Botha will go to Hong Kong for one or two days before returning home. Marais said Saturday he did not know the program in Hong Kong.

When reached by telephone Saturday Botha would not comment about the outcome of his surprise visit, during which he met with Diet members and influential businessmen. He only remarked that "a visit like this is like the wind blowing through the leaves of a tree."

Botha's Visit Defended

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 5 KYODO -- Senior Foreign Ministry official Friday said that the United Nation's criticism against the Japanese Government for having accepted South African Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha was a misunderstanding resulting from lack of knowledge. The official said that Japan has taken the strictest sanctions against South Africa and Botha's visit to Japan does not signify the relaxation of Japan's sanctions on South Africa.

He added that the Japanese Foreign Ministry thought it better to explain directly to Botha about Japan's position on South Africa while he was making a private trip to Japan.

The official revealed that Japan will introduce its conclusion on additional sanctions against South Africa within this month by carefully studying actions to be taken by EC countries and the United States.

REPORTAGE ON PYONGYANG PEACE CONFERENCE

Conference Previewed

[NODONG SINMUN 6 September editorial: "The Korean Peninsula Should Be a Denuclearized Peace Zone"]

[Text] Amid great interest, expectations, support, and welcome from the peace-loving people of the world, the Pyongyang international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula will be held in Pyongyang, the capital of our Republic, from 6 through 8 September.

Participating in the conference -- which is being held under the joint sponsorship of the political parties and public organizations of the DPRK and the International Liaison Committee for the Independent and Peaceful Reunification of Korea -- will be delegations of party, state, government, parliamentary, and struggle organizations of many countries in the world, delegations of international organizations and democratic organizations, and many peace-loving figures and social and political activists to discuss the issues of forcing nuclear weapons out of South Korea and making the Korean peninsula a denuclearized peace zone.

The Korean people warmly welcome as our close friends the delegations, delegates, and noted figures who came to the Pyongyang international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula.

The Pyongyang international conference is of great significance as it is being held at a time when preventing a new world war, a thermonuclear war, and preserving world peace and security is an acute problem in international politics. The conference is clear proof that the world people's support for the solidarity with our people's just struggle for peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea are increasing with each passing day and that the movement to establish a denuclearized peace zone on the Korean peninsula is becoming a powerful international trend and an urgent demand of the times.

The Pyongyang international conference is a historic meeting to help the danger of a nuclear war and preserve peace on the Korean peninsula and develop a vigorous struggle to maintain world peace and prevent a new world war.

This meeting strongly encourages our people in their struggle for peace on the Korean peninsula and the peaceful reunification of the country, and will provide an important turning point in demonstrating the unity of the world's peace-loving forces and in intensifying and developing an international anti-imperialist, antiwar, antinuclear, and arms reduction movement.

The conference is another significant event decorating this year. which has been proclaimed the International Year of Peace. We wholeheartedly congratulate the Pyongyang international conference which opens today, and wish the conference a shining success.

Today, the world situation is extremely tense, and the danger of a new war is becoming greater with each passing day. In particular, peace on the Korean peninsula is facing a severe challenge and great danger.

The situation within and without is so greatly aggravated entirely because of the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war. The U.S. imperialists, pursuing world domination, are implementing a violent policy of strength, following a reactionary world strategy, accelerating the arms buildup, especially the nuclear arms buildup, spending an enormous anount of money on it, and frenziedly engaging in preparations for a new world war, a thermonuclear war.

The United States is scheming to push ahead with the so-called star wars program to make space the site of a nuclear war, even attempting to develop third generation nuclear weapons. Their design is to dominate the world's progressive forces with nuclear superiority so the United States may hold everything in the world at its command.

Because of the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers to prepare a nuclear war, world peace and security is facing grave danger, and mankind is under the threat of a dreadful nuclear holocaust. The threat of a nuclear war, which is looming heavily over the earth is intensively manifest in the situation on the Korean peninsula today. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The Korean peninsula is the place where the danger of a nuclear war is greatest today. Nuclear weapons of various types are more densely deployed in South Korea than anywhere else in the world.

The United States attaches importance to the Korean peninsula as its foremost front and has turned South Korea into a place for starting a nuclear war. South Korea is the greatest nuclear base in Asia where over half of the nuclear weapons the U.S. imperialists have deployed in Asia are intensively deployed, and where some 1,000 nuclear weapons, including neutron bombs called the devil's weapon of the 20th century, are deployed.

South Korea is the place where nuclear weapons are deployed more densely than anywhere else in the world. The U.S. warmongers are unhesitatingly raving about attacking our republic with nuclear weapons, including attacking even countries located beyond us, from a base in South Korea. Thus, the Korean peninsula has become a place where the danger of nuclear war is the greatest on earth.

In view of South Korea's position in the U.S. imperialists' world strategy, if a war breaks out on the Korean peninsula it will immediately spread into a global thermonuclear war. A Korean nuclear holocaust would mean a world nuclear holocaust. Therefore, struggling to prevent nuclear war on the Korean peninsula is the most urgent demand not only for peace in Korea but also for world peace, and it is an important common task of the Korean people and the world's peace-loving people.

The government of our republic has made every effort for peace in Korea and the world and to prevent nuclear war on the Korean peninsula. In recent years, we have made proposals for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, proposals for tripartite talks, and proposals for North-South parliamentary talks to alleviate tension and eliminate the danger of armed confrontation on the Korean peninsula and to promote the peaceful reunification of the country and a peaceful resolution of the Korean question. Some time ago we proposed that talks between military persons in authority be held to eliminate the state of confrontation and to take steps to alleviate military tension. However, none of these fair, just, and peace-loving proposals and initiatives have been realized because the United States opposed them and turned away from them. This clearly shows that the U.S. imperialists are aggressors who do not want peace in and the reunification of Korea but who only indulge in division and war.

We should decisively eliminate the danger of war on the Korean peninsula.

For this purpose, we should eliminate the source of misfortune that gives birth to it. This source of misfortune is the U.S. forces' occupation of South Korea, making South Korea a nuclear military base, and the nuclear arms buildup and nuclear war preparations against our republic and other countries. Therefore, forcing the U.S. aggressor troops, military bases, and lethal weapons the United States has brought in, including nuclear weapons and chemical weapons, out of South Korea, bringing an end to its occupation, and bringing peace to the Korean peninsula are an essential prerequisite for eliminating such a misfortune and turning the situation for the better.

The proposal of the government of our republic to establish a denuclearized peace zone on the Korean peninsula is entirely in conformity with this prerequisite, and the proposal is a precise method for successfully realizing it.

The United States has no reason to oppose our initiative. What is required is that the United States withdraw all nuclear weapons from South Korea, not bring them in, and call off the operational plans for use of nuclear weapons on the Korean peninsula, just as we do not test, produce, store, nor bring in nuclear weapons, do not allow any foreign country to install a nuclear base, and do not allow passage of nuclear weapons. This will result in a situation in which the United States will have no reason to continuously maintain U.S. troops there even if it continuously holds South Korea as a front in the U.S. strategy.

If the U.S. forces' occupation of South Korea is brought to an end and South Korea is no longer a site for starting nuclear war, the dark clouds of war hanging over Korea will disappear, and the Korean peninsula will become a denuclearized peace zone, as desired by the people. This means that one of the most dangerous potential nuclear flashpoints in the world will be eliminated, and this will create a very advantageous situation for world peace and security.

The Pyongyang international conference is a just meeting held with the noble objective of solving this important task and drawing the world's great interest and expectation.

The Korean peninsula must become a nuclear-free zone of peace as demanded by the Korean people and the peace-loving people of the world. For this purpose, all peace-loving people of the world should raise the voice of justice to expose the U.S. scheme to press the button to start nuclear war on the Korean peninsula, and to force the United States to stop stockpiling nuclear arms in South Korea and withdraw the U.S. troops, nuclear weapons, chemical weapons, and other lethal means from South Korea, and stop aggression and interference in Korea. They should also exert pressure so that the United States and the South Korean persons in authority will come to the negotiating table in connection with our peace proposals, such as for establishing a nuclear-free zone of peace and tripartite talks.

Peace in Korea is inseparably connected with world peace. The source of war should be eliminated not only in Korea, but in all parts of the world. The nuclear-free zone of peace should be established not only on the Korean peninsula, but in all other parts of the world. For this purpose, an anti-imperialist, anti-U.S., antiwar, and antinuclear struggle for peace should be waged in all parts of the world. A nuclear-free zone of peace should be established in all parts of the world and be continuously expanded.

The nature of imperialism pursuing aggression, plunder, interference, and war has not changed. We cannot expect peace from the imperialists. Peace should be won by the people through struggle. Unity ensures victory in this struggle.

With firm unity, the progressive and peace-loving people of the world should form a common front and wage a vigorous anti-imperialist, anti-U.S., antiwar, and antinuclear struggle in all parts of the world to oppose the maneuvers of the imperialists, including the U.S. imperialists, preparing for a new war, a thermonuclear war, so as to tie the imperialists hands in knots, thereby preventing nuclear war and maintaining and solidifying world peace.

We are certain that the Pyongyang international conference will be a meeting of unity and solidarity which will connect more firmly into one the struggle for peace on the Korean peninsula and around the world, the struggle to establish a nuclear-free zone of peace on the Korean peninsula, and the struggle to establish nuclear-free zones of peace in many parts of the world.

Holding aloft the banner of independence, friendship, and peace, our people will continue to actively support the cause of peace of the people of the world, and make consistent efforts for peace in and the reunification of Korea and for world peace.

We expect that socialist countries, nonaligned countries, Third World countries, and all peace-loving countries and people will continue to send sincere support to our people's struggle for peace and peaceful reunification. The cause of the Korean people and the people of the world for peace and progress is ever victorious and indestructible.

Yi Chong-ok Opens Conference

[Text] Pyongyang September 6 (KCNA) -- Yi Chong-ok, member of the Political bureau of the C.C., the Workers' Party of Korea and vice-president, made a congratulatory speech at the Pyongyang International Conference for Denuclearisation and Peace on the Korean Peninsula which opened in Pyongyang today. He said the conference would powerfully inspire the Korean people in the struggle for peace in the country and its peaceful reunification, demonstrate the unity of the world peaceloving forces and signify an important landmark in strengthening and developing the international anti-imperialist, anti-war and anti-nuclear movement for peace.

We hope that the Pyongyang international conference will be a significant meeting making a momentous contribution to the struggle to prevent the outbreak of a nuclear war on the Korean peninsula, maintain and consolidate peace there and defend world peace and security of mankind, he said. Pointing out that the Korean peninsula is today one of the most dangerous hotbeds of nuclear war in the world, the vice president said:

Our people do not want the Korean question to spell a nuclear holocaust to the world people by triggering off another world war, a thermonuclear war. We will not test, produce, store or introduce nuclear weapons nor will allow the passage of foreign nuclear weapons through our territory, air and sea. And we hold that the U.S. Government should also stop the shipment of new nuclear weapons into South Korea, reduce stage by stage all the nuclear weapons already introduced and, furthermore, completely withdraw them and cancel all its operational plans involving the use of nuclear weapons on the Korean peninsula, in conformity with the desire of the Korean people and the world peaceloving people.

If a nuclear-free, peace zone were established on the Korean peninsula, this region would be cleared of the danger of nuclear war and this would greatly help towards the conversion of Asia into a continent of good neighbourhood and cooperation where a durable peace is guaranteed.

On this occasion we express our thanks to the parties, governments and peoples of different countries and all the foreign friends who always extend invariable support to the cause of justice of our party, government and people for guaranteeing peace on the Korean peninsula and achieving a peaceful reunification of the country.

The world progressive forces and peaceloving people should wage a dynamic struggle with united efforts to thwart and frustrate the arms buildup and nuclear war moves of the imperialists and get the nuclear weapons reduced and completely eliminated. What is important in the anti-war, anti-nuclear struggle for defending world peace and security is to wage a widespread struggle for the establishment of nuclear-free, peace zones. All the progressive forces and peoples of the world should powerfully support the struggle of the oppressed peoples for national liberation and self-determination and give active backing to the struggle of all peoples for independence, sovereignty and the building of a new society against all manner of aggressive and interventionist maneuvers of the imperialists, colonialists and racists.

Our party and people will as in the past, so in the future, too, fight energetically to guarantee peace on the Korean peninsula and defend peace and security in Asia and the world against the imperialists' moves of aggression and war, in close unity with all the progressive forces and peaceloving people of the world, under the banner of independence, friendship and peace.

Kim Il-song Speaks

[Speech by Kim Il-song at a 6 September evening banquet he hosted at the Kumsusan Assembly Hall for delegates participating in the Pyongyang International Conference for Denuclearization and Peace on the Korean peninsula -- recorded]

[Text] Respected delegates, comrades, and friends: At a time when mankind has an acute task of preventing a new world war -- a thermonuclear war -- and defending peace, an international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula has opened in Pyongyang, the capital of our country, reflecting the common aspiration and yearning of our people and the world's peace-loving people. I am very glad that an international conference for denuclearization and peace is being held in our country in the Year of International Peace and warmly welcome the delegates who are participating in the Pyongyang international conference with a lofty sense of mission for the cause of world peace and with firm solidarity with our people. [applause]

Easing tension and removing the danger of nuclear war on the Korean peninsula is one of the urgent problems awaiting resolution in the international political arena. The present situation on the Korean peninsula is very tense, and the danger of nuclear war is growing with each passing day. Armed soldiers in the North and South of our country are aiming their guns at each other from both sides of the Military Demarcation Line [MDL]. In the south of the MDL there are over 40,000 U.S. troops equipped with nuclear weapons and nearly 1 million South Korean soldiers. They are prepared to attack the North at any time.

Pyongyang, where you are participating in the conference, is a city at which U.S. nuclear warheads are constantly aimed. The fact that precisely here the delegates, peace champions, and preeminent figures from many countries are meeting in a conference for denuclearization and peace increases a keen awareness of the danger of nuclear war and the need to fight for peace, all of which underlines the great importance of this meeting. This Pyongyang international conference, which is attracting attention from the world public, will deal a heavy blow to the imperialist nuclear maniacs and bellicose elements. It will give our people and the world's peace-loving people great strength and inspiration in their struggle for peace. [applause]

The tense situation and the danger of nuclear war on the Korean peninsula are a direct product of the U.S. Korean policy and its Asian strategy. The aim of the United States with regard to Korea is to divide our country permanently by making two Koreas, to maintain its domination over South Korea as its colony, and, with South Korea as its stepping-stone, to wage aggression against the northern half of the republic, the socialist countries in Asia, and, further, all of the Asian Continent.

In order to achieve their aggressive aim, the U.S. imperialists are building up their aggressive armed forces, including nuclear weapons, on a large scale in South Korea, and are making frantic efforts to provoke another war. As you know well, the United States has brought into the small land of South Korea a great amount of nuclear weapons, an amount which is 4 times as large as it has in the NATO area in terms of density of deployment. Not satisfied with this, the United States is going to ship more new types of nuclear and chemical weapons into South Korea in the future and to build scores of special nuclear armories there. The U.S. imperialists are growing more enthusiastic about their maneuvers to provoke a nuclear war from South Korea. Because of this, not a day passes without the rumble of gunfire while the air is thick with the fumes of gunpowder in South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists are scheming more blatantly to form a tripartite military alliance between the United States, Japan, and South Korea for the purpose of drawing in the Japanese militarists in implementing their aggressive Asian strategy. This shows that the U.S. maneuvers for aggression and war in the Far East are progressing at a more dangerous stage as the days go by.

In view of the aggressive policy of the United States, our party and the government of our republic are working hard to ease tension and preserve peace on the Korean peninsula and to settle the Korean question by peaceful means. Holding fast to the basic policy of achieving national reunification in an independent and peaceful way true to our heavy responsibility to the Korean nation and with a noble sense of duty to the cause of world peace, we have put forward many reasonable and constructive proposals for peace and made all our sincere efforts to put them into effect.

Our fair and reasonable peace proposals, including the proposal for tripartite talks to replace the Korean Armistice Agreement with a peace agreement and to adopt a nonaggression declaration between the North and the South, have already been widely known to the people of the world. This year alone we made an important proposal for talks by those in military authority to remove tension and military confrontation on the Korean peninsula, and, through the statement of the Government of the Republic, we also made a positive peace proposal to convert the Korean peninsula to a denuclearized peace zone.

However, none of our peace proposals have been put into effect even today, and the situation on the Korean peninsula is becoming more aggravated with each passing day. This is entirely because the United States and the South Korean authorities do not want to alleviate tension and peace but to continue to pursue a policy of aggression and war.

As long as the Korean policy and Asian strategy of the United States remain unchanged and as long as U.S. troops remain in South Korea, resorting to maneuvers for aggression, it is impossible to guarantee durable peace on the Korean peninsula and settle the question of reunification of our country. If we are to ease tension and guarantee peace on the Korean peninsula and settle the question of reunifying Korea in a peaceful way, all nuclear weapons and U.S. troops should be withdrawn from South Korea.

This issue of maintaining peace and security on the Korean peninsula is directly related to the question of preserving peace and security in the world, and apart from peace and security on the Korean peninsula, world peace and security is unthinkable.

Because South Korea has become a forward nuclear base, the largest of its kind in the Far East, and because the acute situation continues on the Korean peninsula, war can break out at any time in our contry. If war breaks out in Korea, it can immediately spread into a global nuclear war. Therefore, the present situation on the Korean peninsula cannot but be a grave threat not only to our people but to our neighboring countries and the people in the rest of the world. Today, the peace-loving governments and people of many countries of the world are watching and showing deep concern for the tense situation on the Korean peninsula and rendering active support and encouragement to our people in their struggle to prevent war, safeguard peace, and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

If the U.S. troops are withdrawn from South Korea and a denuclearized peace zone is established on the Korean peninsula through the joint struggle of our people and the progressive people of the world, one of the most dangerous sources of nuclear war in the world will be removed and great progress will be made in preserving peace in Asia and the world. [applause]

Availing myself of this opportunity I extend, on behalf of the WPK Central Committee and the government of our republic, my deep gratitude to the fraternal socialist countries, nonaligned countries, and all the other progressive countries and peace-loving people of the world for their positive support and encouragement to our people's struggle for peace on the Korean peninsula and peaceful reunification of the country, and for their active support for and solidarity with our proposal to turn the Korean peninsula into a denuclearized peace zone. [applause]

Delegates, dominating the world by force is an unchanging world strategy of U.S. imperialism. Its strategy for world domination is now all the more dangerous because of the adventurous attempt of the U.S. rulers to carry it out through nuclear superiority. With an evil design to gain nuclear superiority, the U.S. imperialists are now increasing nuclear armament, accelerating the large-scale development, renewal, production, and deployment of nuclear weapons, and stepping up their moves of aggression against progressive countries in all parts of the world. In particular, the U.S. imperialists are trying to extend the nuclear arms race to outer space by putting forward an adventurous "star wars" program. They are producing binary chemical weapons, new mass destruction weapons, in an attempt to deploy them in many parts of the world. Because of their war policy and plots to increase nuclear weapons, a black cloud of nuclear war is now hanging heavily over the globe, and mankind is being threatened with the danger of nuclear war. Unless nuclear war is prevented, mankind will suffer irretrievable calamities and a holocaust. The nuclear war that threatens the existence and civilization of mankind must be prevented in every possible way, and peace must be preserved.

In order to prevent a new world war -- a thermonuclear war -- and to protect peace, we should vigorously wage a struggle on a global scale to check the imperialists' maneuvers for the nuclear arms race and for a nuclear war. The imperialists behave basely before the strong and become atrocious before the weak. If the people of the world, who love peace and justice, unite firmly, they can become invincibly strong. If the people struggle in unison, they can check the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for nuclear war and protect peace.

By forming a [word indistinct] united front and by vigorously carrying out the antiwar and peace-protecting movement, all the people of the world should thwart the imperialists' reckless maneuvers to increase nuclear weapons and militarize space, should completely abolish all nuclear weapons, and should check the imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and to provoke a war, maneuvers which have become much more brazen with the passage of time. [applause]

As long as nuclear weapons exist on earth, the danger of a nuclear war will not be eliminated, and mankind will be unable to extricate itself from the threat of nuclear weapons. Therefore, the testing, production, and deployment of nuclear weapons should be banned; various types of existing nuclear weapons should be reduced; and all nuclear weapons should be abolished. Only by so doing can mankind eventually extricate itself from the danger of nuclear disasters and can world peace be maintained on a firm foundation.

Today voices opposing nuclear weapons and advocating peace have been raised vigorously throughout the world, including Asia and Europe, and the antiwar and peace-protecting movement has been carried out fiercely. The CPSU and Soviet Government have advanced a positive peace proposal for banning nuclear tests, for reducing nuclear weapons, for preventing the militarization of space, and for completely abolishing nuclear and chemical weapons until the end of the present century.

They recently took the initiative to extend a proposal for unilaterally freezing nuclear tests until January 1987. This directly shows the responsible stand of the CPSU and Soviet Government toward eliminating the danger of a nuclear war and protecting world peace and security and their peace-loving foreign policy.

We positively support the USSR's peaceful proposal for protecting world peace and security and extend firm solidarity with the struggle of the Soviet people to implement this proposal. [applaluse]

Establishing and expanding a nuclear-free zone of peace is an important way to reduce nuclear weapons, prevent a nuclear war, and protect peace. We positively support and extend firm solidarity with the struggle of European socialist countries and the people in this region to establish nuclear-free zones of peace in various areas on the Balkan peninsula and Europe. [applause]

We positively support the struggle of the peace-loving people of the world to establish nuclear-free zones of peace throughout the world, including in Africa, the Middle East, the Indian Ocean, and the South Pacific Ocean. [applause]

Our people love peace. It is the consistent policy of the WPK and the government of the republic to struggle to protect peace. Upholding the banner of independence, friendship, and peace, our party and the government of the republic will resolutely struggle to prevent a nuclear war and protect peace by firmly uniting with the people of socialist and nonaligned countries and with all the peace-loving people of the world. [applause]

Hoping that the Pyongyang international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula will be held smoothly and will attain good results, and wishing you representatives new victory in your struggle to oppose the imperialists and preserve peace, I propose a toast: to the militant friendship and unity among the peace-loving people of the world, including the Korean people and the people of socialist and nonaligned countries; to peace on the Korean peninsula free from nuclear weapons; to world peace and the prosperity of mankind; to the health of the representatives of various countries and international agencies; to the health of all foreign guests; and to the health of comrades and friends present here. [applause]

ROK-JAPAN MINISTERIAL TALKS TO BE HELD AS PLANNED

[Text] Seoul, Sept 9 (YONHAP) -- South Korea Tuesday accepted the Japanese Government's expression of regret over the controversial remarks made recently by Education Minister Masayuki Fujio about Japan's annexation of Korea in 1910, indicating that the diplomatic row caused by the remarks has been settled. Fujio was dismissed from office on Monday.

The Korean Government had reversed its earlier decision to postpone the Korean-Japanese foreign ministers' meeting, scheduled for Wednesday, in protest against Fujio's remarks, but has decided to hold the meeting as originally scheduled. Korean Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su will leave for Tokyo early Wednesday for talks with his Japanese counterpart, Tadashi Kuranari.

The government views the steps taken by Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in the wake of the Fujio incident as a sign of positive sincerity and effort to swiftly end the dispute and to develop Korean-Japanese relations. The "steps" referrred to were the removal of Fujio from office and the offer of regret.

On Tuesday morning, Choe called in Japanese Ambassador Kiyohisa Mkianagi and informed him of the Korean Government's position. He told reporters that the Government has decided to participate in the foreign ministers' conference as originally scheduled, in the belief that escalation of the incident would not be in the interest of Korean-Japanese relations.

Nakasone is scheduled to fly into Seoul on Sept 20 to attend the opening ceremony of the 10th Asian Games and to meet with Korean President Chon Tu-Hwan.

JAPAN DENIES VIOLENCE IN AUG FISHING INCIDENT

SK060125 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 6 Sep 86 p 3

[Text] The Japanese Embassy in Seoul yesterday claimed that the earlier reports by some Korean papers on the collision between Korean and Japanese fishing boats on the highseas off Pusan last month were incorrect.

Japanese authorities conducted a thorough investigation on the incident and determined that the Japanese boat was not responsible for the damage on the Korean boat, it said.

The Japanese fishing boat was reported to have deliberately rammed into a Korean boat when it was trying to inspect its fishing gear thought to be damaged by the Japanese boat. It was also a groundless allegation that a Korean fisherman was thrown into the sea after being tied on to board by the Japanese, it said.

The embassy said it was the Korean boat and not Japanese which caused the accident and that one of the Korean fisherman jumped into a Japanese boat when the two boats collided.

The Korean boat must have mistakenly thought that their fishing gear was damaged by the Japanese vessel which was trawling near the fishing gear installed by the Korean boat, it said.

SIHANOUK INTERVIEWED; APPEALS TO HENG SAMRIN

BK071151 (Clandestine) Voice of the Khmer in Cambodian 1100 GMT 6 Sep 86

[4 September station correspondent interview with CGDK President and FUNCINPEC Chairman Prince Norodom Sihanouk -- recorded]

[Text] [Sihanouk] I am glad and pleased to have the good opportunity today to meet all of you, outstanding representatives of our national radio, the Voice of the Khmer, within the framework of our Cambodian national liberation struggle. I therefore would like to thank you for paying me a visit. Please feel free to ask me any question. I will do my best to answer all your questions with delight.

[VOK correspondent] I would like to express my humblest gratitude to Your Highness for granting an audience to all of us today. We have the following questions to ask:

Question 1: What do you have to say to the common Cambodian people in Cambodia as well as the Vietnamese now occupying Cambodia?

[Sihanouk] Here is what I have to say to our compatriots, our blood brothers in the areas that we have not yet liberated, that is, those who are living under the yoke of colonialism of the Vietnamese, to all people except the small group of those who have decided to serve foreign interests, the interests of the Vietnamese and the Soviets: All our people in the country, although they have not been able to join us in the liberated zone, always uphold their loyalty to the nation, our fatherland, and our common ideal — the love for independence, neutrality, territorial integrity, mores, customs, and religion handed down to us by our forefathers and protected and preserved by all of us since time immemorial, including first of all Buddhism.

However, despite their loyalty to and love for the nation and independence, the majority of our people are hard-pressed by low living conditions, all kinds of difficulties, and all kinds of obstacles making it impossible for them to really contribute to national liberation. The army of our CGDK, especially our two [non-communist] nationalist armies, are producing efforts to make cordial contacts with our people in the rural areas, the provinces, districts, communes, and villages throughout Cambodia as well with our blood brothers, our true compatriots in Phnom Penh and in some cities that our agents can reach. We know very well the good hearts of our compatriots in the interior. We also know that it is very difficult for them to help us in the struggle against the Vietnamese. Many of our people cannot provide us with any significant aid and support, but their generosity is a very well-known fact. They are always ready to be of help when our nationalist combatants come to the villages. The local inhabitants normally deprive themselves of whatever they think would be of use to our combatants. Our combatants, for their part, also return the generosity by distributing some goods to the people. For example, the ANS -- the Sihanoukist Nationalist Army -- was recently instructed by me to bring along and distribute medicines and sarongs to the people who, in return, give us rice, fruits, and whatever they can give to us. Moreover, they also protect us. They would caution us, if they knew, about the whereabouts of the enemy forces. They would also scout for us, guide us, or inform us about enemy targets that we sought to attack and destroy. In short, they help us as much as they can. If they cannot help us because the enemy forces are so close to them, because they cannot make any movement, they still give us their sympathy because of their sense of patriotism. Some who kept helping us despite all odds have been severely punished by the Vietnamese and the Heng Samrin-Hun Sen authorities. Many of them have been jailed and some others have disappeared.

In the Heng Samrin-Hun Sen administration, in Phnom Penh especially, and in the army of these gentlemen Hun Sen and Heng Samrin, there are more and more patriots and more and more Vietnamese haters because they see the all-sided ugly festures of the Vietanemse. Therefore, we have greater advantage as these persons have intensified activities in the struggle. There are many who have deserted the administration and the army. Those who have deserted the Heng Samrin army have brought along for us arms and ammunition as they have joined our nationalist armies in order to hit back at the Vietnamese. Many of them have provided us with information, others have given us support when our army conduct operations in the interior. Others have led us to attack the enemy positions or have closely cooperated with our resistance movement.

Therefore, we see that all Cambodians are patriotic, except for a small group who are not loyal to the nation, the fatherland, and the national ideal. I take this occasion thus to pay my respect to all compatriots in the country who have good and pure feelings for the nation. I deem that should we call on you to rise up against the Vietnamese, it would not be of any good to you, for this may be dangerous to our compatriots, for incitement for uprising would be ridiculous as the people would be left with nothing in their hands against the Vietanmese enemy. It would be suicidal. My opinion is that it is not time yet for a general uprising. What is needed is to call upon the people's conscience. Let us awake those who have not been awakened to their duty and task as patriots, as the lovers of the Cambodian fatherland. Therefore, we should inform the people to be conscious of their Khmerness. As Khmer, we must not allow our country to become a Vietnamese province. In the past, our country lost Kampuchea Kraom. Kampuchea Kraom is now south Vietnam. Therefore, we must do our best according to each person's capability and means by trying to avoid as much damage and danger as possible. If possible, do it. If not possible, do not do it. See to it tht we are strong as Khmer, that we are capable in national liberation. Look for ways to completely liberate the nation. Failing that, let us work it out so that an international conference is held so that we can negotiate with the other side, that is with Vietnam, in order to settle the problem peacefully and fairly to bring back independence to our country according to the correct, just resolutions of the United Nations and according to the 8-point proposals of the CGDK.

I would like to stress again that we should declare this stand instead of inciting the people to insurrect, which is a more dangerous way. We know that once a Khmer, always a Khmer. As a patriotic Khmer, you must support us as much as possible. Avoid having untoward consequences. However, I beg you to continue seeking ways and means and a good opportunity to help us, but never to the detriment of the safety of yourselves or that of your families. If you can do it, please feel free to help our struggle efforts. According to the experience of the ANS, this kind of attitude is very much profitable, for it allows our people to have good conscience and encourages them to carry out secret activities in contribution to the struggle, thus enabling us to score even bigger successes on the battlefield. This is my personal opinion based on past and present observation and experience.

[Correspondent] In question 2, I would like to ask your highness what measure will you adopt after Vietnam withdraws troops from Cambodia in order to ensure that no particular political party would use forces to seize power from the other resistance factions?

[Sihanouk] The Republic of Singapore and I, Norodom Sihanouk, speaking on my own behalf and not in the name of the president of Democratic Kampuchea -- in my capacity as DK president, I resolutely support the CGDK's 8-point proposal made in March 1986; I remain unchanged in my stated position, in my support for the proposal -- believe that the United Nations must dispatch an international force after, or even before, Vietnam withdraws all its troops from Cambodia to provide us protection. I think that after Vietnam withdraws, it will be a little too late for the United Nations to send an international peace-keeping force. Therefore, it's my opinion that when Vietnam agrees in principle to withdraw its troops from Cambodia according to our 8-point proposal, an international force must be dispatched to Cambodia to defend peace and freedom for the Cambodian people. This international peace-keeping force must be supervised by the United Nations in the spirit of the UN resolutions adopted last year by 114 countries who helped us to recover our independence and to force Vietnam to pull out from our country. According to our tripartite agreement, we accept that a UN supervision is needed in the case of general election, but nothing was said about an international force. There is none, not any mention of an international peace-making force. [preceeding sentence in English]

International opinion knows only that there would be international supervision to ensure that our people regain their right to self-determination, their right to choose their own deputies who would elect a government, appoint a head of state, and name a president of the republic. Nothing has been said of a force. Singapore and I are of the opinion, when I met with Prime Minister Lee Kwan Yew and Foreign Minister Dhanabalan, that we need a force, an international force. Which countries can I contact to send troops to Cambodia? France for one. Sweden for another. Sweden always is involved in such missions, sending troops to ensure peace in other countries. France now is no more a colonialist country. She does not want to get mixed up with our problem. There are other countries, such as Austria which is the chairman of the campaign to seek peace for our nation through the UN-sponsored International Conference for Independence and Neutrality of Cambodia. We can thus contact Austria to send some of its troops to Cambodia. Many other countries can be persuaded to do the same. There are many Arab and African countries that I can contact for this purpose, such as Senegal and Morocco. If Vietnam wants to have countries that may not be supportive of our side outright but that we trust, I can get some troops from Algeria for example. I know quite a few Arab countries to which we can appeal for the contribution of a battalion or a company of troops. We will accept 100 or 800 or 1,000 to 2,000 troops from all countries. But these troops must be [following phrase in English] under the sovereignty of the secretary general of the United Nations to control this matter. But I think I can ask these countries to send their troops under the authority or the secretary general of the United Nations to keep peace in Cambodia for at least 5 years. The larger this force, the better. This is my opinion.

[Correspondent] May I have permission to ask another question?

[Sihanouk] Please do.

[Correspondent] [question indistinct]

[Sihanouk] Yes, I have talked a lot about my sentiments toward my beloved compatriots, my beloved blood children in the country. Even at the beginning of this interview, I made an appeal to all my beloved children at home. I call on my children of all creeds, religions, and political tendencies: Please do not forget that as the father of independence, as the father of the nation, I love all of you, I miss all of you, indiscriminately. I pray to lord Buddha, to the three jewels of Buddhism for your health, long life, happiness, and all the blessings. May you score all the successes in your activities in service of the nation on the road toward jointly restoring peace, independence, neutrality, and nonalignment in the spirit of peace and reconstruction within territorial integrity. The CGDK, I -- Norodom Sihanouk -- and all Cambodian patriots do not recognize the Vietnamese occupation of our country. Now Vietnam has sent more than 700,000 Vietnamese settlers to Cambodia, driving Cambodians out of their hometowns, thus turning some of the villages into Vietnamese villages. In Phnom Penh now, the majority of the residents are Vietnamese, not Cambodian. Some of the areas, such as Chantrea south of Svay Rieng, are occupied by Vietnamese. No Cambodians can be found there.

According to reports I have received, the border between Cambodia and Vietnam seems to be somewhat modified. I fought successfully all along to protect the Cambodian-Vietnamese border up to the March 1970 coup d'etat of Mr Lon Nol. I preserved all our territorial integrity and islands. I have learned now that some of our islands are occupied by Vietnam. The offshore islands off Kep and Ream are now occupied by Vietnam and there are changes in the Cambodian-Vietnam border. I take this opportunity to inform our compatriots inside the country that I do not recognize the treaty between Vietnam and Phnom Penh and that the CGDK has already solemnly announced that it rejected it. Our government is Cambodia's legitimate government recognized by the United Nations as Cambodia's sole lawful government. Therefore, the border of independent Cambodia represented by the CGDK is the former border of the time when I was the head of state, not the border agreed upon by Heng Samrin and Hun Sen and the Hanoi authorities.

I call on all my compatriots to support our stand: Do not let Vietnam change our border and violate our territory. Moreover, I talk to the conscience of the brothers in the Heng Samrin administration and the Heng Samrin army: Please do not forget tht you are Cambodians and as Cambodian patriots, if possible, please help our resistance. Help us if you can wthout risking your own safety. Please do not help or serve the Vietnamese and the Cambodian traitors. Preserve our national honor, our prestige as patriots. Live up to your reputation as patriots. Any brothers who want to defect to our side, be assured that you will be welcomed to the best of our ability. Be assured we will share food and water with you as much as we can afford it as we do not have that many resources except the fact that many friends are assisting us, such as the Kingdom of Thailand and several other great friends in the world who give us quite a lot of aid. Still, we do not live in great affluence. If you need freedom, we have plently of freedom. Please feel free to come. We welcome you. However, if there are obstacles preventing you from crossing over to our side, do not forget the teaching of President Ceausescu of Romania whom I and Mr Khieu Samphan met in Bucharest in 1982. He said: Samdech, do your best to lead Mr Heng Samrin and Mr Hun Sen and lead the Democratic Kampuchea faction, the KPNLF, and the front of the Samdech president toward bringing about a union in the spirit of Khmer unity. If the four of your factions are united, you do not need any foreign powers to interfere in your problem. If the four of you understand each other and unite with each other, there is no place for the Vietnamese to stay.

I therefore appeal to Heng Samrin and Hun Sen to make deals with us. I do not urge them to betray the Vietnamese. There is nothing about betraying Vietnam, there is only non-betrayal of the nation. I appeal to them to work out an understanding among us. One day, we will hold a secret meeting of the four parties and announce to the world and to the SRV that we have agreed to set up a quadripartite government and all foreigners are invited to behave accordingly. This point is very important. Therefore, it is my opinion that the DK side and the Heng Samrin-Hun Sen [words indistinct]. This is my greatest suggestion. If Mr Heng Samrin and Mr Hun Sen are true Cambodia patriots and not Vietnamese, why don't you work out a deal with us without letting your boss know about it? Why don't you come to an agreement with us and give the Vietnamese the biggest surprise of their lives? However, I don't think you dare do it, Mr Heng Samrin, Mr Hun Sen. If this is correct, we beg you to help us by not serving the interest of the Vietnamese and of the Cambodian traitors. Help and serve only the resistance forces, that is the national liberation movement under the names of our two fronts: my front and that of His Excellency Son Sann, namely FUNCINPEC and its ANS and KPNLF and its KPNLA [Khmer People's National Liberation Army]. Please help our two fronts and two armies.

PRINCE RANNARIT ADDRESS MARKS ANS ANNIVERSARY

[Address to combatants of Sihanoukist National Army by its commander in chief, Prince Norodom Rannarit, on the occasion of its 5th founding anniversary -- recorded; date not given]

[Text] On the 5th founding anniversary of the Sihanoukist National Army [ANS] with Samdech Euv [literally the prince father; popular appellation for Sihanouk], Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as the supreme commander, I, Norodom Rannarit, in my capacity as the commander in chief of the ANS and as the personal representative of our Samdech Euv to Cambodia and Asia, have the great honor to address the following message to all our valiant and courageous combatants and all beloved officers and noncommissioned officers of the ANS:

Five years after the birth of the ANS as a nationalist army among the three national armies now waging an extremely courageous struggle against the Vietnamese communist aggressors and land grabbers, the ANS has year after year become a national army with a strong position. Moreover, on all battlefields our ANS has won successes every year. This fact has been acknowledged and praised by international opinion an international observers who applauded the glorious struggle and results made possible by all of you, the noble members of the ANS. All these successes have been recognized as irrefutable by world opinion far and wide, except the Vietnamese annexations and their handful of lackeys.

The successes of the ANS, which resound all over the international arena, and its sweet name are the result of persistent struggle and all sorts of sacrifice made by all of you, combatants, officers, and noncommissioned officers. Without your support and without your struggle and sacrifices, we in the leadership and our ANS would not have been able to boast of such successes in the struggle to liberate our nation. For this reason, as the royal representative of our Samdech Euv and as the commander in chief of the ANS, I would like to attribute all these brilliant results and praise to our very valiant and courageous ANS combatants.

Lately, during the visit of our Samdech Euv to ASEAN countries, namely Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, and the Kingdom of Thailand, the eminent leaders of these ASEAN countries informed our prince that they were extremely satisfied and happy to have noted the great development and the good results of the attacks launched by the ANS against the Vietnamese aggressors. They also most warmly expressed greet admiration to our Samdec Euv. Moreover, all the ASEAN leaders promised him that in the future as at present they will resolutely, unhesitatingly, and unretreatingly continue to support the struggle for national liberation of the ANS and of the national armies in the tripartite CGDK with our Samdech Euv as president.

In Indonesia, His Excellency President Suharto told the Samdech that although it has won may successes on the battlefields so far, our ANS must continue to make sacrifices in the future, and when it can inflict the greatest difficulties on the Vietnamese in Cambodia, when we have evidence and can produce evidence of this for his Excellency Suharto and the leaders of other ASEAN countries, His Excellency Suharto and these other leaders of ASEAN will meet with the Vietnamese aggressors and urge them that the time is ripe for them to agree to sit at the negotiating table to settle the Cambodian question peacefully.

In other words, the ASEAN leaders as well as those of European countries and the United States believe that only when we, the Cambodian resistance fighters in the interior of the country, launch more effective attacks against the Vietnamese aggressors will the latter agree to settle the Cambodian question and return freedom and independence to our country. Therefore, the brothers who are wielding arms in the struggle for national liberation inside the country must carry on the struggle, consenting to make more sacrifices and enduring more hardship, so that our nation can survive.

On this occasion, in my capacity as the commander in chief of the ANS, I would like to remind all officers, noncommissioned officers, and combatants of the ANS that in our national liberation struggle, we of course need all kinds of materiel. However, the thing that we need most of all is the support of the people, of our esteemed and beloved Khmer people living in the interior or in the zones under the temporary control of the enemy. For this reason, I would like to remind you of the importance of the political side of our national liberation struggle. This is to say that if our army enjoys no support from our brothers, parents, aunts, and uncles -- that is, our Khmer people in general -- we will never be able to carry on our national liberation struggle. Therefore, when you go to the hamlets and villages in the country, you must behave correctly toward our people in the interior. We must not rob them, steal their property, or commit any crimes against our people. On the contrary, we must help them in their daily chores, if possible. We should perform such courtesies as bringing along with us sarongs, cloth, and medicine, and so on that our Samdech Euv has received from friendly countries, which give them to our ANS so that it can bring them to our brothers in the interior.

Moreover, our ANS is an army of Samdech Euv. Do you know why our people in the interior love our Samduch Euv? It is because he symbolizes the freedom, prosperity, and independence of Cambodia; because he once gave the people, his children, peace, prosperity, and national independence. For this reason, we, the members of the ANS who are the samdech's close children, must do our best to preserve his good name and his popularity among our people inside Cambodia.

If we can do that, I firmly believe that in the not too distant future, under the enlightened leadership of our beloved Samduch Euv, all of us -- not only the ANS, but all other armies of the patriots, including particularly the nationalist fighters who are presently in the ranks of the Heng Samrin army -- all Khmer will be able to shake hands with each other and jointly build a government that can be called a quadripartite government representing the whole Cambodian nation in the fight to liberate the country from the yoke of the Vietnamese aggressors and restore to our Cambodia and to our people freedom, prosperity, happiness, and independence. All of us under the royal leadership of our Samdech Euv will be able to make our country once again independent and free, like all other countries in the world.

In concluding my message, I extend to all of you, valiant combatants of the ANS, the five blessings of Lord Buddha. I pray to the three jewels of Buddhism and the souls of past Cambodian kings who used to bestow peace and happiness upon the Khmer nation and people: Please provide protection for all oour combatants and brothers who are confronting the Vietnamese communist aggressors. May you encounter nothing but great successes in your noble mission to liberate our nation. May you have peace and prosperity, safety and success forever in your great task to liberate the Khmer nation and to safeguard our Khmer people. Thank you.

BK090348 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2330 GMT 8 Sep 86

[Text] On 2 September, Vice President Khieu Samphan sent a message to His Excellency Pak Song-chol, vice president of the DPRK, most warmly greeting him and and the fraternal Korean Government and people on the glorious Korean National Day. The message reads as follows:

To His Excellency Pak Song-chol, vice president of the DPRK, Pyongyang:

Respected Excellency, on the solemn occasion of the 38th founding anniversary of the DPRK, on behalf of the Cambodian people, the CGDK, and in my own name, I am very happy to express to you, and through you, to the government of the DPRK and the fraternal Korean people, warmest congratulations and best wishes for new and greater successes in the tasks of building and defending the country as well as in the noble struggle to reunite the Korean fatherland independently and peacefully.

Since the beginning, under the bright light of the chuche ideal of His Excellency President Kim Il-song, the great, beloved, and respected leader of the Korean people, the DPRK has made great strides in its development in every field. In a short time, the DPRK has become a modern and strong socialist country with a blossoming socialist economy and culture and an independent and powerful capability to defend the country. In the international arena, the DPRK has firmly adhered to a policy of independence, friendship, peace, and nonaligned principles and has unswervingly stood on the side of the just cause of people and countries struggling for national liberation and the safeguarding of national independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity. This has heightened the DPRK's influence and prestige in the international arena.

For this brilliant success of the fraternal Korean Government and people, the Cambodian people and the CGDK would like to express greatest admiration and respect. The anniversary of the DPRK National Day is a fine opportunity for our Cambodian people to recall with moving sentiments that despite facing serious and busy national tasks, the DPRK Government and fraternal people -- under the noble leadership of His Excellency President Kim Il-song, the eminent, beloved, and respected leader, and that of His Excellency Kim Chong-il, the beloved leader -- have paid attention to providing wholehearted support and assistance to our just struggle to liberate our country and safeguard our race against foreign aggression and occupation.

More recently, on 10 April 1986, during talks with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, in Pyongyang, His Excellency respected and beloved President Kim Il-song, on behalf of the DPRK, reaffirmed total support for the CGDK's 8-point proposal to resolve the Cambodian issue politically.

For all this, on behalf of the Cambodian people, the CGDK, and in my own name, I would like to once again express with moving sentiments most profound gratitude to you, and through you, to His Excellency President Kim Il-song, eminent, beloved, and respected leader of the Korean people; His Excellency Kim Chong-il, the beloved leader; and to the fraternal Korean government and people.

On the same occasion, the Cambodian people and the CGDK would like to reaffirm their unswerving stand to always support in every circumstance the cause of reuniting the Korean fatherland independently and peacefully in accordance with the principles and direction most correctly laid down by His Excellency repected and beloved President Kim Il-song.

With the conviction that the fine traditional relations of friendship and cooperation which bind our two nonaligned countries will further blossom and grow in strength, please accept my fraternal greetings and highest consideration.

On the same day, Vice President Khieu Samphan also sent a similar message to His Excellency Kim Yong-nam, deputy chairman of the Administrative Council and foreign minister of the DPRK.

PRESIDENT GREETS INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON KOREA

[Text] On 6 September 1986, LPDR President Souphanouvong sent a greetings message to an international conference on turning the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free and peaceful zone. The conference is being held in Pyongyang 6-8 September. The message reads as follows:

On behalf of the party, government, and people of Laos, and on my own behalf, I would like to convey warm and sincere saluations and greetings to all delegates attending this international conference on turning the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free and peaceful zone. This significant international conference is held amid a tense international situation that is the result of the implementation of a bellicose policy and an arms race, in particular a nuclear arms race, by the imperialists with the U.S. imperialists as chieftains. However, it is held at a time when the movements of struggle of various nations for peace and in opposition to war and arms race, in particular nuclear arms race, are extensively and vigorously expanding as never before. The conference is also held in an atmosphre in which the Soviet Union has taken significant initiatives aimed at turning the Asia-Pacific region into a peaceful and nuclear-free region.

The present situation in the Korean peninsula remains tense as a result of the aggression and intervention carried out by the U.S. imperialists who have taken control of the South Korean puppets and used them as tools to pursue a policy which is aimed at waging a new war in the Korean peninsula and permanently penetrating Korean territory. The Lao people and the LPDR Government vigorously support the initiatives of the DPRK which are aimed at building the Korean peninsula into a peaceful and nuclear-free zone. The Lao people resolutely maintain solarity with Korean people who have demanded that the United States put an end to all its interference in the internal affairs of Korea and that it totally withdraw troops from South Korea for the cause of a peaceful and independent reunification of the Korean nation.

I hope that this international conference on turning the Korean peninsula into a zone of peace, free from nuclear weapons, will significantly contribute to the achievements of peace and security in the Korean peninsula as well as in Asia, the Pacific, and the world.

I wish the conference glorious success.

FOREIGN MINISTER SPEAKS ON TRADE WITH U.S.

["Full text" of 5 September speech bv Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila in Phatthaya at United States Information Service-sponsored economic seminar]

[Text] Last month, not far down the coast from where you are sitting right now, there was a joint Thai-U.S. military exercise code-named Cobra Gold. That exercise symbolished so well the friendship between our two countries. It is a friendship which is more than a hundred and fifty years old. It has been tested in battle. Our soldiers have fought side by side from the muddy fields of France in the First World War to the frozen hills of Korea in the Korean War. During the WW II, the Free Thai, including myself, together with their OSS friends, fought to liberate this country. After the War, the U.S. helped us to restore our position in the world. Thereafter, the U.S. gave us considerable military, economic and technical assistance which enabled us to develop into the modern, prosperous, democratic and stable country that it is today. Meanwhile, our friendship became an alliance through the Manila Pact and the Thanat-Rusk Communique. The extensive, close and long-standing relations between Thailand and the U.S. is fundamental to the stability and security of Southeast Asia which is of strategic importance to the Asia-Pacific region as a whole.

This relationship between friends and allies is, however, going through difficult times these days. Two weeks ago, the U.S. Commodity Credit Corp sold nearly 150,000 tons of sugar to the People's Republic of China at less than the nominal world price. Actual sugar prices fell immediately throughout the world as a result of the subsidized sale. They fell even more this past week at the news of the possibility of additional sugar disposal by the U.S. Commodity Credit Corp estimated at approximately 250,000 tons. Here in Thailand, uncertainty as to the future disposal by the U.S. has already almost halved the sugarcane price expected to be paid to farmers from 450 baht per metric ton to 290 baht per metric ton. We have urged the U.S. Government to refrain from making any additional sugar disposal because it will hurt our poor sugarcane farmers badly. Our poor rice-farmers are already suffering more than enough from the rice provisions of the Food Security Act. It is measures such as these, which hit at the very livelihood of the nation, that have led many Thai people to question the value of the friendship between Thailand and the Unlimited States.

Thai-U.S. trade has therefore become the central issue in Thai-U.S. relations. It has become a matter of heated debate. In order to have a clear perspective on the problem, I wish to make a distinction, at the outset, between trade and trading relations. Trading relations involve exporters and importers and products purchased and sold between them. The health of these relations is normally measured by the volume and value of goods traded; where this is high and growing, it will be said that trading relations are excellent. Where it is low or declining, then it is bad. Since trade between two market economies is generally conducted by the private sector, there is neither conflict nor cooperation. Rather it is a competitive exploitation of trade opportunities based on comparative advantages which are mutually beneficial to the parties concerned.

Trade relations, however, are a different matter altogether. These relations are the interaction of policies and measures conducted by the governments involved in the pursuit of their respective national interests. Where the interaction results in increased benefits to the two countries concerned, this is called cooperation. Where it reduces benefits of one in favor of the other, it is considered a conflict.

Trading relations between the U.S. and Thailand began a long time ago, but the last ten years saw exceptionally rapid growth in the total value of trade between the two countries, rising from approximately 16,000 million baht in 1976 to just under 70,000 million baht in 1985. During this ten-year period, both exports to and imports from the U.S. expanded substantially. But it was not until last year that exports exceeded imports for the first time by some 9,500 million baht. Another record was also set in that year when the U.S. replaced the ten-member European Economic Community as Thailand's most important export market by a narrow margin of US $80 million. As for imports, the ten-member European Economic Community, after many years of alternating with the U.S., beat the U.S. into third place as Thailand's source of imports. Both, however, are some long way behind Japan but not surprisingly so in view of Japan's considerable investments in Thailand.

Trade relations, however, by its very nature of being narrowly based on the protection of national interest, are always a conflict which requires constant compromise. A compromise which may involve actual trade loss but a gain for national interests elsewhere. The name of the game is, therefore, "trade off." Unfortunately the game is never easy to play, particularly for a small player like Thailand who finds herself always reacting defensively to the ever changing rules. And it is the big players who are always changing the rules and not playing ball. At times, they even take away the ball from the smaller players to play among themselves.

I wish therefore to remind the U.S. side that, throughout the history of Thai-U.S. trade relations, which was formalized two decades ago with the conclusion of the Treaty of Amity and Economic Relations in 1966, these relations rest in fact on two fundamental principles.

First, the principle of Most Favoured Nation. This is a principle that Thailand has always followed in the conduct of her trade relations with the rest of the world and has no intention of departing from it now or in the future.

Secondly, the commitment to an open multilateral trading system, inherent to which is the parallel commitment to a market oriented economy and a free enterprise-system as well as adherence to the spirit and provisions of the General Agreement of Tariff and Trade.

There is also a third dimension to our trade relations and that is the special and differential treatment accorded to developing countries by developed countries. The most, and perhaps, the only visible manifestation of this dimension is the Generalized System of Preferences given unilaterally, and without reciprocity, by developed countries, including the U.S., to developing countries, including Thailand.

Within and governed by these principles, the United States and Thailand have been able always to reach a compromise when potential conflicts of interest arise as they do from time to time. This happy ending was not too dificult to achieve when both countries prospered.

However, the persisting slow-down in the world economy, the long term decline of commodity and agricultural prices, the recent over-valuation of the U.S. currency and the huge and growing U.S. trade deficits have all converged to propel trade conflicts between the United States and Thailand into the forefront, beginning in the year 1984, with an avalanche in 1985 and continuing without sign of abating into 1986 and beyond.

What are the complaints coming from the Thai side?

-- The complaint and the subsequent investigation by the U.S. International Trade Commission of the injuries alleged to be caused to U.S. tuna industries, by imports including those from Thailand.

-- The investigation and final determination against Thailand in countervailing cases on textile and apparel, rice and steel pipes and tubes as well as anti-dumping duty on Thai steel pipes.

-- The promulgation of the Food Security Act of 1985 with huge subsidies to U.S. rice and other agricultural exports

-- The demand for reciprocity, where no reciprocity was previously expected, in the review of Thai benefits under the U.S. Generalized System of Preferences.

-- The recent subsidized sale of sugar to China with threat of more to come, that I have just mentioned.

-- The large number of protectionist bills outstanding in the Congress.

Many people in Thailand look at all of these and see a pattern of trade harassment, trade destruction targeting and, more important, an erosion of the basic principles that had governed trade relations between Thailand and the United States.

We realize that this is not the intention of the U.S. President, nor the Congress. The measures have been taken in reaction to the general fright of some of the U.S. private sector, particularly those industries and farming sectors which are no longer competitive that are calling for protectionism, instead of looking to restructuring and productivity improvement as a solution to their plight. Nevertheless, such erosion of basic principles, the targeting of specific countries, the weakening commitment to the open multilateral trading system and the demand for reciprocity in areas hitherto unheard of between developed and developing countries, has made it increasingly difficult for governments to seek compromise. It is ironical that, here we are, two friendly and allied countries, both believing in free and fair trade, finding ourselves in conflict.

Thailand on her part is trying to contribute to the preservation of cooperation so vital to our relations. To this end, we have -- reduced tariff on wheat and cotton;

-- drafted a new trade mark protection law to extend protection to service and certification mark;

-- strengthened enforcement of intellectual property rights with the establishment of a special police task force to investigate and proceed against offenders. (Let me make a point here: the owners of these rights must lodge compliants before the police can act.) We are:

-- in the process of amending the Copy Right Law to give protection to U.S. copyrights, although the U.S. is not a member of the Berne Convention;

-- keeping under continuing review other trade and trade related issues raised by the U.S. including patent protection for pharmaceuticals and will act on them when economic and social conditions permit.

Between conflict and cooperation, there is no choice. We always choose cooperation. The totality of Thai-U.S. relations is greater than its parts. We seek cooperation in Thai-U.S. trade in the greater interest of Thai-U.S. friendship. We know that there are problems, and when there are problems, we should speak to each other both bilaterally and in the multilateral context. We appreciate the fact that President Reagan, his administration and many far-sighted members of the Congress understand the problems of world trade. They know that we in Thailand are only a small part of these problems. But given the circumstances, measures taken by the U.S. hit us rather than their intended targets who are in fact bigger and better able to absorb the blows on thei economies.

Prosperity is relative. Our standard of living is still relatively low. Uninterrupted development is essential to us if we are to be able to continue as the front-line state in Southeast Asia. The Food Security Act hits us very hard. The majority of our population consists of poor rice-farmers. Their livelihood depends on the price of rice. The Thai economy in turn still depends heavily on rice export. That is why it is so sensitive to the price of rice on the world market which has gone down as a result of the pricing of U.S. subsidized rice. Like President Reagan, we too want free and fair trade; and in a world of free and fair trade, everyone has to be really fair. On some matters, as mentioned earlier, we have to take measures in response to U.S. complaints. On other matters, the U.S. should give us adequate warning before taking action. Abrupt measures have many repercussions and affect otherwise friendly relations.

We share the concern of the U.S. on the urgent need for global political will to preserve and strengthen the open world trading system. That is why we were among the first to support the call for the launching of the New Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations. We believe that subsidies are wrong. They distort the world trading system even further. By limiting market access, economic problems are turned into political problems. This affects the ASEAN countries which have always endeavoured to be a moderating force on international economic issues and a bridge between the developed and developing countries. In particular, it undermines Thailand's vital role as the front-line state on the East-West ideological frontier in Southeast Asia. It also weakens Thailand's ability to extend assistance to the U.S. and other Western countries in the suppression of narcotics and narcotics trafficking from the Golden Triangle and her contribution in extending humanitarian assistance to the refugees and displaced persons seeking first asylum from oppression.

We urge upon the U.S. that, at a time of global economic competition, the free and open societies of the world have to cooperate positively. We are confident that the U.S. Administration and the Thai Government understand each other well. The U.S. mass media have to help to explain the true situation to the American people. Wrong economic decisions were some of the factors which led to the Second World War. Such mistakes must not be repeated. No amount of subsidies can solve the problems of uneconomic sectors of the economy of any country in the long run. Measures of protectionism, including aggressive undercutting of prices of competitors, merely prolong the drift into endless conflict. The man who beggars his neighbours usually ends up with no friends. As the leader of the Western world, I do not believe that the U.S. can afford to make all the nations of the Third World suffer as a result of her economic measures.

Speaking as an old friend of the U.S., I know and live with those agonizing moments when a choice has to be made between basic principles and international commitments and the protection of domestic interests. I have made difficult decisions with a heavy heart. In the case of the Thai-U.S. trade, we do not want conflict, we want cooperation. We want free and fair trade, in which all, whether large or small, can live together and prosper. On our part, we appreciate the more than a hundred and fifty years of friendship that we have had with the United States. We wish that the U.S. would reciprocate this feeling through concrete measures so that we would be able to live in peace and stability and continue to be friends. Let it not be said here, as it is said elsewhere, that the U.S. never gave enough but took more than enough. We wish Thai-U.S. relations to be a show-case of friendship to the rest of the world.

DEFENSE MINISTRY PLANNING NEW TOP POST

[Text] The Defense Ministry is planning to create a new top military post -- chairman of the joint chiefs-of-staff -- to take over responsibilities of the Supreme Commander.

Sources said the creation of the new post was likely under the ministry's plans for organisational changes in the Supreme Command designed to give the ministry a greater role to play.

The chairman of the joint chiefs-of-staff would serve as an adviser to the Defence Minister, the sources said.

A source at the Supreme Command said organisational changes were necessary to relieve the Supreme Command of its workload.

At the moment too much work had been dumped onto the Supreme Command, while the Defence Ministry and the Office of the Permanent Secretary for Defence had "too little or nothing to do", the source said.

The source said there had been considerations on what should be done to reorganise the Supreme Command since the time when Gen Athit Kamlang-ek was the Supreme Commander and Army Commander-in-Chief.

As part of the changes, a group of chiefs-of-staff from the three armed forces would be appointed to coordinate armed forces affairs and give advice to the Defence Ministry. At present it is the Supreme Commander's responsibility to coordinate work of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force.

The posts of Supreme Commander and his deputies would not be abolished, but no one would be appointed to these positions, the source said.

The source pointed out the fact that nobody had been named deputy to the current Supreme Commander, Admiral Supha Khotchaseni, adding that there would be no successor to Adm Supha when he retired.

Defence Minister Air Chief Marshal Phaniang Kantarat said recently that plans to reorganise the Supreme Command had already been submitted to his ministry, but they had been returned for reconsideration. ACM Phaniang also confirmed that the posts of Supreme Commander and his deputies would be kept vacant but not abolished.

CSC NORASING FORCE TO BE DISSOLVED

[Text] An army working group has decided to dissolve the Norasing Force as part of a major restructuring in the Capital Security Command (CSC), an informed military source told THE NATION yesterday.

The annual shake-up in the military hierarchy will also bring about a reshuffle at the CSC, according to the source.

The decision to dissolve the Norasing Force was adopted by an ad-hoc committee chaired by newly-appointed Army Chief-of-Staff Gen Wanchai Ruangtrakun.

The committee, he said, has reached a conclusion to dissolve the elite force as since was not necessary to maintain it under the present circumstances as prospect urban terrorism by the weakening Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) has become more remote than ever.

The Norasing Force, which comprises a tank and an infantry company, has been stationed at the Supreme Command headquarters in Sanam Suapa since the 1981 abortive coup engineered by former "Young Turk" officers. The companies were moved back to their original units last month.

The source, who requested anonymity, said the ad-hoc committee will soon submit in writing the proposed dissolution of the force to Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut.

Upon his rise to the top army slot in May, Gen Chawalit set up the ad-hoc committee to explore ways and means of restructuring the CSC to suit the current situation.

The source said a major reorganization in the line of command in the CSC is in the offing, as a result of last week's reshuffle of senior officers of the three armed forces.

"There will be replacements of some senior CSC officers because they have been promoted to higher positions in the latest annual military shake-up," he said.

Under the current organization chart, Gen Chawalit is the CSC commander, while Army Chief-of-Staff Gen Wanchai and newly-appointed Air Force Chief-of-Staff Air Marshal Kaset Rotchananin serve as assistant commanders.

Other senior officers in the CSC include Lt Gen Phichit Kunlawanit, commander of the CSC army force, Vice Admiral Amnuai Iam-suro, the CSC navy force commander, Air Vice Marshal Prayat Ditsayasarin, the CSC air force commander, and Pol Lt Gen Panet Ritrucha, the CSC police force commander.

ARMY OFFICERS MEET MUSLIM LEADERS IN SOUTH

[Text] Songkhla -- Officers of the Fourth Army Region last week held a meeting with senior leaders of Muslim communities from five southern provinces to discuss ways to end local conflicts and Muslim terrorism, a senior army official said yesterday.

Maj Gen Kitti Rattanachaya, who is commander of a Thai-Malaysian combined forces, told THE NATION that the main purpose of the meeting was to make it clear to Muslim people in the south that the government is not discriminating against them and their religion.

He said the Muslim leaders came from Yala, Pattani, Narathiwat, Satun and Songkhla.

Maj Gen Kitti did not give details of the meeting but said the army officers told the Muslim leaders that the government wants all the Thai Muslims to participate in the process of solving the country's problems. He said the majority of the Muslim people in the five southern provinces understand the government's policy well but there are a few who still support the terrorist movements.

Maj Gen Kitti said both Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut and the National Security Council agreed with his proposal that problems among Muslim people should be handled by themselves.

The government has been successful in alienating the myriad of Muslim terrorist bands operating along the Thai-Malaysian border. Their number has been significantly reduced and their activities limited in the past few years.

An army intelligence report early this year said that the Muslim terrorists had formed a new movement known as "Mujahid" in a move to gain more support.

'OFFICIAL SOURCE' VIEWS DENG XIAOPING'S REMARKS

[By Laurent Maillard]

[Text] Hanoi, Sept 9 (AFP) -- Vietnam said on Tuesday that Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping's suggestion that Moscow pressure Hanoi into withdrawing its troops from Cambodia was doomed to fail. An official source said Mr. Deng's call, addressed to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, was a futile attempt to divide the Soviet Union and Vietnam.

"The Soviet Union and Vietnam are totally unanimous on all international and regional questions," the source said, giving Vietnam's first reaction to China's latest initiative toward Moscow. The source said this unanimity had been expressed in various meetings between Mr. Gorbachev and Le Duan, the secretary-general of the Vietnamese Communist Party who died in July. It had also been confirmed during last month's meeting between Mr. Gorbachev and Mr. Le Duan's successor, Truong Chinh, the source added.

"The Soviet position on Cambodia was expressed clearly in Mr. Gorbachev's speech in Vladivostok on July 28," the source told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. "Any attempt to divide Vietnam and the Soviet Union will be met by failure," the source said.

Mr. Deng said in a U.S. television interview broadcast last weekend that he was ready to meet Mr. Gorbachev in Moscow if the Soviet Union pressed Vietnam to withdraw its troops from Cambodia. Vietnam has an estimated 140,000 troops in Cambodia, supporting the Phnom Penh government against a tripartite guerilla coalition led by former Cambodian ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk. One of the groups which make up the coalition is the Khmer Rouge, which is backed by Beijing.

Mr. Deng said Moscow's support of Vietnam's presence in Cambodia was "the main obstacle" standing in the way of normal Sino-Soviet relations.

In Vladivostok, the Soviet Asian port where he announced a major Asian initiative, Mr. Gorbachev steered clear of the Cambodian issue. He only said it was inadmissible to drag the country back toward its tragic past, or to decide its fate from distant capitals or the United Nations.

But he also said Cambodia and other Southeast Asian problems depended on a normalization of Sino-Vietnamese relations, apparently suggesting that China and Vietnam ought to settle their differences directly.

FAMILY CAMPAIGN YIELDS INITIAL RESULTS

OW080737 Hanoi VNA in English 0714 GMT 8 Sep 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept 8 — From 1884 to 1985, the population of Vietnam grew 8.35 times, from 7,171,000 to 59,870,000, and the density increased from 21.47 to 179.25 per square kilometre. Meanwhile, the cultivated area per capita has shrunk to a mere 868 square metres and continues to shrink, especially in the delta regions where part of the farm land has been turned into residential or industrial areas.

The family campaign was started in 1960. So far it has yeilded initial results. The population growth rate dropped from 2.4 per cent in 1981 to 2.15 in 1985. In some major cities and provinces such as Hanoi, Haiphong, Ho Chi Minh City, Thai Binh and Quang Nam-Danang Provinces the rate has gone down to 1.7 per cent and even lower.

In the five-year plan (1981-85), the natural population increase was 6,140,000, or an annual average of 1,230,000. By 1990 the population is expected to have risen to 68 million at the present rate, that is an increase of around two per cent or 1,230,000 persons a year. To keep the population at around 66 million in 1990, it is obvious that the "two-children family" formula is no longer compatible. The birth rate must be brought down to 22 or 23 per cent which would keep the population growth rate at 1.7 per cent or less.

ARMY JOURNAL EXAMINES BUILDING ARMED FORCES

BK021229 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 31 Aug 86

[TAP CHI QUAN DOI NHAN DAN September 1986 issue, article by Truong Dung: "Concerning the Matter of Building the People's Armed Forces"]

[Text] The CPV Central Committee's draft political report has pointed out the situation and national defense tasks as well as the need to link the duty of the People's Armed Forces with the task of building socialism. A problem arising is how to build the People's Armed Forces.

The correct way to solve this problem is that we must base ourselves on our situation and tasks, as well as on the conditions and capabilities of the national economy. Considering only requirements without taking into account capabilities, or emphasizing capabilities without considering requirements is wrong. It is necessary to find the most effective solution that reflects the close combination between requirements and capabilities in accordance with the party's military lines and concepts. It is also necessary to be fully aware of a realistic concept -- the concept of achieving growth in construction and combat among our People's Armed Forces.

Our country does not face a large-scale war now and, therefore, there is no need to build an army of the size needed for a large-scale war. Our country also does not have complete peace and is, therefore, unable to maintain a certain number of regular peacetime troops as is the case of many other countries. Our country is now in a situation in which there are both war and peace in certain proportions. Therefore, we need a people's army or a people's armed forces strong enough to meet the demands of the present combat and combat readiness tasks. Simultaneously, the People's Army must be ready to expand its force when required by the situation in keeping with requirements arising from the long-term national defense tasks.

Once there is a most effective solution, it is important for us to resolve correctly the relationship between quantity and quality. If we resolve this incorrectly, we may end up having an army which is large in numbers but not strong. Obversely we may have a very strong army which does not need to be large. In most cases, it is due to its large numerical strength that an army is not strong enough if its organizational structure is irrational, bulky, ineffective, and there is a laxity in the enforcement of discipline, if necessary material-technical conditions are inadequate and nonuniform due to too great a numerical strength, and if the activities of component organizations are not synchronized or overlap due to poor leadership or unsuitable organizational structure.

Our solution is that we must have an army with appropriate numerical strength but with high quality. Using our army's high quality to prevail over the enemy's large numerical strength is a vital strategic measure aimed at tackling differences between requirements and capabilities.

An army, though not large in numbers, may be very strong chiefly due to its modern equipment, powerful weapons, highly maneuverable means of transportation, and fast and accurate means of leadership communications. If we pay attention to renovating our equipment and weapons, know how to make full use of all different types of technical equipment -- modern, relatively modern, and rudimentary -- and are determined to resolve those problems regarding the guarantee of material-technical requirements, the strength of the army -- including the three types of forces -- will be very great and we will have conditions to develop the superiority of people's war to the fullest.

Nevertheless, an army cannot become strong only because of modern equipment. Modern equipment is the material base of fighting strength. The factors that directly decide fighting strength are the organization and those people forming the organization, including cadres and combatants with the contingent of cadres playing the core role. Organization is a scientific art. The military organization of people's war is a major problem of the military science of people's war. It is necessary to achieve a rational balance between the three types of forces, ensure a rational structure for various armed services and combat branches of the People's Army, have a strong regular force and a powerful reserve force, and ensure rational organization and staffing for large units and staff organs.

We must strengthen combat units, the frontline, and all agencies directly involved in combat and productive labor; reduce personnel strength in the rear agencies; and reconsider the network of staff agencies and schools. Staff agencies must be compact, competent, effective, and able to influence units, leadership, and command.

We must have some forms of reserve force organization and mobilization suitable to our experience and tradition and in line with the Soviet Union's advanced experience in quickly mobilizing and increasing the Army in case of a major war. Particularly, strategic agencies and staff agencies of the various central military party committees and the Defense Ministry play the important role of influencing all troops both inside and outside the country.

The responsibility and combat strength of our Army and Armed Forces is closely linked to the tasks of thoroughly understanding the party's military line; developing and applying Vietnam's military science and arts in national defense; and in military technology, mastering, operating, developing, and maintaining all technical equipment in the people's war to defend the country under modern conditions.

We must review and develop our fruitful experiences and attentively study the military concepts and work of President Ho Chi Minh, Comrade Le Duan, and other leaders. At the same time, we must strive to select and learn from modern military knowledge and the advanced experience of the Soviet Union's military science, to acquire, study, and apply the latest world achievements in military science and technology without being mechanically imitative, without being conservative or empirical. On this basis, we will train cadres and troops in a basic, systematic, and comprehensive manner in order to meet immediate and long-range requirements.

In training, we must emphasize combat procedures with combined armed services and branches, using the three troop categories and integrating regular army corps with the local people's militias on all levels.

In order to raise the quality of the troops we must now solve the urgent problem of stabilizing and gradually improving the cadres' and combatants' living conditions. We must precisely implement all the Army's rear policies, paying special attention to the task of logistical and technical services, and continue to build the national defense industries within the general industrial structure of the country. Special attention must be paid to all the existing material and technical bases of the Army, understanding how to use them properly to meet immediate combat requirements and how to maintain them for long-range requirements should a large-scale war ever occur.

We must completely understand the spirit of thriftily building the army, strictly economizing on all expenses for national defense, seeking the best projects for all military operations, ensuring minimum cost for maximum effectiveness, and actively opposing waste, corruption, exhibitionism, and formalism.

Troops must strive to work toward equalizing the national defense budget and gradually reduce the people's contributions while constantly enhancing the quality and combat strength of the Army. The troops' economic building task has been deemed an unchanging, long-term strategic duty. Also, it is an urgent task given the country's present economic situation.

Among the factors that create our Armed Forces' integrated strength, the political fator always remains fundamental. This is not an abstract issue. It is closely related to all the Army's activites and is mainly demonstrated the fulfillment of the political tasks assigned by the party.

The fierce ordeals of the past decade, especially during the wars of national defense along the country's two borders and the performance of our international duty have proved that the revolutionary nature and fine traditions of our People's Army continue to be firmly maintained and developed.

As an organic component of society, our Army has received all the new regime's positivism while also being strongly influenced by negativism in society. We would be very subjective if we expect to end negativism in the Army overnight. However, we would be wrong were we to remain objective, fail to promote dynamism to the the highest extent and the effectiveness of the party's political tasks including the ideological, organizational, and policy-making tasks, in order to reduce negativism in the Army.

A powerful army must have strong primary units. Wholesome, firm, and strong basic party organizations serve as a core to build strong primary units.

The draft political report of the party Central Committee set forth various concrete measures to improve the party's leadership capability and combat strength. We should apply these measures to reinforce each party organization's strong points and improve its weak points discovered during the recent self-criticism and criticism drive, strengthen the party building task, strive to fulfill the political tasks of the entire Army and in each unit for the immediate future and for the years ahead.

The invincible strength of the CPV and the People's Army has been maintained by the internal unity, consciousness, and just cause of our people on the basis of party policy and positions, the revolutionary objective, and the Army's ideals and combat objectives. The Army's unanimity stemmed from the party's unity -- from the Central Committee to the Political Bureau and party comittees of various echelons -- and from the close solidarity between the Army and the people, other party and state organizations and sectors. All forms of disunity, division, and factionalism to whatever degree and in any unit run counter to the party's and the Army's revolutionary essence and weaken the combat strength of the party and Army, thereby creating a serious break through which for the enemy can undermine us.

The strength of our unity and unanimity has been developed on the basis of democratic centralism. We must strengthen democratic centralism to develop the strength of our organization and consolidate our party and army discipline. Along with enhancing the capabilities of party cadres and members, we must effectively improve our training method to help them maintain the revolutionary quality, firmly develop their titles as members of the Communist Party and officers of the VPA. We must pay attention to the training, managment, and inspection roles of party chapters over party members, including leading party cadres. Measures against those party cadres and members who violated law and regulations must be taken in a just and clear-sighted manner.

The main combat strength of our Army relies on the strength of our people's collective mastery which is led by the party and the socialism which is being gradually built nationwide and at each locality in the political, economic, cultural and social fields. As a result, in addition to enhancing the quality of the Army, we must pay attention to stabilizing and gradually improving the people's daily life and production, eliminating negative phenomena in society, and accelerating the two strategic tasks of building socialism and defending the fatherland. We must combine economic tasks with national defense and vice versa. We must build a firm and strong all-people national defense system, build and strengthen the people's war position in each locality and throughout the country, especially at the frontline areas and other important strategic zones.

We must develop the effectiveness and solidity of the party leadership apparatus in the VPA and the cause of national defense set forth by the party Central Committee Political Bureau to ensure the success of all activities, combat, and building of our Armed Forces at present and under all complex circumstances.

The strength of our Armed Forces is in close association with the acitivities of the new era; that is, to consolidate and strengthen the strategic and combat alliance with the fraternal Lao and Cambodian peoples in the unified Indochinese battleground, and strengthen the militant solidarity and friendship with the great Soviet people and the world socialist community. Realizing the great and effective role of international assistance, our officers and combatants understand and always strive to fulfill their glorious internationalist obligation under all circumstances.

OFFICIALS CITE WAN LI ON GORBACHEV SPEECH

[From the "International Report" moderated by (Collin Johnson)]

[Text] The Chinese vice premier, Mr Wan Li, has expressed skepticism at Moscow's overtures to China. Australian officials say in talks with the Australian prime minister, Mr Bob Hawke, Mr Wan Li said China was being cautious in its response to proposals by the Soviet leader, Mr Mikhail Gorbachev, to improve relations. Graham Dobell reports from Canberra.

[Begin recording] [Dobell] Mr Wan Li said that the approach taken by Mr Gorbachev in his Vladivostok speech in July on relations with Asia was not realistic. The Chinese vice premier told Mr Hawke that there had been no real progress on the three obstacles to better relations -- Kampuchea, Afghanistan, and the Sino-Soviet border. Mr Wan Li said that Beijing particuluarly wanted some movement from Moscow on the whole question of Vietnam and Kampuchea. Australian officials said he expressed skepticism and caution about any Chinese response to the overtures from Mr Gorbachev. They said this cautious view had been echoed by Mr Hawke in his comments on the Soviet approach to Asia and (?the Pacific). [Passage indistinct] framework for the relationship between China and Australia was consistently improving. He said the two countries faced new challenges posed by changes in the world economic order and the need to ensure that the Asia-Pacific region maintained its (?steady) growth.

[Hawke] It's now up to respective peoples in our two countries, the entrepreneurs, the scientists, the professionals, the artists, sportsmen, and others to build on that framework and create relationships solely based on genuine understanding. As you are so well aware of, Your Excellency, we face a world environment in which Australia and China continually face new challenges, challenges posed by changes in the world economic order and the need to continue to ensure that our Asia-Pacific region maintains its dynamic growth and becomes increasingly a region of peace and stability. Working as closely together as we are, I know that we will succeed.

[Dobell] Mr Wan Li said Australia and China were exploring ways to strengthen cooperation in steel, communications, and transport. He said China's policy of opening up to the outside world had yielded marked results, and China would introduce necessary reforms in the existing political structure to ensure the deepening of economic reforms. [end recording]

[Text] Vice President Umar Wirahadikusumah has said that a decision on the venue of the Ninth Nonaligned Summit, due to be held 3 years from now, will be made at the nonaligned foreign ministers meeting in Cyprus in 1988 at the latest. Vice President Umar Wirahadikusumah said that the Harare nonaligned summit proceeded smoothly because all member countries refrained from raising controversial issues. The Indonesian delegation was successful in the summit, as reflected in the exclusion of the East Timor issue from the agenda and final declaration of the conference. Answering questions on Indonesia's assistance to SWAPO, the vice president said that the SWAPO leader welcomed the Indonesian assistance. Vice President Umar Wirahadikusumah was welcomed at Jakarta's Halim Perdanakusuma Airport by ministers of the fourth development cabinet.

SUHARTO, MURDANI ADDRESS ARMED FORCES MEETING

BK051021 Jakarta THE INDONESIA TIMES in English 1 Sep 86 pp 1, 7

["By our reporter"]

[Text] The Armed Forces leaders uphold their staunch stand to confront every heavy challenge that may appear due to economic uncertainty and the next year's general election.

It is one of the major points produced in the Armed Forces (ABRI) Commanders' Call taking pace from August 27 to 29 in Jakarta. The Armed Forces Commander-in-Chief, L. Benni Murdani, gave his report to President Suharto when the military leaders met the President at the State Palace Saturday.

The senior officers included the chief of the Army, Lieutenant General Tri Sutrisno: the chief of the Navy, vice-Admiral R. Kasenda: the chief of the Air force, Vice Marshal Utomo; the chief of Police Lieutenant General M. Sanusi; as well as senior officials of the ABRI's headquarters and regional commanders.

President Suharto in his address reminded the top officers that the current world economic situation, was bringing the nation into an unfavourable situation in which the country was confronted by heavy challenges. However, Suharto was confident that "with an iron will we will be able to make new breakthroughs to overcome those challenges."

"We have to take every possible chance, even if necessary to make temporary sacrifices, to achieve greater gains in the future," Suharto added.

One of the new breakthroughs, according to the President, is to increase nationwide efficiency and productivity in all sectors.

Suharto described major decisions concluded in the meeting as reflecting the understanding and strategic concepts of ABRI's upcoming generation on the future development of the nation, "its problems, challenges and their appropriate responses."

"The decisions reflect ABRI's full responsibility of the nation's historical process," Suharto added.

Suharto expressed his gratitude that in their first appearance, the succeeding generation of ABRI has been able to produce brilliant concepts over strategic and basic issues which the nation is facing to succeed in national development.

General Murdani reported that in accordance with problems identifications made in the meeting, the trends which would happen both at home and abroad did not show any indication that the internal situation would negatively affect the nation. However, ABRI would remain vigilant. National stability, particularly national security, is normal and under control.

For the 1987 general elections, the meeting had outlined the measures to be taken in order to maintain and improve national stability.

General Murdani, in a press conference later, said that the political situation preceding the election "is normal, nothing is to happen". "The situation will not heat up if no one creates the contrary," he added. He asked the press not print stories that could heat up the political situation preceding the elections.

Answering a question, Gen. Murdani said that there was no difference between open and closed campaign rallies. "The important thing is that the crowd should not turn into a mob," he added.

The ABRI meeting, according to Gen Murdani is aimed at strengthening the development of the Armed Forces. The meeting had evaluated the implementation of 1985/1986 working programs, and had discussed the submitted 86/87 programs. Realizing the heavy challenges which would be faced in the near future, said Gen Murdani, the meeting decided a theme; "ABRI together with the people work hand in hand to secure national development and to succeed in the 1987 general elections.

The meeting had discussed a keynote speech by Defence and Security Minister General Poniman and a description on the national economic development by Prof. Wijoyo Nitisastro.

The meeting asserted that ABRI's build-up program, which covers the creation of battle power, territorial buildup and social capabilities, have achieved the initially scheduled advances.

The build-up program of ABRI's strength, which covers the outcome of reorganization within the ABRI, the strengthening of battle units, territorial commands, battle deployment units and administrative units, had achieved the scheduled strength.

The meeting evaluated that socio-political role played by ABRI as stabilizer and dynamiser had been realized and applied by the next generation of ABRI.

Before the meeting, the ABRI had a seminar to draft ABRI's concepts to make the national development a success and to forward inputs for the formulation of the Broad Outlines on the State's Policy (GBHN) preceding the National People's Consultative Assembly general session in 1988.

MAHATHIR COMMENTS ON NONALIGNED SUMMIT PROCEEDINGS

BK080947 Kuala Lumpur BERNAMA in English 0922 GMT 8 Sep 86

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, Sept 8 (BERNAMA) -- Malaysian Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamed said today that many leaders at the Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) summit in Harare, Zimbabwe, were sympathetic to countries which were the "targets" of the United States. "Many were sympathetic", he told a press conference at the prime minister's department here.

Dr Mahathir, who returned from the summit yesterday, said Malaysia might not have been aware of the actual situation because reports received from "pro-U.S." news agencies were not necessarily true. "But from what the leaders said, we learnt that the U.S. actions were not fair," he said.

Dr Mahathir cited the U.S. action in laying mines at the waters of Nicaragua and said the World Court decided that the Americans were wrong in their action. "But the U.S. does not want to accept the decision of the World Court. If the U.S. does not want to accept the decision of the World Court, then who else would?" he asked.

He said another incident brought up at the summit by Libyan leader Col Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and which required attention was the U.S. bombing of Tripoli and Benghazi in March. It was very clear that the U.S. bombing was aimed at assassinating Col al-Qadhdhafi, he said. "It was an attempt by a country to assassinate...if it is a war, then it is a different matter altogether, here there is no war," Dr Mahathir said. Although Malaysia was aware that U.S. anger was in retaliation against terrorism allegedly committed by Libya, "Malaysia does not believe in allowing anyone to commit murder."

He said that the Israeli bombing of the headquarters of Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) Chairman Yasir 'Arafat in Tunis in October was a similar case.

More on Mahathir's Remarks

BK080659 Kuala Lumpur BERNAMA in English 0633 GMT 8 Sep 86

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, Sept. 8 (OANA-BERNAMA) -- Malaysian Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamed said Monday leaders he met at the eight summit of the Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) in Harare, Zimbabwe, have agreed to accept and implement the proposals to be submitted by the commission for the South on development issues.

"They gave their commitment, in principle, saying that they did not want to see the birth of another Brandt report which had only ended up being sold in bookshops," the prime minister told a press conference here.

The Brandt Commission had compiled its report in 1980 following its study of ways of overcoming obstacles in North-South relations.

Dr Mahathir, who returned from Harare Sunday, said the leaders did not want the South Commission to embark on another academic exercise in futility but wanted to see concrete proposals that could be implemented for the betterment of the Third World. Among the leaders he met were those from Zimbabwe, Pakistan, India, Zambia, Tanzania, Bhutan, Nepal and Peru. Dr Mahathir is chairman of the steering committee to set up the commission.

On the commission's membership, the prime minister stressed that members should not be government leaders but "intellectuals who are not associated with any governments."

The summit gave its blessing for the setting up of the commission to be chaired by former Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere.

Dr Mahathir also spoke of a proposal to set up a network of international universities in the South. He said there were between 300,000 and 400,000 students from the South who were studying in countries in the North and consequently there was an outflow of funds to these countries which were already rich. "This network of universities will foster closer relations among South students who in return can bring about better understanding among South countries," he said.

He also said that there was a proposal to create a data centre to enable the dissemination of information pertaining to a wide range of activities among the South countries. "Every country in the South can refer to the centre for information pertaining to, for instance, business regulations or the lack or excess of goods."

The prime minister said for example, there was no bilateral trade between Malaysia and Zimbabwe due to the lack or total absence of information on the activities carried out by the two countries.

On Kampuchea, he said Malaysia was disappointed with the failure of NAM to overcome the problem, particularly in determining the criteria for sacking a member from the movement. Dr Mahathir said, however, that there were many countries which supported Malaysia's stand on Kampuchea and pledged continued moral support to Malaysia.

He also said that there were many members of the NAM which were surprised with Malaysia's stand on apartheid. He said Malaysia had imposed sanctions on and also broken off relations with South Africa since 1961 and added that at that time, many countries in Africa were still colonies.

Asked why the summit did not seek mandatory sanctions, he said several African countries faced problems which were created by Britain. There was heavy dependence on South Africa by the frontline states and any move for mandatory sanctions would only lead to greater problems as these states received all kinds of supplies from and through South Africa. The alternative was to get supplies through the ports of Mozambique and Tanzania but this was also difficult due to guerrilla activities "purposely created" in the south of Mozambique.

JOLO MEETING TERMED 'BREAKTHROUGH OF SORTS'

HK090301 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES SUNDAY EXPRESS in English 7 Sep 86 p 4

[Editorial: "A Meeting in Jolo"]

[Text] A meeting between President Aquino and MNLF chairman Nur Misuari resulted in a formal cessation of hostilities in Mindanao, a breakthrough of sorts in the search for peace in the troubled southern island.

There is every reason to believe that both Mrs. Aquino and Misuari are sincere in the search for a lasting solution to the more than 14 years of bloody armed confrontation which has claimed more than 10,000 deaths on both sides and a serious disruption of economic and social conditions in Mindanao.

The President's willingness to break protocol by going to Jolo and Misuari's returning from many years of self-exile in the Middle East to negotiate reflect the atmosphere of trust and conciliation so crucial to any peace negotiation.

Now that a ceasefire is formally in place, both parties should exert every effort to observe it. This would give the negotiators, when they take over the peace talks, the confidence and goodwill to explore all possible avenues towards genuine and lasting peace.

Both sides should discard rigid and utterly unacceptable positions. As long as both the government and the MNLF are willing to give an take in an atmosphere of mutual respect, the promise for peace and harmony in Mindanao is within grasp.

MISUARI, INDEPENDENCE MOVEMENT LEADER COLLABORATE

[By Roy C. Sinfuego]

[Text] Zamboanga City -- Nur Misuari, chairman of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), and Reuben Canoy, chairman of the Mindanao Independence Movement (MIM), have entered into a secret agreement to join forces in pursuing the total independence of Mindanao, sources said yesterday.

The sources reported that Canoy attended the Bangsa Moro Congress held Sept. 3-4 in the hills outside Mainmbung, Sulu, upon the invitation of Misuari who contacted Canoy in Cagayan de Oro City through an MNLF commander from Lanao del Sur.

The congress culminated in a meeting between Misuari and President Aquino in Jolo on Sept. 5.

Before a cheering crowd of 10,000 Muslims, Misuari and Canoy embraced one another in an act symbolizing the unity of the people of Mindanao, the sources said.

In a speech, Canoy stressed that the people of Mindanao have always lived in peace and could very well solve their own problems.

He blamed the meddling of Manila politicians, power brokers, and big businessmen as the cause of the conflict and underdevelopment of the region.

"Not only the Muslims but the Christians who consider Mindanao as their homeland have been badly mistreated and discriminated against by the central government," Canoy was quoted as saying.

Like the Muslims, many Christians have lost their lands to alien and Filipino exploiters with powerful connections in Manila, he said.

The Bangsa Moro Congress was held to enable Misuari to secure a consensus on the question of limited autonomy or full independence for Mindanao.

The sources said that although some MNLF quarters favor autonomy, many appeared to be firm on the establishment of an independent state, a stand which Misuari has taken for the past 14 years.

To achieve this, Misuari will need the support of Christians who comprise about 78 percent of the island's population. Major opposition to an independent Mindanao comes mainly from Christians in areas claimed by the MNLF as part of Moro land.

American and multinational companies engaged in large-scale agriculture, forest, mineral, and other industrial activities also object to the idea for fear that an independent Mindanao would be dominated by Muslims and, eventually, by hostile Arab countries, particularly Libya.

With the reported MIM-MNLF tieup, observers believe the creation of the Republic of Mindanao is nearing to reality.

Canoy has repeatedly stressed that the MIM seeks Mindanao independence through peaceful means, including a United Nations supervised plebiscite. But thousands of Christians who have armed themselves for protection has reportedly joined the movement as volunteers.

MILITARY SAYS MUSLIMS SABOTAGED POWERLINE

[Text] The military said that armed Muslims protesting the cease-fire were responsible for the power line sabotage which caused a blackout in four provinces in Mindanao last Sunday. According to Lieutenant Colonel Anthony Arias, spokesman for the Southern Command, the armed Muslims committed the act to protest the government's recognition of the faction involved in the cease-fire negotiations as the leading representative of the Moro National Liberation Front. Colonel Arias said the bombing took place at Magsaysay, Lanao del Norte, which is where most of MNLF Leader Misuari's followers live.

'PROMINENT UNIDO LEADER' SHOT DEAD IN ISABELA

HK090319 Manila THE MANILA TIMES in English 5 Sep 86 p 16

[By Raymond Catindig]

[Text] Cauayan, Isabela -- A prominent Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization] leader was gunned down the other night in front of his wife and eight-year-old son by two unidentified assassins inside the victim's house along the Maharlika Highway here.

Killed was lawyer Ruben Banez, leader of the local Unido affiliated with the "Timek Ti Umili" party which Isabela Acting Governor Melanio Singson heads.

Banez died from gunshot wounds in different parts of his body. He was shot three times.

A helper, identified as Roger Esta, was also shot dead when he rushed to help Banez.

According to sketchy reports reaching the MANILA TIMES, the victim together with his wife and son were watching television when the armed men entered the house through the back door.

Once inside, the assailants herded all the helpers into the victim's law office.

Banez is the third in the family to fall to an assassin's bullet.

His brother, Samuel, also a lawyer, was gunned down in the 1940s while a cousin, Manuel Banez, also a lawyer, was shot dead in 1970.

Identity of the suspects and the motive behind the killing have not yet been established at press time yesterday.

However, police are looking into the theory that Banez was killed by an opponent in one of the cases the victim was handling before his killing.

ENRILE NOT TO ACCOMPANY AQUINO TO U.S.

HK090827 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 7 Sep 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Malacanang said yesterday that Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has declined the invitation of President Aquino to join her in her visit to the United States starting next week.

Enrile has expressed the wish to be left behind in Manila "to help mind the store," according to presidential spokesman Rene Saguisag, coordinator of the President's U.S. visit working committee.

Enrile had earlier been included among the government officials accompanying the President during her trip to the U.S. starting Sept 15.

Saguisag said Malacanang did not insist on having Enrile on board because the trip's main thrust is economic development.

Mrs Aquino's entourage includes Finance Minister Jaime Ongpin, Trade Minister Jose Concepcion, Central Bank Governor Jose Fernandez, NEDA [National Economic Development Authority] Director General Solita Monsod, and Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra Jr.

Saguisag said the President is taking a Philippine Airlines (PAL) commercial flight and this explains why her arrival in Washington, DC, will be in the evening of Sept 15.

Mrs Aquino will have a full schedule the following day, including meetings with the heads of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

She will meet U.S. President Ronald Reagan at 11:30 a.m. on Sept 17 and have lunch with him along with some of his top officials.

It will be the beginning of a non-stop tour and speaking engagements that will bring her to New York City, Boston, back to New York, and then San Francisco over the next seven days.

In all, Mrs Aquino will have 47 engagements during her nine day visit to the United States.

The engagements range from an address before a joint session of the U.S. Congress and the United Nations General Assembly to a walk through a Peace Corps anniversary meeting at a Washington, DC mall, and a question-and-answer session with fifth-grade pupils at a school in San Francisco.

Aquino 'Not Worried'

HK090537 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 9 Sep 86

[Text] President Corazon Aquino expressed belief that she still has the Filipino nation behind her and that she is not worried that Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile will grab power while she is visiting the United States next week. The president made the declaration in an interview with the ASSOCIATED PRESS. In the same interview, she also revealed that she has personally intervened in the cease-fire negotiations with communist emissaries in order to achieve an earlier cease-fire. The president is confident that the majority of the nation still supports her and she also knows that she is also popular in the United States.

ENRILE MAKES 'STRONGEST SPEECH' AGAINST CRITICS

[Text] The Philippine defense minister, Juan Ponce Enrile, has hinted that he might resign from the Aquino government because of disagreements about his counterinsurgency policy. He has said that President Aquino's officials were biased against the armed forces by not condemning communist abuses. Keith Dalton reports from Manila:

[Begin recording] Speaking to more than a thousand officers and men of the Philippine Army, Mr Enrile did what has been described here as the strongest speech so far against his criticis in government.

In the past few days, four members of the Aquino cabinet -- the ministers of justice, local government, political affairs, and agriculture -- have expressed concern that Mr Enrile's views on the propriety and handling of peace negotiations could jeopardize chances of a cease-fire. Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel went so far as to accuse Mr Enrile of sabotaging the talks and suggested that he should resign if he could not support President Aquino's peace initiatives.

Mr Enrile has been hitting back. In the past week, he has spoken to senior officers and men of the air force, the navy, and now the army. His latest speech, however, is his strongest. He said he is losing patience with certain unnamed government officials who he believes are allowing themselves to be used by the communists to discredit the military, to condemn abuses by the military but never abuses by the communists. Siding with the armed forces, he said, there is a limit to our patience. If they say they don't want us, we'll say we don't want them either. And he warned his government critics that if he lost his patience, he could be like Rambo, referring to the American film character that single-handedly fights communists. It was the closest Mr Enrile has come to announcing his disaffection with the government. He earlier warned that the communists were presenting tricky demands and could not be trusted, and he said the armed forces remain the only barrier to a communist takeover in the Philippines. [end recording]

'Gradually Losing His Patience'

HK090557 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 9 Sep 86

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said yesterday that he is gradually losing his patience and challenged his critics to come out and tell the people the true picture in the country. Enrile made the statement before officers and men of the Philippine Army in Fort Bonifacio. His speech concentrated on the counterinsurgency drive and the government-National Democratic Front cease-fire talks. Enrile said he is not concerned over the criticisms hurled at him by other members of the cabinet. According to him, it is the right of everyone to know the conditions demanded by the other side.

Lashes Out Against Communists

[By Bing Formento]

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday lashed anew at the communist movement even as he urged the military to be "always on guard" to forestall "intentions and plans of the local communists to take over the government."

"They (the communists) are trying to convince our people that their system of politics and government is the better alternative to our present system. But we know too well that is not ture," Enrile said in a speech during the turn-over of command at the Philippine Navy headquarters in Manila.

Rear Admiral Serafio Martillano was succeeded by Commodore Tagumpay Jardiniano.

"But whenever such a system of government and politics succeeds, the result was not prosperity and more freedom but rather misery and lack of freedom," Enrile said, adding "that is way I call your attention to this menace to our national life."

On this note, Enrile in his extemporaneous speech, asked the men and women in the military "to be on guard to perform their duties as guardians of the freedom of the Filipino people so that this country and its people shall remain free."

"I call on you to prepare for that eventuality, because we have repeatedly said in the past, and I am repeating it before you, that we are for peace and we will support the president and her government for peace. We are not willing to attain that peace to dishonor the republic, to sacrifice the interest of the Filipino people and let alone to cause dishonor to the soldiery of this land," Enrile said.

PARTIDO NG BAYAN DENIES FRONTING FOR COMMUNISTS

[By Ibarra C. Mateo]

[Text] "Stop witch-hunting and mouthing irresponsible statements. Face us in the electoral arena."

This was the reaction of the newly-formed Partido ng Bayan [People's Party] (PNB) to Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile's allegation that it is a political front of the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP].

Enrile can send all his intelligence agents to examine PNB "in and out" and find out if there is anything illegal, subversive or communistic in the party, Alan Jazmines, secretary general, said.

Jazmines categorically denied that PNB is a communist front, saying that it is clear in the party's programme that it is geared toward all forms of parliamentary struggles.

The PNB has nothing to do with violence and it has no links with the CPP or the New People's Army, Jazmines added.

He said it is a party of the masses and the middle class, not of the proletariat as the CPP is supposed to be.

"The formulation of the PNB assumes the existence and continuation of democratic space when President Aquino assumed the presidency. The PNB wants to pursue and even extend this democratic space as far as possible through the exercise of our democratic rights," Jazmines said.

He likewise vehemently denied Enrile's charge that it considers President Aquino a "villain," saying that on the contrary PNB appreciates the "progressive and liberal aspects" of the Aquino government.

"If political parties like the PNB will not be allowed to enter the parliamentary struggle arena, what would be left for the people?" Jazmaines asked.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile challenged Jose Ma. Sison and Bernabe "Dante" Buscayno Wednesday to publicly renounce their ties with the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm, the New People's Army.

Enrile issued the challenge at the testimonial dinner of the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity where he also announced that he will be joining President Corazon Aquino in her trip to the South for talks with exiled Moro National Liberation Front leader Nur Misuari. Enrile leaves today together with Mrs. Aquino aboard the presidential plane.

In the same occasion, Enrile said the newly formed Partido ng Bayan (PNB) of which Sison and Buscayno are among the leaders, is the new political front of the CPP/NPA.

COMMUNISTS REJECT GOVERNMENT CEASE-FIRE PROPOSAL

HK090551 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 9 Sep 86

[Text] Communist emissaries yesterday rejected the government's 30-day cease-fire proposal. At the same time, they accused Enrile of slanders against the rebel negotiators.

Meanwhile, the president said she is not afraid of Marcos returning on 11 Sep, when the former president celebrates his birthday. Aquino said that should Marcos return to the country while she is away, he will not be arrested but will instead have to face charges and he will be detained in a safe place where his enemies cannot get him.

COMMUNIST PARTY OFFERS COALITION AS SOLUTION

[By Ibarra C. Mateo]

[Text] The Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) cited yesterday two of what it called possible bases of political settlement in the ongoing peace negotiations between the Aquino government and the National Democratic Front (NDF).

These are, the CPP said, the resolution of the basic causes of the problems spawning social unrest and the possibility of establishing a coalition between the Aquino government and the revolutionary movement.

The CPP, however, did not spell out how these two measures could be undertaken. It said, however, the party and its military wing, the New People's Army (NPA), are upholding the position of the NDF that the revolutionary movement is joining the peace talks to bring in "bold relief" the political questions that underpin the armed struggle, and not the military questions [sentence as published].

The CPP said there is "a big possibility of tactical cooperation and alliance between the Aquino government and the revolutionary movement as the government is imperiled by the threat of diehard reactionaries in and out of the government" while it is implementing democratic reforms.

Any proposal on temporary cessation of hostilities can be meaningful only if anchored on the question of attaining a just peace through the resolution of basic social problems.

"We truly desire peace, but not the peace of slaves. We are sacrificing and struggling precisely because we and the Filipino people dearly desire genuine peace -- a peace that is free from oppression, from exploitation, and from injustice. The word peace will remain abstract for as long as these evils that push people to take up arms and to fight continue to exist," the CPP said.

The CPP also accused the Reagan government of "going through the motions" of supporting the negotiations, but only to serve its own "counter-revolutionary designs." It said that the Reagan government is trying to "optimize" the popularity of the Aquino government and its "political methods" to isolate and crush the CPP and the revolutionary movement which are, according to it, a threat to U.S. domination and to the ruling system.

It said that the posture of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] chief of staff, favoring a military solution to the insurgency problem is a "crucial obstacle" to the ceasefire negotiations.

The ceasefire negotiations is [as published] an "important political challenge to the correctness" of the armed struggle and its objectives that could result in major implications on the political situation and its future direction, the CPP said.

The ceasefire negotiations is [as published] an excellent opportunity to explain to the people the kind of peace that the revolutionary movement is fighting for and the peace that is being offered to it, the CPP said.

NDF LAWYERS CLARIFY ROLE IN PEACE TALKS

HK011228 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 31 Aug 86 pp 1, 13

[Text] The two lawyers named to provide legal assistance to the National Democratic Front (NDF) in the current peace negotiations said yesterday that they don't need safe conduct passes since they are not rebels and are "practising attorneys whose services have been professionally engaged."

Romeo Capulong and Arno Sanidad made this clarification in a letter to Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra Jr., government peace negotiator who said Friday that the NDF had asked for safe conduct passes for the two lawyers.

"What we sought was accreditation," said Capulong who described himself as a human rights lawyer and political activist.

Capulong said that he and Sanidad do not need safe conduct passes because these are only issued to those whom the government considers as operating or working outside of the prevailing legal system, "which we are not."

The government had earlier issued safe conduct passes for NDF negotiators Satur Ocampo, Antonio Zumel and Satur's wife, Carolina.

Capulong also took exception to Mitra's statement to the press when he said he was not sure whether the NDF lawyers are rebels or not.

He said Mitra should be more careful next time "because such statements jeopardize not only our personal safety but our lives as well."

Capulong also defended the decision of the NDF to seek legal assistance after Mitra had said that lawyers are not needed in resolving the question of war or peace.

"The government has all the facilities at its command to assist its panel in the negotiations while the NDF is severely hampered by the fact that it is an underground and proscribed organization," Capulong and Sanidad said.

"It is only fair and in keeping with the mutual desire of both parties for a smooth and expeditious peace process that the NDF be given the rights to engage the services of lawyers. You may deem it unnecessary to have your own lawyers because all three government negotiators are top caliber lawyers," the two added.

"In our view," Capulong and Sanidad said, "the lawyers' role in the peace talks, whether acting for the government or the NDF, is important because of the legal questions that will arise at every stage of the peace talks."

COLUMNIST PRINTS LETTER FROM COMMUNIST NEGOTIATOR

[Column by Jese Bigornia: "Tony Straightens 'Concoctions' on NDF Terms"]

[Text] Comments on the on-again, off-again peace talks with local communists that have appeared in this space have at last drawn a strong rejoinder from National Liberation [as received] Front (NDF) negotiator Antonio Zumel. In a very personal letter which could not, however, veil his impatience, "Tony," as colleagues in the newspapers used to call him fondly, protests against "misinformation and misconceptions" that have, in his view, "sneaked" into this column lately.

A recent item is perceived as making him and co-negotiator Satur Ocampo "seem so scheming and sinister" appears to have triggered a long held desire to write to explain the NDF's position in the on-going talks. In the interest of fair play on which he insisted as news editor of the then MANILA DAILY BULLETIN, this column reprints as much of "Tony's" letter as space allows, leaving out only personal references to past association:

"You say that we have served a 'virtual ultimatum' on the Aquino government. This is not so, and anybody who tells you otherwise is obviously pulling your leg. What we have submitted to the government is a set of proposals for security guarantees, immunities and related matters to ensure for the negotiators' freedom from harassment, arrest and prosecution while they go about their assigned tasks.

"You say that we are seeking belligerency status for the Communist Party and the New People's Army. In our limited dealings so far with the government negotiators, neither verbally nor in writing has this question arisen.

"You say that Satur and I want unhampered movement in the course of the negotiations. True, but what's wrong with that? When we finally surface, we'd like to be able to go to the National Press Club, pay a courtesy call at the BULLETIN, visit friends and relatives we'd not seen in 14 years, and perhaps see a movie or two. You certainly don't want any Armed Forces of the Philippines 'spooks' to be looking over our shoulders while you buy us a drink, do you?

"You say that Satur and I have 'reserved the right to conduct talks in such areas of the country they claim are communist territories.' Not true. What we did say is that there may be occasions in the future when, by mutual consent, we will have to continue our talks in an NDF area, i.e., in an NPA guerrilla base. Possible purposes cited are to conduct ocular inspections or to listen to the people in those areas. In such an event, it would be our responsibility to see to the negotiators' safety. Now, what is wrong with that? If the government guarantees our security while in Metro Manila, the least we can do is offer similar guarantees to its negotiators when they are in our areas. It's a matter of elementary reciprocal courtesy, don't you think?

"You say that one of the terms laid down by us 'is for the communist flag to fly opposite the Philippine Flag...' This is pure bovine ordure, if I may borrow a phrase favored by Larry Henares. This is the product of the inventive minds of Minister (of Defense Juan Ponce) Enrile and the AFP's [Armed Forces of the Philippines] so-called psywar experts who, in recent weeks, have likewise concocted such tall tales as the following: 1) that the supposed 'Special Operations Group' (non-existant) is vehemently against the peace talks; 2) that there is a CPP [Communist Party of the Philippines] or NDF armed city partisans are out to assassinate President Aquino and other ranking government officials. (Is it possible that the purveyors of this yarn themselves have such a scheme and later blame it on the NPA, as in the assassination of Ninoy?) The first time I read about the hammer-and-sickle flag, it was Mr. Enrile talking. It was such a transparent demagogic trick that we did not bother to deny it. But I am belying this tall tale now that you have seen fit to accord it with an aura of truth. What we wish to have is the NDF flag.

"You deplore the 'secrecy' surrounding our talks with the government negotiators, and demand that subjects of our conversatons be made public. You may have satisfaction sooner than you think -- if the government agrees. It is our position -- Satur's and mine -- that the negotiations affect the very lives of our country and people, and for this reason the talks should not be concealed from the public.

"Satur joins me in thanking you for your reference to the two of us as 'well liked gentlemen.'" It may sound immodest when I say this, but actually most of the men, women and children in the NDF and its member organizations are well liked by our people.

"Do extend my warmest regards to Pol (Apolonio Batalla), Ben (Rodriguez), Jun (Icban) and the rest of the staff and to the workers downstairs. Amang, too. I miss you all. I miss working in the BULLETIN."

SOUTH KOREAN FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES 10 SEP

OW100335 Tokyo KYODO in English 0332 GMT 10 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 10 KYODO -- South Korean Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su arrived here Wednesday for the first regular consultation with Japanese Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari. Choe and Kuranari will have two rounds of talks Wednesday afternoon, Japanese officials said. The Korean foreign minister will leave Japan for home Friday.

LDP TO CHANGE RULES FOR NAKASONE EXTENSION

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will gain the formal endorsement from the Liberal-Democratic Party Thursday to stay in power, LDP officials said Tuesday.

The ruling party will adopt the new rule which says the two-year tenure of an LDP president can be extended for up to one year if over two-thirds of all the LDP Diet members support it. There are currently 452 LDP Diet members -- 309 in the 512-seat lower house and 143 in the 252-seat upper house.

The new rule will provide Nakasone with the legal authority to remain prime minister beyond October 30 when his second two-year term of office as LDP president expires. The LDP presidency carries with it the post of prime minister under an LDP-controled Diet. The present rules limit the leadership tenure to four years in two consecutive terms.

Kanemaru on Nakasone Extension

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Vice Prime Minister Shin Kanemaru said in an interview with KYODO NEWS SERVICE Tuesday that Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will stay in power until next summer and denied that Nakasone's term is being extended for a full year.

In referring to news stories claiming that leaders of the five major factions of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party had agreed Saturday to extend Nakasone's tenure as party president for another year, Kanemaru said, "Nakasone need not serve a full year. The requests for fiscal 1988 budgetary appropriations (slated for next summer) should be made under a new party president and prime minister."

He went on to say, "The next ordinary Diet session will discuss a budget bill for fiscal 1987 until early April next year and other bills until May next year. There could also be an extension of the session. To extend Nakasone's term as party president for another year means that it is impossible to change prime minister during that time." Kanemaru thus expressed his understanding that the agreement allows Nakasone to stay in power until the end of the next ordinary Diet session.

Kanemaru also said that men in power -- even Ronald Reagan -- cannot escape becoming "lame ducks," countering Nakasone's expressed anxiety that he will be a "lame duck" because his term is limited to only one more year.

Nakasone's second and final two-year term of office was originally due to run out on October 30 under normal party rules. But following a landslide victory in the July 6 election of both houses of the Diet, Nakasone gained support from the party to extend his term.

NAKASONE VIEWS U.S.-USSR, DOMESTIC ISSUES

OW031131 Tokyo KYODO in English 0926 GMT 3 Sept 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 3 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Wednesday he sees a second U.S.-Soviet summit, expected later this year, hearalding a new dialogue rather than seeking a detente between the two superpowers. Nakasone said U.S. President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev "will sincerely move in the direction of nuclear disarmament." Nakasone made the remarks at an editorial seminar held at the Tokyo head office of KYODO NEWS SERVICE.

Analyzing the current global situation, the prime minister stressed that the superpowers now see that use of military force does not pay any more as proved in the cases of international terrorism, Afghanistan and Kampuchea.

However, Nakasone supported the research phase of Reagan's strategic defense initiative (SDI) known as the "star wars" space-based antimissile program, saying that it will contribute to scientific progress comparable to the Apollo program.

"In the face of a 'new industrial revolution,' Japan should proceed with internationalism, stressing expansion of its cultural influence with a touch of Japanese identity," Nakasone added.

Nakasone said the landslide victory of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) in the July 6 national elections was due to successful appeal of its policies to the public. "Of the 55 lower house seats the LDP increased from the previous general election in 1983 to get 304 seats this time, 45 came from those of No 1 opposition Japan Socialist Party and the middle-of-the-road Democratic Socialist Party."

The prime minister continued, "That means the LDP succeeded in winning a wide spectrum of support from the left wing. The LDP apparently succeeded in garnering about 40 percent of voters with no political commitment." Nakasone expresed his intention to further expand party strength by targeting voters in urban areas.

Referring to his political goal often labeled as "new nationalism" because of his policies stressing Japan's military buildup, Nakasone said, "It should rather be interpreted as 'new populism' targeted for the benefit of the people."

"While aiming at Japan becoming an international power with stress on traditional values and culture, the government will carry out administrative, educational and tax reforms," the prime minister said. Those remarks were seen by political analysts as meaning that he intends to stay in office for a long time beyond October when his current second two-year term as LDP leader expires. Asked about the proposed tax reform, Nakasone reiterated his government's position, saying it will announce a plan combining both tax increase and reduction in autumn.

NEW EDUCATION MINISTER HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Newly installed Education Minister Masajuro Shiokawa, commenting on the dismissal of his predecessor Masayuki Fujio Tuesday, said that the cabinet ministers must take responsibility for their remarks to the public. "Fujio was just stating his own opinion, which is acceptable for an individual," Shiokawa said, adding, "but a government representative, and a minister at that, has the responsibility to consider important factors such as international relations."

In his first press conference after receiving the portfolio Tuesday, 64-year-old Shiokawa took a stab at the powerful Japan Teachers Union (Nikkyoso), pointing out, "We'll have them under control someday." He stressed that it is important to instill in children respect for the "hinomaru" (rising sun) flag and the "kimigayo" (his majesty's reign) national anthem, also a pet theme of Fujio, who was fired Monday by Prime Minister Yasuhire Nakasone.

Shiokawa, a member of the Education Advisory Committee, also agreed with Fujio on the issue of discipline for children. "More discipline as a whole is necessary in everyday life," he said, adding, "I'm not saying it's a social problem but it should be taught to a degree in school and everyone should make efforts to solve the problem."

Prior to the press meeting, Shiokawa and Fujio took part in a ceremony at the Education Ministry held to mark the end of one era and the start of another. Fujio told ministry officials that while his 49 days in office represent a "very short period," he had attempted to establish what he believed were the basics of education -- the nurturing of patriotic and international Japanese citizens. Although he admitted that his controversial remarks concerning Japan's role in Asian history may have created "wounds," Fujio maintained he had made "no mistakes."

Fujio's dismissal followed a protest by South Korea Monday over the minister's remarks in an interview with the monthly BUNGEI SHUNJU, to be published Wednesday, claiming that Japan's 1910 annexation of Korea had been agreed upon by both nations and was therefore "justified." When South Korea announced the same day that the first regular foreign ministerial meeting, scheduled to open in Tokyo Wednesday, would be postponed, leading members of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) called on Fujio to resign and thereby solve the diplomatic row. Fujio, however, refused, maintaining that he had not erred in his remarks concerning Japan's colonization of Korea. Nakasone summoned Fujio late Monday and stripped him of his portfolio, making Fujio the third cabinet minister in postwar times to have been dismissed.

The outspoken Fujio also aroused the indignation of China and South Korea shortly after taking up his post July 22 when he indicated that those countries which complain about Japan's approval of a conservative history textbook were guilty of acts of invasion themselves at some time in history.

OPPOSITION PARTIES DENOUNCE SDI DECISION

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 9 KYODO -- Opposition parties denounced the government Tuesday for its decision to participate in the research phase of the U.S. strategic defense initiative (SDI) program. The Japan Socialist Party said it opposes Japan's participation in SDI, which it said will breach not only a 1969 Diet resolution on the peaceful use of space but also the war-renouncing provisions of the constitution. The top opposition party demanded that the government retract the decision.

Komeito said there are fears that the SDI program, to develop a space-based antimissile system, will put nuclear weapons in space and criticized the government decision for contravening Japan's long-established peace principles. The Japan Communist Party also blasted the decision, which it said was designed to extend the U.S. nuclear arms into space. It demanded that the government retract the decision.

The government announcement also brought mixed reactions from Japanese scientists and researchers. A group of physicists is staging a signature-collecting campaign against the SDI program, while some scientists and researchers regard the prospect of SDI research as an opportunity to work on technical innovations.

NAKASONE, NAKAYAMA ON MICRONESIA INDEPENDENCE

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 8 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Monday met Tosiwo Nakayama, president of the Federated States of Micronesia to exchange views on the territory's future, Japanese officials said. The Japanese-descended president of the United States Pacific Trust Territory told Nakasone that the Federated States wish to gain their independence, while still keeping security ties with the U.S. and asked Nakasone for Japan's support to put an end to the U.S. trusteeship over the territory.

Nakasone congratulated Nakayama for the territory's preparation in becoming a liberal federation. "We would like to promote our economic and cultural cooperation," Nakasone was quoted as saying.

Nakayama is in Japan from September 3 to 12 primarily to attend the "Kumamoto green summit," an environmental conference by researchers and officials scheduled in Kumamoto in Kyushu between Wednesday and Friday.

DIET OPENS 11 SEP; NAKASONE TO SPEAK 12 SEP

OW101115 Tokyo KYODO in English 1053 GMT 10 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 10 KYODO -- Both houses of the Diet (parliament) will convene Thursday [11 September] for an extra session to discuss government-prepared bills for privatization of Japanese National Railways (JNR), Japan's decision to participate in research on the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, a supplementary budget and other items.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone calls the JNR bills the "most critical point" of an administrative reform program the government has been pushing for years. The government plans to submit eight bills aimed at dividing and denationalizing the money-losing nationwide railway system next April.

The socialists and communists say they will oppose the bills in the first full debate in the Diet since the July 6 national election in which the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) increased its seats in the 512-member House of Representatives to an historic 304 from 250 before the elections. The LDP has later increased its lower house seats to 308.

The 107th Extraodinary Diet Session will open in a ceremony to be held in the House of Councillors, the upper house, in the presence of Emperor Hirohito at 2 p.m. Thursday. The session will last 80 days until November 29, according to Diet sources.

Japan's decision to take part in research for U.S. President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), a space-based antimissile program commonly known as the "star wars" project, will be another major topic of discussion in the Diet session. The decision, made Tuesday, has opened the way for Japanese Government agencies and private corporations to take part in the research phase of the program. Opposition parties object to Japan's participation.

Discussion is also expected to center on a tax reform and supplementary budget the government plans to draw up in October to stimulate the domestic economy.

Nakasone will deliver a major policy speech in a plenary session of the two houses Friday afternoon [12 September]. It will be followed by three days of question and answer sessions beginning next Tuesday, the sources said.

Kim Hwan Speaks

SK080820 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0850 GMT 6 Sep 86

[Speech by Kim Hwan, member of the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee, secretary of the party Central Committee, and head of the DPRK delegation to the Pyongyang international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula, delivered at the conference's 1st-day morning session in Pyongyang on 6 September -- recorded]

[Text] Respected delegates, comrades, and friends: Our Pyongyang conference is being held amid the great interest and expectation of the progressive forces and peace-loving peoples of the world. Living in peace is the unanimous aspiration of mankind. As master of the world and master of his destiny, man wants to live independently and creatively. At the same time, men want to live by loving and cooperating with one another. Peace is the noblest and most beautiful idea, which agrees with man's social nature and is a fundamental requirement for true friendship and cooperation between peoples and for guaranteeing the prosperity of countries and nations.

The reactionary ruling class of the past and present [yoktae], which has survived by exploiting and (?oppressing) the working masses, considered violence the main asset for living and war an essential means of existence for the state. Thus, it has ceaselessly sought aggression and war and imposed indescribably great agonies and misfortunes on mankind. Nonetheless, today the imperialists are scheming to ignite a war very much greater than all the wars ignited by the reationary forces of the past and present [yoktae] and to impose on mankind a disaster incomparably greater than the damage done by all wars up to now.

Mankind can never allow this. Today, mankind is ushering in a period of great change in which the history of exploitation and oppression of man by man and the history of domination and oppression of nation by nation are ending and the new history of independence, friendship, and peace is opening. The progressive people of the world have unyieldingly overcome the mounting difficulties and trials for a long period. By so doing, they have made great material and cultural progress. If mankind uses all this material strength and all these scientific and technological assets, which have been attained by noble blood and sweat, in a peaceful way, in the not too distant future a new world, in which all people will live independent and create lives according to their characters, will be built. There will be no doubt concerning this.

For we who live during such a historic turn in which the bright prospect of mankind's ceaseless development is clearly seen, the most precious thing is peace and the most important task is to struggle unyieldingly to oppose war and defend peace.

Today, mankind's sacred cause of peace is facing an outrageous challenge. The current of our era is certainly flowing along the course of independence, peace, and progress. On the other hand, however, the imperialist force, which seeks aggression and war, is gravely threatening peace. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Today, the international situation is very complicated and tense. The imperialists' maneuvers of aggression and war are being intensified with every passing day and the danger of a new world war, the danger of a thermonuclear war, is growing increasingly.

At present, the imperialists, who are suffering serious political and economic crises internally and externally, are intensifying their exploitation of the developing countries and trying to find a way out through militarizing the economy and through arms expansion. Thus, they are moving forward along the road of aggravating international tension to the extreme. In particular, the U.S. imperialists, with a wicked ambition to gain supremacy [che-ap] over socialist countries and progressive countries by strength and realize domination and control over the world, are drastically expanding their armaments and accelerating the production and deployment of nuclear weapons and other mass-destruction weapons. They are undisguisedly seeking aggressive war provocation maneuvers everywhere in the world. Because of this, the sovereignties of many countries are being fringed upon, peace and security are being disturbed, and the danger of war is growing in many areas such as Asia, Europe, the Middle East, Central America, and southern Africa.

Though a new historic era has come as the masses of people have emerged as masters on the stage of history and are pioneering their destinies idependently and creatively, the wicked ambition of the imperialists, -- who have not abandoned their animal-like nature of the law of the jungle and their scheme to invade other countries and dominate the world by the force of arms, -- is, it is true, indeed shameless and criminal and completely anachronistic.

However, as history shows, in all eras the aggressors have ignited war not because they could win. Today, the adventurous war provocation maneuvers of the imperialists, the reactionaries of history, whose day is over, will inevitably bring about a world thermonuclear war, even if this accelerates the ruin of the provokers. There is no doubt that this will impose an irretrievably destructive catastrophe on mankind.

Today, defending peace is a very serious question in defending mankind's civilization and its existence, and defending world peace and security is the most important and urgent task in the history of mankind facing the peoples of all countries in our era.

Respected delegates, comrades, and friends, opposing aggression and war and struggling for peace and security are a firm policy of the WPK. The Korean people love peace the most. It is natural that the Korean people, who suffered the disasters of the war imposed by the imperialists and who have built modern urban and rural villages over the ravages of war by being self-reliant and waging arduous struggle, oppose war and demand peace. Our people's urgent desire for peace has been fully displayed by the basic idea of the WPK's peace-loving foreign policy.

The basic ideal -- independence, friendship, peace -- consistently pursued by our party in external activities reflects its firm will to guarantee durable world peace and security by struggling against the imperialists' maneuvers to provoke a war. Despite the positive effort of the people of the world and the Korean people to prevent war and protect peace, the situation on the Korean peninsula has become much more acute with the passage of time. This is a dangerous factor extremely endangering peace and security in Asia and the world.

Dreaming of world conquest and recently coming up with a policy of attaching importance to Asia and the Pacific, the U.S. imperialists have attached greater strategic significance to the Korean peninsula, which is directly linked to the Asian Continent and which is close to Japan. While accelerating the work of concocting a tripartite military alliance between the United States, Japan, and South Korea in accordance with an aggressive Asian strategy, they have brazenly designated the Korean peninsula as the first frontline in the U.S. strategy.

Harboring a wild desire to invade the northern half of our republic by using South Korea as a forward stronghold and to militarily control all of Northeast Asia, they have deployed various sophisticated military means in South Korea in a full-fledged manner and have continuously staged large-scale war exercises to complete preparations for a nuclear war in South Korea and in areas surrounding it. As a result, South Korea has been turned into a most dangerous powderkeg of a nuclear war and into the forward base of a nuclear war for the United States, and the Korean peninsula has been in constant danger to the effect that a war could be touched off there at any moment. This is a grave threat to not only the Korean people but also the peace-loving people of Asia and the world.

Preventing war in Korea and achieving peace and peaceful reunification pose a vital question related to the destiny of the Korean people and also constitute part of the common cause of the people of the world for peace and social progress. Peace in Korea poses an urgent question for world peace. Peace in Korea is a prerequisite to achieving Korea's peaceful reunification. Peace in Korea is an important guarantee for eliminating the source of war on the Korean peninsula and achieving durable peace in Korea, Asia, and the world.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The continuous division of Korea is a constant danger to peace in Asia and the world. In order to meet the basic interests of the Korean people and achieve durable peace in Asia and the world, Korea should not be divided. Korea should instead be reunified.

Proceeding from a sense of great responsibility for the fatherland and the people and from a noble sense of duty for the cause of world peace, our party has exerted every possible effort to achieve peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea. Reunification policies set forth by our party, including the 3-point principle of the fatherland's reunification and the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Korea, correctly reflect the just stand of the WPK and the Korean people.

In recent years, we have advanced many peaceful proposals for preventing a nuclear war in Korea, for achieving durable peace, and for peacefully resolving the Korean question -- including proposals for holding tripartite talks between us, the United States, and South Korea; proposals for replacing the Korean Armistice Agreement with a peace agreement; and proposals for adopting a declaration of nonaggression between the North and South. We have exerted a positive effort to implement these proposals. In addition, we recently advanced a proposal to hold talks between those in military authority from us, the United States, and South Korea in order to discuss urgent questions arising, for the time being, in alleviating military tension on the Korean peninsula. Our proposals proceed from a historic lesson that without meeting our party's consistent stand for valuing peace and without taking a practical step to ease tension, we cannot guarantee peace on the Korean peninsula, nor can we improve relations between the North and South.

In particular, proceeding from a sincere desire to preserve durable peace on the Korean peninsula, Asia, and the world, the DPRK government on 23 June advanced a new and important proposal to establish a nuclear-free zone of peace on the Korean peninsula. If a nuclear-free zone of peace is established on the Korean peninsula as demanded by our proposal because of positive support from the peace-loving people of the world and through the joint struggle of our people and the progressive people of the world, one of the most dangerous sources of nuclear war in the world will be eliminated, and accordingly, great progress will be made in preserving peace and security in Asia and the world and in saving mankind from the danger of a nuclear war.

However, babbling about the threat of southward invasion, the United States and South Korean authorities have accepted none of our repeated rational and peaceful proposals. Instead, they have willfully and further heightened tension on the Korean peninsula. As for the threat of southward invasion, it cannot exist and is unimaginable in light of the 3-point principle of the fatherland's reunification -- independence, peaceful reunification, and grant national unity -- firmly abided by our part and in light of the military capabilities of the North and South.

What actually exists on the Korean peninsula is not the threat of southward invasion but the threat of northward invasion. That the struggle of students and the people has been staged vigorously in South Korea to demand the withdrawal of U.S. forces and U.S. nuclear bases proves that the South Korean people do not acknowledge a threat from the North and, moreover, achknowledge that the threat which actually exists on the Korean peninsula is the threat from the U.S. occupation of South Korea and from its war maneuvers, especially maneuvers for a nuclear war.

The U.S. act of clamorously babbling about the nonexistent threat of southward invasion is a deceitful trick to excuse its continued use of South Korea as an aggressive military bridgehead and an offensive nuclear base. If the United States had desired to oppose our republic alone, it would not have needed to deploy in South Korea a large number of nuclear weapons, which have very great explosive power and long firing ranges.

U.S. maneuvers to concoct two Koreas today by offering military and economic aid to South Korea and through the international Olympics are eventually aimed at maintaining the shaky colonial puppet ruling system in South Korea, at justifying the U.S. occupation of South Korea, and at holding on to South Korea forever as an aggressive base in Asia.

The basic cause of the failure to resolve the Korean question and of the existence of the constant danger of war on the Korean peninsula are the occupation of South Korea by U.S. forces and the U.S. policy of division and war against Korea. The United States has no ground or excuse whatsoever for deploying its aggressive forces in South Korea. In order to guarantee durable peace on the Korean peninsula and to achieve the peaceful reunification of Korea, the United States should accept our peaceful proposals, withdraw its war means, including its aggressive forces and nuclear weapons from South Korea, and should take its interfering hands off Korea.

The Korean people, who are confronting vast and very dangerous war forces, are shouldering a heavy burden to protect peace. Because of this, our people have been greatly hampered in socialist construction. However, our party and people consider the struggle to protect peace in Korea as an important national mission assigned to them and as a noble duty of internationalism designed to guarantee world peace and mankind's security.

The maintenance of peace on the Korean peninsula under circumstances in which military confrontation has continued between the North and South in a strained manner and in which the enemy's maneuvers to provoke a new war have become much more brazen with the passage of time is entirely the product of our party's stand for loving peace and of our people's patient effort to preserve world peace.

No matter what may occur, the Korean people will never allow a new war, a thermonuclear war, to be touched off in Korea and will positively aid the cause of peace in Asia and around the world by exerting every possible effort to achieve peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea. [applause]

Comrades and friends, the progressive people of the world are at the important crossroad at which they should determine whether to allow the imperialist to misuse the treasures mankind has amassed over a long period of time for the criminal aim of annihilating men or to build a free and peaceful world by using these treasures as assets.

The struggle to protect peace is not merely designed to prevent war. This struggle is a great political movement to save mankind and civilization from nuclear disaster, with which the imperialists have threatened us, and to build a new world in which the people of all countries work equally and lead equally happy lives under free circumstances. Opposing war and protecting peace are not only the work of humanitarians and those who advocate peace, but also a sacred cause that the people of all countries around the world who are concerned about the the destiny of mankind should jointly achieve.

Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee and secretary of the party Central Committee, has pointed out: The most important tasks before the progressive people of the world are to check and thwart the maneuvers of the imperialists for aggression and war and to protect world peace and security.

Although the danger of war is great today, war is by no means unavoidable. The peace-loving forces of the world are superior to the imperialist war forces. Whether we can prevent a thermonuclear war, a new war, and protect world peace and mankind's security entirely depends on how successfully the people of the world struggle. It is important in the struggle to prevent war and protect peace that we help the broader strata of the people of the world join the movement to protect peace and further expand and strengthen the antiwar and peace-protecting forces on a global scale.

Like all other social and historic movements, the masters of the peace-protecting movement are the masses of the people in all countries. Although concrete problems, which individual countries should resolve, may differ from one another, the people have a common interest in their desire to live as the masters of the world and their own destinies, free from all manner of domination and control, as far as peace is concerned.

Although men act as directed by their demands and interests, the practical demand raised by them depends on their level of ideological consciousness toward independence. Only when the masses of the people -- the party in charge of all political movements -- are guided by a correct ideology can they become an organized and powerful force.

When we view the issue on a global scale, the work of laying an ideological foundation lags behind the work of laying a material foundation in meeting the people's demand for independence. Because of this, we have failed to completely eliminate the phenomenon in which men exploit men and in which one people dominates another people. Because of this, the earth's sources of aggression and war remain and we have failed to prevent the misuse of scientific and technical treasures, the product of modern civilization, for the criminal aim of destruction and holocaust.

Arming the masses of the people with an advanced ideology that reflects the basic demand and common interest of the people and leading them are a prerequisite for the ideological and organizational nature of the peace-protecting movement and for increasing the influence of this movement in various ways. This is a reliable guarantee for much more extensively expanding and developing the peace-protecting movement on a world-wide scale.

It is important above all in this regard to concentrate on arming the masses of the people with a self-reliant ideology so they can meet their demand for independence and their interest as the masters of the world and of their own destiny and vigorously rise in the struggle to make the world independent.

The progressive political parties and organizations, which take responsibility for the destiny of the people, should take the initiative in this work. Thus, they should raise their voices to oppose aggression, plunder, and domination raised further in all countries, and a larger number of circles in all countries should positively join the antiwar and peace-protecting movement. They should also help the people in the United States extensively rise against the policy of their government for aggression and war.

What is also important in the struggle to prevent war and defend peace is to vigorously wage a practical struggle to establish a practical international order to check and thwart the imperialists' nuclear war provocation maneuvers and guarantee peace. Mankind's cause of peace can be achieved only through an unyielding and active struggle of all the people of the world. Above all, the peace-loving people of the world, with their united strength, should expose and denounce the imperialists' nuclear arms buildup maneuvers, should check the nuclear arms race, and should deal firm blows to the imperialists' nuclear war maneuvers everywhere.

As long as nuclear weapons exist, the danger of nuclear war cannot be eliminated and mankind cannot be freed from the continuing nuclear danger. Therefore, struggle should be vigorously waged to freeze the existing nuclear armories, oppose the militarization of space, and abolish nuclear weapons completely.

What is important in the antiwar and antinuclear struggle is to establish nuclear-free zones and peace zones in many areas of the world and expand them. The struggle to establish nuclear-free zones and peace zones is a powerful peace-loving movement to eliminate the practicality of nuclear war and its danger and guaratnee world peace and mankind's security by not allowing the testing, production, stockpiling, and use of nuclear weapons and by not allowing nuclear bases or military bases in foreign countries or the introduction, deployment, and transport of nuclear weapons and their delivery vehicles. Today, this struggle encompasses hundreds of millions of people in those vast areas of the world from Northeast Asia, where the danger of nuclear war is growing, to Central and Western Europe, from North Europe and the Balkan peninsula to the Indian Ocean, the South Pacific, and Latin America. At the same time, with each passing day, governments, political parties, and people of more countries put forth good initiatives to establish nuclear-free, chemical-free, and peace zones and struggle for their implementation. The nonaligned summit and the U.N. General Assembly and many other international meetings have also adopted just resolutions reflecting the people's aspiration.

When nuclear-free zones and peace zones are established everywhere around the world and are expanded continuously, the danger of nuclear war can be prevented and, ultimately, all nuclear weapons can be completely liquidated. To alleviate international tension and prevent the danger of thermonuclear war, along with the people's powerful antiwar and antinuclear struggle, states and governments responsible for the destinies of their countries and nations should responsibly take practical measures to this end.

Following the Soviet-U.S. summit in Geneva in November of last year, the people of the world expected that the principled agreement reached at the summit would affirmatively function in preventing nuclear war and defending world peace, and hoped that the agreement would be put into practice at an early date. Nearly a year has passed since then. However, no progress has been made for the agreement reached at the Soviet-U.S. summit and, in the international community, the two lines of detente and confrontation still tensely confront one another.

Following the Geneva talks, during this year alone the Soviet Union has put forth the proposal to completely liquidate nuclear weapons throughout the world and, along with the Warsaw member nations, has put forth an initiative to drastically reduce troops and conventional weapons in Europe from the Atlantic to Urals and to make this region free from nuclear weapons. At the same time, it put forth proposals to oppose the arms buildup, the nuclear arms buildup in particular, in Asia and the Pacific region and guarantee peace and security in this area. In addition, it has recently made public a decision to again extend the priod of the general nuclear test freeze, which has been in force since August of last year, to 1 January 1987.

From the beginning of its first nuclear test, the PRC has declared that it would never use nuclear weapons before others. It is invariably demanding the reduction of nuclear weapons and their complete liquidation.

The leaders of India, Tanzania, Argentina, Mexico, Greece, Sweden -- countries from four continents -- held a meeting in (?Ixtepec), Mexico some time ago and issued a declaration proposing a halt to all nuclear tests as the first measure for the liquidation of nuclear weapons.

All these are expressions of a sincere desire for peace and security and are affirmative measures which can practically contribute to preventing the danger of a new world war thermonuclear war, preserving world peace, and improving overall international relations.

Our people and the progressive people of the world highly assess and actively support and welcome the efforts the socialist countries and all other peace-loving countries exert to alleviate international tension and prevent thermonuclear war by putting forth many national and constructive peace-loving proposals and initiatives. [applause]

Nonetheless, the United States ignores the sincere efforts of the peace-loving countries and the unanimous will of progressive mankind and, behind the scenes of dialogue and peace, destroys international stability and more undisguisedly seeks the lien of confrontation to secure general U.S. military superiority. It openly continues nuclear testing and persistently tries to realize the adventurous star wars plan. Instead of raving about detente and international stability, the imperialists must accept the peace-loving countries' just peace proposals and, by responding to the demand of the era, must not commit an anachronistic act to settle world questions by strength.

One of the urgent questions in preventing war and defending world peace is to destroy the old international economic order established by the imperialists and establish a fair new international economic order. [applause]

Today, the major cause of the complicated international situation and the growing aggressive war provocation maneuvers is the reactionary policy of the imperialists, who are trying to extricate themselves from their serious economic crisis by plundering the people of other countries, the developing countries in particular. Since World War II, the major imperialist powers have newly colluded with one another, with U.S. monopoly capital at the center of these moves. Over the past 40 years they have collectively plundered the developing countries in a neo-colonial way and through the old international economic order. As a result, the major imperialist powers have become even richer and have hoarded tremendous wealth. On the other hand, the developing countries have become even poorer and have come to suffer enormous foreign debts. Their purchasing power and solvency are dwindling with each passing day. The developing countries are now unable to pay their debts to the major international capitalist powers and are even unable to serve as markets for their goods.

Meanwhile, international capitalism now has no more markets into which to expand, unless they find them on other planets. This is precisely the basic cause of the imperialists' present economic crisis.

The imperialists are trying to find a way out from this crisis by militarizing their economies and in the aggravation of international tension. However, this will further foment the chronic disease of capitalism, increasing commodity prices, worsening inflation, and augmenting unemployment.

To free themselves from their prolonged and serious economic crisis, the major imperialist powers must stop plundering the developing countries, which they seek to do based on their neo-colonial policies and the old international economic order, and must realize South-North cooperation through a new international economic order, contributing to realizing the self-reliant development of the national economies of those countries.

Only when a fair new international economic order is established and when the economies of the developing countries develop will the imperialist countries be able to solve their problems of raw materials, fuel, and markets, free themselves from the current economic crisis, continue to develop their economies, and survive without war.

To oppose aggression and war and defend world peace and security, all progressive forces and the peace-loving people of the world should firmly unite and strengthen international solidarity.

There are powerful progressive forces on earth today opposing war and advocating peace, including socialist forces, the Nonaligned Movement, national liberation forces, and the democratic movement. With each passing day, people from an increasing number of countries are joining the antiwar movement for peace, closely combining the fate of themselves, their country, and their nation with peace. The peace movement of all countries and all nations based on common interests are connected with each other to form a great international political force.

The might of the world's anti-imperialist forces for peace consist of unity and cooperation. The world's peace-loving forces should be united, cooperate with each other, and strengthen solidarity so they can carry out their noble mission and duty for the times and for mankind. In particular, today when the reactionary imperialist forces are in close collusion with each other, collectively challenging the cause of world peace, cunningly maneuvering to fish in troubled waters by creating hostility and dissension in many places of the world and making peoples of other countries fight with each other, strengthening unity, cooperation, and solidarity is more important than ever before. All the world's progressive forces and peace-loving people, above all, should firmly unite under the antiwar banner for peace, jointly resist the imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and war, form a broad united front, and inflict a collective counterattack on the imperialists everywhere where the evil hand of aggression is extended.

At the same time, all the peace-loving countries, progressive political parties, organizations, and figures should strengthen the cooperative ties among themselves, actively maintain mutual relations and contacts, and further strengthen and develop joint actions and solidarity in the international arena in the struggle to defend world peace and security. Thus, if the peoples of all countries join their efforts and make an offensive and if the peace-loving countries and the progressive forces step up their joint struggle, they can tie the imperialist aggressors' hands and feet in knots, prevent them from running wild recklessly, and check and frustrate their frenzied arms buildup and war provocation maneuvers.

At present, actively supporting the struggle of the peoples of all countries to oppose imperialism, colonialism, and racism and to realize completion of the national liberation cause and independent development is a noble work to eliminate the principle source of the threat of war and to make international progress. It is also an essential part of the international joint struggle for world peace and security.

In an attempt to sustain their crumbling last colonial system and to expand the accumulation of wealth by the monopolistic military suppliers, the imperialists are suppressing the people's liberation cause by force of arms. Actively defending their puppets and cat's-paws, such as the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique of South Korea, the South African racists, and the Israeli Zionists, the imperialists are driving them to suppression of their people, subversion and destructive activities, and military invasion.

It is far from tolerable for those of us who are in the era of independence to allow the vestiges of imperialism and colonialism to remain on earth and to allow the colonial puppets and the racists to run wild as they please. All the progressive forces of the world should vigorously support the oppressed people's struggle for national liberation and self-determination and should send active support and solidarity to the Asian, African, and Latin American peoples' struggle to oppose the imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and interference and to realize independence and build a new society. [applause]

Our party and people actively support the struggle of the people of Namibia, South Africa, and the frontline countries to oppose imperialism, colonialism, and racism, and to realize freedom, independence, sovereignty, territorial stability, and the complete liberation of Africa, and express firm support for the struggle of the Palestinian and Arab peoples to oppose imperialism and Zionism, to regain the occupied Arab land, to restore the Palestinian people's legitimate and national rights, and to defend the country's sovereignty. [applause]

We also highly value the fraternal Cuban people, who are actively endeavoring, holding up the banner of anti-imperialist struggle at the head of the progressive Latin American forces, to defeat the U.S. imperialists' violent maneuvers for aggression and interference, to realize the Latin American people's freedom, liberation, and progress, and to realize peace and security in the Caribbean and Central American region. We send firm solidarity to the struggle of all the Latin American peoples, including the Nicaraguan people who are struggling to solidify national independence and to preserve sovereignty and the Salvadoran people who are struggling for freedom and liberation. [applause]

The anti-U.S. struggle for independence, the antifascist struggle for democratization, and the antinuclear struggle for peace being vigorously waged in South Korea -- which is the most dangerous place in which a nuclear war can be started and which is the U.S. imperialists' colony and military base -- are an important matter to which the world's progressive people ought to pay attention. The anti-U.S. antidictatorship, and antiwar struggle of the students and people under the slogan of independence, democracy, and reunification, which is continuously taking place all over South Korea, is a just struggle reflecting their consistent aspiration and will to end the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule, to regain national dignity and sovereignty, and to ensure solid peace in Korea.

The South Korean people's struggle is not only in conformity with the aspiration of the world people desiring peace and social progress, but is a serious blow to the U.S. imperialists' policy of turning South Korea into a military base and their maneuvers to provoke nuclear war.

Therefore, the world's progressive forces and peace-loving people are supporting it, highly valuing the South Korean people's struggle as contributing to the cause of peace of Asia and the world. I take this opportunity to express my deep gratitude to the parties, governments, peoples of many countries of the world and the international organizations and figures of various circles for their support and solidarity with all the Korean people's struggle. [applause]

Today's tense situation in which mankind's survival itself is threatened requires that anyone who truly values independence and loves justice -- regardless of differences in country, nation, political view, and religion -- must vigorously join mankind's crusade, wherever he is and whatever he does, to oppose aggression and war and to defend world peace and security. Mankind's aspiration for peace cannot be curbed by any force. It is inevitable that the cause of peace of progressive mankind will be victorious as the unalterable and inevitable result of history.

Let us all wage a vigorous struggle for the victory of the cause of world peace and firm unity under the banner of the antiwar and antinuclear struggle for peace. [applause]

Kim Il-song Speaks 7 Sep

SK091158 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1200 GMT 7 Sep 86

[Speech by Kim Il-song, general secretary of the WPK Central Committee and DPRK president, at a banquet for Dr Bruno Kreisky, honorary president of the Socialist Party of Austria, vice president of the Socialist International, and former Austrian chancellor, in the Kumsusan Assembly Hall, Pyongyang on 7 September -- read by announcer]

[Text] Respected Dr Bruno Kreisky and Austrian guests: We are very glad to significantly meet with respected Dr Bruno Kreisky, honorary president of the Socialist Party of Austria and vice president of the Socialist International.

Mr Bruno Kreisky has visited our country by making a long journey to the Far East. This is his expression of deep trust in and feelings of intimacy with us. We are greatly moved by this. Expressing noble respect for Mr Bruno Kreisky, who has visited us, willingly traveling a long way, I heartily welcome your visit to our country. I am glad to make friends and cultivate relations of intimacy with Mr Bruno Kreisky, a long-time antifascist fighter and renowned social and policital activist who has carried out positive activies to achieve freedom, democracy, peace, and social justice.

Although Korea and Austria are geographically far apart, the WPK and the Socialist Party of Austria have been linked together with ties of friendship because of their common aspiration for independence. Independence is the basic sign of an independent country and the lifeline of a country and people. By exercising sovereignty a country can protect the dignity and honor of its people and achieve the prosperity and development of the country to meet the desire of the people. If all countries and all peoples oppose all forms of domination and control and if they achieve independence, they can build an independent and peaceful new world free from aggression and war. By assuming a practical stand for resolving all questions to suit the trend of the present era for following the course of indpendence, Mr Bruno Kreisky has extensively won support from the Austrian people and sympathy from international social circles.

Assuming heavy responsibility for a long time as president of the Socialist Party of Austria and as chancellor of the Republic of Austria, you have carried out energetic activities to build a democratic and progressive society in which social equality, freedom, and economic stability is guaranteed. Under complicated circumstances in Western Europe, the Socialist Party of Austria and the Austrian Government have carried out a policy of permanent neutrality and have exerted efforts to guarantee world peace and security.

It is the consistent stand of our party to abide by the principle of independence. Always considering protecting independence as the most basic question in state politics, our party has uniquely formulated all foreign and domestic policies to meet the situation in our country and the interest of our people and has implemented these policies through the independent effort of our people.

The most important question looming before our party today in completely achieving the sovereignty of the people is to end the division of the country and achieve the fatherland's reunification. Division is the way toward subjugation and national ruin. Reunification alone is the way toward independence and prosperity.

Considering the practical condition in which difference ideologies and systems exist in the North and South of our country, our party is struggling to peacefully achieve the country's reunification by founding a completely independent, nonaligned, and neutral confederal republic, which will not be the satellite state of any country and will not rely on any foreign forces. Alleviating tension in Korea, guaranteeing peace there, and peacefully achieving the country's reunification are an important key to easing international tension and to achieving the cause of world peace.

Through their historical experience and proceeding from noble feelings of justice, the friends of the Socialist Party of Austria have expressed feelings of understanding of and sympathy with our people's cause for opposing war and division and for achieving peace and reunification. We are proud to have such an excellent friend as you in Europe.

Eliminating the dange of nuclear war and protecting peace are the solemn task of the present era and the unanimous desire of mankind. All the peace-loving people should unit and struggle to check the arms race, abolish nuclear weapons, and establish and continuously expand the nuclear-free zones of peace in various areas in the world.

Mr Bruno Kreisky has greatly contributed to developing relations between Korea and Austria. Your visit to our country this time will open the new stage of successfully developing friendship between the people of our two countries. Availing myself of this opportunity, which is overflowing with feelings of harmony, I propose a toast to friendship between the WPK and the Socialist Party of Austria and between the Korean and the Austrian peoples, to the victory of the cause of independence and peace, to the long life of respected Dr Bruno Kreisky, and to the good health of the Austrian guests and comrades and friends present here.

'Text' of Conference Declaration

[Text] Pyongyang September 9 (KCNA) -- A declaration was adopted at the closing session of the Pyongyang international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula. The full text of the declaration reads:

Declaration of the Pyongyang International Conference for Denuclearization and Peace on the Korean Peninsula

The International Conference for Denuclearization and Peace on the Korean Peninsula, attended by 93 delegations and delegates representing political parties, states, governments, and organizations from 80 countries and 32 international and national organizations, as well as by a great many outstanding personalities involved in the struggle for democracy and peace, took place in Pyongyang, capital of the DPR of Korea, from the 6th to 8th of September, 1986.

Given the audience by H.E. Mr. Kim Il-song, president of the DPR of Korea, the participants have decided unanimously to adopt as an official document of the conference the important speech that he delivered to them.

The conference, in reflection of the preoccupations of the peace-loving peoples of the world, expressed the profound concern about the continuous speeding-up of nuclear arms race in face of the grave threat to world peace and security of humanity, in spite of the International Year of Peace decided by the U.N.

The conference has unanimously stated that denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula where the present-day strained situation constitutes a problem of crucial importance closely linked to the fate of peace and security in Asia and all over the world, and it has made an in-depth analysis of ways and means of how to turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone, a zone of peace.

Humankind is currently facing a serious dilemma: thermonuclear war or peace. It is the unanimous aspiration of mankind to say no to war and to secure peace needed for social progress and happy life of peoples.

The threat of nuclear war has cast its shadow over all of mankind with immeasurable arsenals of nuclear weapons stockpiled and deployed everywhere -- on continents, oceans and in air -- which have the capacity to destroy several times our planet. Nevertheless the arms race, nuclear arms race, is frantically going ahead with designing, testing, producing and deploying new types of nuclear weaponry and other sophisticated arms of mass extermination. The arms race threatens to have further developments due to the implementation of the U.S.-sponsored "star wars" project.

Following the logics of the policy of confrontation of the imperialists, the nuclear armed forces are being concentrated in strategic points of military interest as well as in the regions with relevant sources which turn these regions into dangerous hotbeds of nuclear war. The Korean peninsula is currently the most sensitive point in the world for triggering a nuclear conflict.

By virtue of its "thesis on the importance of the Asian and Pacific region," the United States has declared the Korean peninsula decisive region of "crucial interest" for the implementation of its strategy in the Far East. It seeks to make "two Koreas" in order to turn definitively the south of Korea into its military headbridge and nuclear first-line position for aggression against the Asian Continent.

In violation of the 1953 Armistice Agreement nuclear warheads and carriers with a destructive power equalling more than thousand "A" bombs dropped on Hiroshima is deployed in South Korea and this arsenal represents more than a half of U.S. nuclear weapons stationed in the Far East.

Envisaging a nuclear war on the Korean peninsula, the United States has already completed offensive plan and is gradually implementing it in the framework of the U.S.-South Korea joint annual "Team Spirit" war games. In accordance with an operation plan for a "blitzkrieg," the units of U.S. and South Korean armies have been stationed in first-line position in South Korea and their mobile capabilities have considerably increased, which are sharpening tension in Korea every day.

Considering that the transformation of the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free and peaceful zone is a question of major significance directly linked to the fate of peace in Asia and throughout the world, the conference declares:

1. That the design, test, production, stockpile, possession, deployment, proliferation, and use of nuclear weapons on the Korean peninsula should all be prohibited.

In its statement of June 23, 1986, the government of the DPRK, a signature country of the non-proliferation treaty has reaffirmed that it will abstain from testing, producing, stockpiling and introducing nuclear weapons and that it will not allow the transfer of nuclear weapons on its territory, in territorial air and on territorial sea. Respecting the wishes of the Korean people and of world public opinion, the U.S. Government, too, should immediately give up introducing new nuclear weapons and their carriers into South Korea, reduce stage by stage all the existing nuclear weapons up to their total withdrawal.

2) That the installation of foreign military bases and the stationing of foreign troops on the Korean peninsula should not be allowed. In the northern part of the Korean peninsula there exist no foreign military bases nor foreign troops, but the South is filled with a great number of U.S. military bases and more than 40,000 U.S. troops have been stationed there for more than four decades. The United States has to abandon its policy of military occupation of South Korea and to dismantle all its bases, first of all the nuclear ones, and to withdraw its troops putting in this way an end to attacks on national sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Korean nation.

3) That any military treaty of aggressive character on the Korean peninsula and in the neighbouring regions should be cancelled and that all manoeuvres designed to establish a new military alliance be foiled. It is important for peace in Asia and all over the world to turn the Korean peninsula into a zone of complete peace and total security, a zone of strict neutrality with no connections with any military bloc. The DPRK, dignified member country of the Non-Aligned Movement, consistently respects the fundamental principles of this movement: anti-imperialism, independence, neutralism and it has stated time and again that it will join in no political-military alliance nor any bloc of this kind, even after the reunification of the country. The United States should put an end to its attempt to put in place a new military bloc axis on the tripartite U.S.-Japanese-South Korean military alliance and respect the policy on making the Korean peninsula neutral and non-aligned.

4) That military war games and increases in the size of its armed forces which are in the factors responsible for the aggravation of the tensions and of the war danger on the Korean peninsula, should be ended and that the number of troops and weapons be reduced. The DPRK put forward proposals aimed at putting an end to any large extent war games on the whole territory of both North and South and at diminishing and eliminating the state of confrontation between the North and the South. The U.S. and the South Korean authorities must put an end to any joint military war games of large extent such as the "Team Spirit" one and, first of all, abstain from increasing the size of their Armed Forces and from introducing new kinds of weaponry from the outside of Korean territory.

5) That a dialogue designed to create first conditions favourable to detente, peace and peaceful reunification of the Korean peninsula must be set up. It is indispensable that tripartite talks must be initiated between the DPRK, the United States and South Korea enabling them to conclude a Korea-U.S. peace agreement replacing the Korean Armistice Agreement and that a declaration of non-aggression between the North and the South be adopted. This done, the state of confrontation characterizing DPRK-U.S. and the North-South relationship will be put to an end and peace and security on the Korean peninsula be guaranteed.

The absence of tripartite talks requires at present that the talks be held at the level of minister of People's Armed Forces of the DPRK, commander-in-chief of allied forces in South Korea and minister of defense of South Korea which would permit to take concrete measures aimed at detente and at creating a climate favourable to the dialogue. The dialogue between the North and the South which has been suspended must be resumed.

6) That to promote detente in Korea and encourage the national unity of the Korean people the 24th Olympic Games should be co-hosted on a joint basis between the North and the South. The co-hosting of the Olympic Games by both the North and the South of Korea on a joint basis would help to overcome current difficulties facing the Olympic movement and secure a normal holding of the games and it would create a climate favourable to peace and peaceful reunification of Korea.

7) The national reunification of the Korean people is fundamental means to eliminate the causes of tenson on the Korean peninsula and to secure an everlasting peace. The artificial partition of the territory and the division of the Korean nation by foreign forces constitute a permanent factor in sharpening the tension and the war danger on the Korean peninsula. Korea must not be made into "two Koreas", both in the interest of the Korean people and for the sake of peace throughout the world, but it must be reunified into one Korea based on the three principles of independence, peace and great national unity, which was clarified in the July 4, 1972, joint statement.

The conference expresses its hope that the governments, political parties and progressive organizations from all countries of the world, the international institutions, international organizations, democratic personalities as well as all peoples of the world will pay utmost attention to the serious situation prevailing on the Korean peninsula and that they will strongly affirm their support to and their solidarity with the Korean people in its struggle against the danger of nuclear war, for peace and reunification of its homeland. Peace in Korea is a component of world peace and the struggle for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula is inseparately linked with the international peace movement.

Considering that the intensification of the international peace movement in the interest of security for all the people on our planet constitutes a direct support to the Korean people who are double victims due to their national division and threat of nuclear holocaust, the conference appeals to the peace-loving people to carry on a broader anti-war, anti-nuclear movement.

Manoeuvres of imperialists for strengthening the nuclear arms buildup and militarizing the outer space should be checked and an active struggle be conducted to realize the complete abolition of all nuclear weapons. Establishing nuclear-free, peace zones and expanding them is an important way to effect nuclear arms reduction and preventing nuclear war.

The conference extends its support to and solidarity with all the peace-loving countries and their peoples in the struggle for establishing nuclear-free, peace zones in Northeast Asia, Southeast Asia, Central Europe, the Nordic region, the Balkans, Middle and Near East, the Mediterranean, Africa and Indian Ocean, South Pacific, Latin America and other regions.

The conference is conscious that the prevention of a war and the maintenance of world peace and security presuppose the elimination of the hotbeds of war and the independent development of all the countries.

Peace-loving countries and progressive forces throughout the world should fight against all forms of aggression, intervention and plunder of imperialists, colonialists and racists which are ingredients for tension, division and conflict, fully support the struggle for national liberation and independence and wage an energetic struggle to do away with an old, unfair international economic order and establish a new, fair international economic order.

The danger of a world thermonuclear war is daily increasing but a war is not inevitable. The peace forces over the world can preserve peace on the condition that they unite and fight resolutely and enlarge and strengthen their ranks uninterruptedly. Peace-loving peoples throughout the world should strengthen their joint struggle internationally against aggression and the threat of nuclear war, transcending the differences of their social system, political view, philosophy or religious belief and culture.

The conference expresses its conviction that all the countries, political parties, organizations and peoples that love peace and justice, liberty and progress will perform their mission before the history.

September 8, 1986. Pyongyang.

EFFECT OF JAPANESE MINISTER'S REMARKS ON TIES VIEWED

No Wants 'Convincing' Apology

SK100045 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 10 Sep 86 p 1

[Text] Taegu — No Tae-u, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, said yesterday he expects the Japanese Government to apologize for the Masayuki Fujio controversy "in a convincing manner."

No said, "It is natural that Prime Minsiter Yasuhiro Nakasone dismissed Education Minister Fujio." No said, "Judging from the action, the Japanese Government is expected to offer a convincing form of apology to Korea."

The DJP chairman, who came here as part of his provincial tour aimed at publicizing the parliamentary system, met with reporters at a hotel.

He said he also expects Tokyo will assure "in any form" that no similar "absurd" remarks will be reiterated.

"It is a well-known fact that all the Korean people are indignant over such irresponsible remarks. I hope Japan will take measures to help restore the damaged pride and prestige of the Korean people," he said.

Fujio triggered a storm of anger and resentment among the Korean people over the weeked by saying that Korean should share responsibility for Japan's annexation of Korea in 1910.

DJP Chairman No said he thinks Korea and Japan should take advantage of the occasion to resolve their outstanding issues one by one "in a desirable way."

Turning to domestic politics, he said the National Assembly Special Constitution Revision Committee will continue to make efforts to live up to the people's aspirations for compromise constitutional reform.

The majority chairman said he will meet with the leaders of opposition parties any time, if necessary, to tackle the deadlock of the operation of the committee.

Asked if he is willing to run in a local district in the next general election, No, who was elected to the incumbent National Assembly on a national constituency, said, "I will determine my political plan only after rival parties conclude negotiations over election laws."

Following the press meeting, he attended a local party unity rally held at the provincial gymnasium here.

Speaking before an audience of about 15,000 DJP members, No said the nation's conditions are mature enough to adopt the Cabinet system and achieve full democracy.

The Cabinet system, he said, would put an end to dictatorship and ensure coexistence between rival parties.

FOREIGN MINISTERS' TALKS OPPOSED

SK100013 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 10 Sep 86 p 1

[Text] Opposition lawmakers yesterday raised strong objections to the holding of the first annual meeting of foreign ministers of Korea and Japan scheduled for today in Tokyo.

Rep. Yi Man-sop, president of the second opposition Korea National Party, asserted in an unofficial session of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the National Assembly that "We oppose the foreign ministers' meeting and the projected visit to Seoul by Japanese Premier Nakasone under a circumstance like this."

The New Korea Democratic Party boycotted the unofficial meeting, claiming that an official session of the Foreign Affairs Committee should be held today as agreed upon between the floor leaders of the rival parties.

The major opposition party insisted that Foreign Minister Choe should not participate in the meeting "at a time when the whole nation is enraged by Fujio's remarks."

KNP's Yi said in the session, "Who will welcome the Japanese premier to the Asian Games while the Japanese are bent on justifying its past colonial rule of neighboring countries?"

Daily Wants Nakasone Apology

SK090130 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 9 Sep 86 p 4

[Editorial: "Japanese Absurdity"]

[Text] There have been many claims and indeed hopes, along with lingering misgivings, that post-war Japan has been rebuilt into a "new Japan" based on democracy and, moreover, devoid of its past militarism and colonialism which had devasted so many Asian countries.

However, illustratively belying the claims, at least in part, were repeated absurd remarks by none other than an incumbent Cabinet minister of the Japanese Government, who has challenged the Asian nations by publicly defending Japan's past wrongs inflicted on them.

Of the controversial statements by the man, Masayuki Fujio, on four occasions since he became the education minister seven weeks ago, the latest one was most astonishing and outrageous.

In a magazine interview, he openly disputed historical facts about Japan's forceful annexation of Korea in 1910, by asserting that Korea itself should share responsibility for the Japanese takeover as it had been based on a "formal agreement" and that, even without the Japanese action, Korea might have fallen under the sway of either Russia or China.

While it is deemed not worthy of discussing the absurdity of his assertion which, in a sense, resembles a robber assailing the robbed for his house's loose security, a point at issue is how an incumbent Cabinet member dares to make such abusive and challenging remarks in public.

Noteworthy in this connection are indications that Japan's Liberal Democratic government of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, especially since the ruling party won a landslide victory in general elections last July, is oriented to a "neo-nationalism": that is, to build Japan into a global political power to match its economic might, though carefully sidestepping public debate on its becoming a military power.

Accordingly, Fujio's "venture" to speak out in defense of Japan's past may be seen as a deliberate attempt by the Japanese to restore their nation's pre-war "glory." If so, the crucial question hinges not necessarily on whether or not Fujio be dismissed from the Cabinet portfolio, but more fundamentally on the Japanese perception and approach to justify and even glorify their past wrongs.

Should Japanese Premier Nakasone ever visit Seoul on the occasion of the Asian Games' opening, as previously announced, he would be obliged to make a sincere apology in person to the Korean people and other Asians for his Cabinet member's astounding misbehavior, rather than attempting to seize the opportunity to demonstrate Japan's self-conceived role as a leader of Asia.

Government Actions 'Perplexing'

[Editorial: "Firm Diplomatic Stance"]

[Text] It is perplexing to learn that the government has reversed -- and, at that, in a matter of one day -- its earlier decision to postpone a foreign ministers' meeting with Japan, originally slated for today in Tokyo, in protest against a Japanese Cabinet minister's provocative remarks defending Japan's forceful annexation of Korea in 1910.

The reversal followed the dismissal of the man at issue, Education Minister Masayuki Fujio, by Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, along with a "statement of regret" issued by a Tokyo government spokesman over the controversy which upset the Korean people and government as well.

According to Foreign Ministry quarters, such actions by the Japanese Government were deemed as an expression of its intent to redress the situation in favor of sustaining cooperative relations between the two neighboring countries.

However, it is doubtful if those Japanese actions alone can soothe the shock and outrage aroused among the Korean people by the ousted Japanese Cabinet member -- all the more so in light of the prevailing apprehensions among Koreans that his derogatory remarks, the fourth of its kind in less than two months, might represent a shrewd "venture" by Japanese conservatives to restore Japan's pre-war "glory."

If the binational ministerial meeting was to be ever held, a preferable alternative could have been to have the Japanese foreign minister visit Seoul, however tight his business schedule may be, with a dual mission of representing his government as an "emissary of apology" as well as participating in the conference.

Now that the government has renewed its decision to hold the meeting in Tokyo as previously scheduled, Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su is shouldered with an overriding task of fully reflecting the Korean people's irritated sentiment in his talks with Japanese Government leaders.

Of course, we understand that, in international relations, pragmatism counts more than the people's sentiment, and that an amicable and cooperative relationship between Korea and Japan is essential not only for mutual benefits but for regional peace and prosperity.

There are indeed piles of perennial issues to be tackled at the ministerial talks, ranging from trade friction to the status of Korean residents in Japan. And, a more fundamental question concerns the rectification of Japanese perception about Korea so as to forestall a recurrence of controversies like the latest one.

Accordingly, the government is expected to assume a firm diplomatic stance toward Japan in the process of building binational relationship on a solid base of mutual understanding.

On the part of the Tokyo government, it should reciprocate Seoul's forward-looking decision on the ministerial talks by taking really sincere and earnest actions, not mere lip services as in the past, in settling the outstanding bilateral issues.

ROK AGAINST DPRK HOSTING MORE OLYMPIC EVENTS

[Excerpt] Seoul, Sept. 10 KYODO -- The head of the (South) Korean Olympic Committee (KOC) has brushed aside North Korea's request for increasing the number of sports events it can host in the 1988 Seoul Olympics. In an exclusive interview with KYODO news service Tuesday at the KOC headquarters here, Kim Chong-ha said South Korea is in 100 percent agreement with what the International Olympic Committee (IOC) proposed in the third round of sports talks between the two Koreas in Lausanne, Switzerland this past June. The proposal would allow Pyongyang to host two sports, archery and table tennis, along with parts of two other sports -- road-race cycling and preliminary rounds of soccer.

Kim said this is the final proposal and that South Korea will not yield any more ground in the negotiations. Asked about the prospects of a fourth round of sports talks mediated by the IOC, Kim said there is little time to have the talks before a General Assembly of the IOC in Lausanne in mid-October. NORTH'S FAILURE AT NONALIGNED SUMMIT VIEWED [Text] North Korea suffered a major diplomatic setback when its anti-Seoul maneuvers flopped during the recently-concluded nonaligned Third World summit conference.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs said yesterday Pyongyang failed to obtain international support for its bid to cohost the 1988 Seoul Olympics during the triennial conference held in Harare, Zimbabwe, from Aug. 26 to Sept. 6.

Pyongyang was also unsuccessful in its attempt to have its proposal on the withdrawal of American troops from the South included in the final conference declaration, the ministry said.

It also had to give up its proposal to host the 1988 nonaligned foreign ministers' conference because of strong opposition from many of the conference participants.

Describing the outcome of the conference as a diplomatic success on the part of Seoul, a ministry official said, "Our continued effort to expand substantial ties with nonaligned Third World countries have born fruits."

He noted that Seoul has steadily strengthened cooperative ties with the Third World nations through summit diplomacy and various other channels.

"By taking advantage of its membership in the Nonaligned Movement, Pyongyang has employed all kinds of diplomatic schemes to press ahead with its call for the cohosting of the 1988 Seoul Olympics," the official said.

"The movement, however, has virtually rejected the North Korean demand. Most Third World countries have backed up Seoul's position that the Olympic issue should be handled by the International Olympic Committee (IOC), not by the movement," he added.

Pyongyang has a membership in the Nonaligned Movement, while Seoul does not.

During the conference, the North Korean delegation futilely attempted to include in the conference's final declaration such proposals as the withdrawal of American troops from the South and the replacement of the cease-fire agreement of the Korean War (1950-53) with a peace treaty.

A majority of the conference attendants opposed the North Korean idea, noting that the conference should not deal with the Korean issue without Seoul's participation.

The atmosphere in the conference, generally favorable to Korea, also stopped the Pyongyang delegation from presenting its recent idea for making the Korean peninsula a nuclear-free zone, the official said.

He said North Korea also failed in its bid to attract the nonaligned foreign ministers' conference to Pyongyang in 1988 when it faced opposition from such moderate movement members as Saudi Arabia, Argentina and Oman.

STUDENTS, BUDDHISTS BATTLE POLICE IN PROTESTS

9 Sep Student Protests

[Text] Seoul, Sept 9 (AFP) -- Dozens of students and policemen were hurt in fighting here Tuesday as dissident students' protests against South Korea's hosting of the Asian Games continued unabated on Seoul campuses, witnesses said.

On the campus of Yonsei University some 500 students armed with stones and petrol bombs fought a five-hour battle with four companies of riot police, who replied with tear gas, the witnesses said. The police deployed a large net to protect themselves from petrol bombs. The witnesses said dozens of students and several riot policemen had been wounded during the clash, the largest and violent on campus since the beginning of the fall semester last week.

Witnesses reported similar but smaller protest demonstrations on other campuses in Seoul, including Korea University. On Monday student demonstrations were reported at five universities around the country.

The students were protesting against the hosting of the 1986 Asian Games, due to begin here September 20, which they say will heighten tension on the Korean peninsula because of North Korea's absence from the competition. They also allege that the government is putting too much emphasis on the games at the expense of the poor and underprivileged.

Meanwhile three universities, including Seoul National University, have decided to temporarily cease classes during the games to prevent militant students from obstructing the events to be held on their campuses.

In another development, the government has decided to scrap plans to force the closure of some industrial plants, halt work on construction and demolition sites and limit road traffic to prevent pollution during the games, officials said. The idea was abandoned because it was undesirable for the games to disrupt people's daily lives or cause them economic loss, the officials said.

12 Buddhist Monks Arrested

[Names as received]

[Text] Seoul, Sept 10 (AFP) -- The South Korean authorities ordered Wednesday the arrest of the newly elected student leader at Seoul National University for allegedly seditious remarks he made during his election campaign, the police said. Oh Kyung-hoon, who was elected chairman of the university's Students' Assciation Tuesday, was put on the police wanted list together with the unsuccessful candidate for the chairmanship, Yo Hun-chul, and a student who had helped arrange the election. According to the police, the two candidates made "leftist-leaning" election promises such as pledges of opposition to South Korea's hosting of the 1986 Asian Games, support for the establishment of a democratic people's republic and the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Korea. The police also said it was feared the association would lead violent protests in the run-up to the opening here of the Asian Games on September 20.

On Tuesday alone, a total of 3,000 students joined demonstrations at 13 universities across the country, mostly to oppose the hosting of the games and a special parliamentary committee revising the Constitution, the police said.

Meanwhile, the police said they had arrested 12 Buddhist monks for the leading roles they played in an anti-government demonstration at a Buddhist temple here on Monday in which some 150 Buddhist monks took part.

2,000 Monks Stage Rally

SK090144 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 9 Sep 86 p 3

[Text] Approximately 2,000 Buddhist monks staged a rally on the plaza in front of the Haein-sa Temple in Hyopchon, Kyongsang-namdo, Sunday, calling for the abolishment of what they insisted were "evil" clauses of the law on Buddhism.

In a 10-point resolution issued at the gathering, they demanded that temples can no longer be included in the national park programs.

Among the participants was Rev. So Ui-hyon, director general of the KBCO [Korean Buddhist Chogye Order] Secretariat. All the monks attending the Haein-sa rally were members of the Korean Buddhist Chogye Order.

The protestors demanded that monk Son-yon, who is under arrest in connection with the so-called Inchon case, should be released immediately. In addition, members of the agencies concerned should refrain from entering temples for official purpose and the mass media should stop biased and distorted reports.

The government should clarify why monks had been taken en masse by the authorities concerned on Oct. 27, 1980, they said.

The rally was followed by march with various pickets in their hands to the entrance of the temple some 3.5 kilometers away.

They destroyed windows of ticket booths at the entrance of the temple and erased the signs on rocks indicating the direction toward the temple.

Some 150 student monks of Shanga Buddhist Academy staged a violent demonstration in Kaeun Temple, near Korea University, yesterday, calling for a repeal of the religion law which they said was discriminating against Buddhism.

They violently confronted with riot police forces hurling stones and wielding wooden bars at around 5 p.m. when their attempt to take to the street was blocked by 150 police force firing tear gas bombs.

The academy, belonging to the Korean Buddhist Chogye Order, demanded that the government grant the autonomous management of Buddhist properties.

2 KIMS ISSUE 'ULTIMATUM' AGAINST GOVERNMENT

SK040152 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 4 Sep 86 p 2

[Text] Kim Yong-sam and Kim Tae-chung issued an ultimatum of a sort against the government in a joint statement Tuesday.

The two opposition leaders warned that they would launch a campaign to bring down the government unless leaders of the ruling camp start meaningful dialogue with them.

The sudden statement put an end to a relative lull in the activities of the opposition force during the summer season, which was characterized by stepped up publicity activities on the part of the government party.

The two Kims specifically expressed hope to have direct dialogue with President Chon Tu-hwan, who they said is the only one who can make a decision on the deadlocked constitutional amendment problem.

The immediate response from the Democratic Justice Party was negative. DJP Chairman No said any conference involving Kim Tae-chung would be inconceivable in view of his legal status of being a criminal convict having no freedom of political activities.

He did not, however, close the doors to dialogues with Kim Yong-sam or Yi Min-u of the New Korea Democratic Party.

The two top opposition leaders' tough statement indicated that both now have little hope for the activities of the special House committee on constitutional amendment which has been stalled over a dispute on operational matters.

It was Kim Yong-sam who has favored NKDP's joining in the ad hoc committee while Kim Tae-chung maintained a negative position on it from the beginning.

The long delay in the committee's first planned action of holding public debates in major cities due to disagreement on televising the sessions dashed hope of the opposition party to use them for their amendment campaign.

As time went by, the two opposition leaders recognized the hardening attitude on the part of the government party as to the basic stand on the question of power structure in the new constitution and the mode of negotiation in the special House panel.

Meanwhile, in their meeting with representatives of dissident groups Tuesday, they were pressed against taking any flexible posture concerning the direct presidential election system, the ultimate goal of the opposition force.

The Asian Games were approaching only some two weeks away and even the opposition camp is in general consensus of holding a political truce during the games period.

Orginally, the NKDP had joined the constitutional amendment panel with a time limit of three months, which will expire at the end of September. By any account, time was running out and the opposition camp now needed a momentum for a dramatic turn of events.

Thus the two Kims chose to issue the ultimatum with the warning of going out to the street from October, or immediately after the closure of the Asian Games.

The Aug. 30 rally in Pusan is believed to have given them considerable confidence as to the success of any "out-of-the-parliament campaigns." Though it was held away from the city center and there was not much publicity, close to 50,000 people gathered on the bank of the Naktong River to applaud NKDP slogans.

It looks unlikely that the top leadership of the ruling camp will change its mind and accept the call for dialogue "betwen the real power sources" within the next couple of weeks.

If the opposition camp was to mount a street campaign, it will have to face the risk of getting the unwanted "reinforcements" from radical elements, namely students and workers.

The opposition leaders demanded tough options of the government but they themselves face hard choices on the future course of actions, whether they be struggles for constitutional reforms or the outright moves to bring down the government.

BCP POLITICAL REPORT ON GROWTH OF MULTINATIONALS

BK311339 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese 1200 GMT 31 Aug, 1 Sep 86

["Continuation of the Political Report of the Burma Communist Party Central Committee presented at the Third National Party Congress"]

[Text] International cooperation among private monopoly capitalists will be explained.

1. The post-war period saw the rapid growth and development of transnational or multinational corporations. These international corporations reflect one aspect of international monopoly organizations, and they are established when business ventures which own or control certain financial sectors in major capitalist countries diversify their finances and recruit member organizations through direct investment in many different nations. These international corporations practice a global strategy of undertaking production, sale, and other related work on an international scale through their proxies — monopoly groups -- with the goal of reaping massive profits. In 1982, it was reported that their investments and capital buildup amounted to almost $100,000 billion which represents 40 percent of all industry and 50 percent of all foreign trade in semincolonial and dependent nations.

2. Multinationals emerged rapidly in the United States after the Second World War, and they dominated production, distribution, trade, and finance in the capitalist world. Although multinationals invest primarily in industrialized and developed nations, the developing countries are the main source of massive profit. Profits from developing nations are twice that gained from developed nations.

3. The following [words indistinct] were observed in the decade between 1970 and 1980:

a. The disparity in politics and economics of capitalism led to uneven expansion abroad. The multinationals in the United States, Britain, and France experienced a slowdown in their expansion overseas while there was also a decrease in German and Japanese multinationals. Capital from Western Europe and Japan flowed into the United States, and the gap between reciprocal direct investments narrowed.

b. The proportion of multinational investments in the developing countries decreased by one-third to one-quarter while investments increased in politically stable and economically sound developing nations, the oil producing countries, free ports, the Bahamas, [name indistinct], Bermuda, [name indistinct], Dutch Indies, and Panama.

c. Multinationals adopted more flexible approaches in the developing countries. They no longer try to maintain control over ventures and to hold major shares, instead they resort to other means like selling management and technical services.

d. They avoided risk ventures in a world witnessing continuous technological advancement, and in order to maintain their trade advantage, they instead resorted to forming conglomerates involving different product line ventures at the international level, formed international trading [words indistinct], extended production in all aspects, and diversified into different services.

4. The technological revolution caused rapid development of the productive forces. The arrival of automation made strict quality control a requirement and also helped diversify the product lines. It also made monopoly ventures specialize in production, engage in research work and produce [words indistinct] and also created grounds for work divisions to step up autonomous operations while increasing cooperation. There was also greater joint efforts between the divisions in foreign countries and corporate members and work became more cost effective. Thus, multinationals became involved in internationally common and specialized ventures.

The technological revolution in the transport and communications fields also led to massive reduction in transportation costs, speeded up travel between countries, and created conditions for production and capital to assume an international character. However, the technological revolution cannot be a replacement for social revolution.

5. [Words indistinct], and the production in the capitalist world came under the control of the minority multinationals with passing time. In addition, the trade in the capitalist world grew by leaps and bounds because of the export of large quantitites of machinery, finished goods, semifinished goods, and raw materials in the post-war period. Capitalist countries experienced rapid growth in their international trade which surpassed development in the industrial and agricultural sectors. The growth of multinationals led to the manipulation of international trade. Countries which are original producers of goods suffer because of the miltinationals' control on prices.

6. The vast capital holdings of the multinationals as well as their capital circulation influence the stability of the international (?currency) market. They hold large amounts of bank deposits and liquid assets. In the early 1970's, liquid assets throughout the world in the hands of multinationals amounted to U.S. $260 billion with the major portion of this amount belonging to the American multinationals -- the fountainhead of Eurodollars. The unceasing circulation of short-term capital among countries forms the source of capital used in the manipulation of international markets, and this ruins the balance of payment of host countries, affects the stability of exchange rates, and nullifies the effectiveness of loan and savings policies.

7. The exploitation of multinationals has far-reaching and profound ill-effects not only on workers in host and developing countries but also in industrialized nations. The gap between poor and rich within a country and among nations has grown wider with the passing of time, and for this reason, the fundamental antagonisms of the capitalist world -- the antagonisms between labor and capital, between the developing and the developed nations, and between imperialist nations -- have unavoidably worsened. All the facts stated above, therefore, are manifestations in different forms of the cooperation at the international level of private monopoly capital principally in the production, exchange, and financial areas. International corporations are pillars of the international character of production, marketing, and capital, and they collectively reflect the cooperation at the international level of private monopoly capital.

In the case of state monopoly capital however, the cooperation at the international level is not generally direct involvement in the production, exchange, and financial areas. They assume the following principal forms.

a. International economic conferences of all kinds which regulate international economic relations,

b. International economic agreements of all kinds,

c. International economic organizations of all sorts,

d. Trading blocs derived from international economic agreements, and tariff, financial, and economic blocs.

The main goal of the cooperation of state monopoly capital at international level is to regulate international economic relations, and it serves to further the cooperation at international level of private monopoly capital. The first factor develops on the basis of the second, and the development of the first factor also helps the development of the second factor. The two mutually cooperate with each other and defend to the last ditch to preserve decaying and moribund imperialism.

Whatever their attempts to preserve imperialism, the revolutionary struggle of the international proletariat, and the oppressed peoples and nations of the world will definitely put an end to it, and this is a certainty.

The facts stated above are our observations regarding imperialism in the 20th century following the Second World War.

PRACHEACHON VIEWS PARTY-MASSES RELATIONS

BK051143 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 2300 GMT 4 Sep 86

[PRACHEACHON Editorial: "Ceaselessly Strengthen and Enhance the Close Relations Between the Party and the Masses" -- date not given]

[Text] The masses, the working people, are the essential productive force of society. Without the productive movement of the millions of working people, one cannot talk about a social entity or societal development. The masses and people are not only the frontline producers of material property but also the modifiers and direct creators of society's spiritual values. It is these masses, these working people, who are the makers and the molders of history. The strength of the masses is the factor determining the victory of the revolution. However, this strength can be maximized only when the masses are conscious of the objectives, the goals, the revolutionary ideal and are meticulously organized and correctly supervised and counseled. This means that the strength of the masses can be brought into full play in a revolutionary movement under party leadership. Having a correct political line to follow; having correct principles; and having loyal, courageous, and valiant cadres and party members are essential conditions for the victory of a revolution. Nevertheless, without agitating the masses and organizing revolutionary movements, one cannot transform the party's political line and principles into concrete reality that can bring success to the revolution.

In history, no revolution has been successful without the active participation of the masses. In fact, during the 7 years since liberation, under the correct and enlightened leadership of the party and relying on and developing the great masses of the people, our party has pushed all revolutionary movements toward achieving successes one after another, scoring brilliant victories in all fields -- political, military, economic, social, and diplomatic -- building genuine revolutionary forces, and ceaselessly continuing to develop our position of advantage and victory. This is brilliant proof of the benefits deriving from closely linking the party with the masses. It all boils down to having the masses and people happily and firmly trusting the correct political line of the party and resolutely and simultaneously supporting and defending the new regime.

All this testifies to the beautiful character of our party, the vanguard of the working class and an authentic Marxist-Leninist party representing the genuine collective interest of the Cambodian working class and working people. The party struggled ceaselessly to liberate the people from the chains and fetters of colonialism and from the hell on earth of the genocidal Pol Pot regime, bringing about national independence, rights, and freedom for the country and plentiful and happy life for the people. What is different from the bloodthirsty Pol Pot regime is that the latter betrayed the interests of the nation and opposed the people most brutally by massacring them by the millions and regarding them as slaves.

The party members, the vanguard of the Cambodian working class, are the best persons of the Cambodian working class and working people. Through the revolutionary movement of the masses, our party has recruited the most outstanding persons for training and indoctrination before inducting them into the party.

At present, along with the cadres, party members are models, wholeheartedly engaged in the struggle. They are valiant, courageous, and loyal to the interests of the party and of the people. However, there are a number of cadres and party members who have not yet become exemplary, have not correctly implemented the party's political line, have not respected the laws and regulations of the state, have failed to respect the legitimate interests of the people, and have misused their own rights and powers to oppress and exploit the masses. They are bureaucratic, arrogant, aloof from the masses, extravagent, and wasteful; they misappropriate collective property for their own interests and create misunderstandings among the people, thus reducing the party's prestige.

Speaking on the occasion of the recent conference of leading cadres, Comrade General Secretary Heng Samrin stressed that only national independence and socialism can bring the people freedom, the right to mastery, prosperity, and happiness. This is the longstanding, earnest aspiration of our people, and because of this aspiration our people have found themselves very closely linked with the new regime. Nevertheless, at present there are several instances causing discontent to the people because of the failure to abide by the aspirations of the masses according to the line and views of the party.

Our party represents the collective interests of the working class and all working people. It does not seek the exclusive interest of any group or any individual. Cadres and party members are representatives of the party. Therefore, all party members must always hold aloft their vanguard role and model. All words and deeds of party members, be they correct or erroneous, always affect the understanding and actions of the masses and concern the revolutionary cause.

Each party member, whatever his role or function, must thoroughly understand his responsibility toward the party and the masses. Party members must at all times correctly implement the party political line, stay close to the masses, wholeheartedly serve the people, and always place the interests of the party and people above those of individuals. They must devise work procedures that allow them to go deep among the masses to grasp the local situation and the desires and aspirations of the masses firmly. The criticism and self-criticism campaign during the 35th anniversary of the party's founding will make party members and cadres clearly understand the important of close relations between the party and the masses.

In the work to agitate the masses, it is imperative to pay attention to enhancing political and ideological indoctrination among the strata of the people to increase political and spiritual uniformity in society so as to carry out all revolutionary tasks successfully. At the same time, it is imperative to accelerate the revolutionary movements of the masses vigorously, first of all the movement to emulate in labor, production, and the practice of thrift. Moreover, it is imperative to encourage and organize the masses to take part in building and defending the administration and to take part in managing the state and society and pay attention to expanding and consolidating mass organizations to mobilize citizens to appropriately participate in the system of mass organizations to allow all of them to take part in local political life. It is imperative to organize the masses so that they can join in the work of building the party in such ways as expressing their opinion on the leadership of party committees and party chapters, the recruiting of new party members, the quality of cadres and party members, and so on.

Only by implementing well all these tasks can cadres and party members win the trust and affection of the people and can relations between the party and the masses be strengthened, thus bringing success to their heavy and noble tasks and contributing thereby to the cause of defending and building the Cambodian fatherland step by step toward new and greater victories.

PRACHEACHON ON OFFSETTING RICE LOST TO DROUGHT

[PRACHEACHON Editorial: "Mobilize Forces in the Offensive To Complete Plowing Land and Transplanting Rice by the End of the Monsoon" -- date not given]

[Text] Irrigation is a principal measure in agricultural production, but the rice acreage in our country that can be artificially irrigated is insignificant so most of the land depends on rainfall. Without rain, no plowing or transplanting work is possible. Therefore, this year's monsoon production work is encountering great difficulties because of scarce and uneven rainfall.

During the dry spell in the middle of the season, at the end of July and the beginning of August, our authorities and peasants throughout the country sought by all means possible in the localities, from pumps to primitive tools such as waterwheels, scoops, and pails, to bring water to ricefields to feed the rice seedlings and transplanted rice stalks and to use water from dams, reservoirs, ponds, and pools to help complete plowing the land in time.

By 14 August, the whole country had completed plowing only on a little more than 73 percent of the areas earmarked for planting, whereas transplanting had been carried out on a little more than 25 percent of plan area because of the lack of water sources, lack of tools and techniques, the absence of irrigation systems to conserve water for irrigating ricefields, and damage caused by insects.

Since the beginning of the monsoon, thousands of hectares of rice seedlings have been damaged, badly affecting the rice yield. Battambang and Takeo provinces have suffered the most.

Recently, heavy rains were reported, bringing much needed water to the ricefields, thus enabling our peasants to resume raising seedlings and transplanting them. The transplanting process should be over by the end of September. To master this work in time, all localities must activiely lead the way in the plowing, sowing, and transplanting process, ensuring that all ricefields are cultivated, thoroughly and meticulously, because there is not much time left for transplanting. It is imperative to encourage the peasants to mobilize draft animals for plowing ricefields and organize work forces to repair dams, reservoirs, ponds, and pools to conserve water.

To make up for the loss of thousands of hectares of seedlings because of the drought, it is necessary for areas with water sources to sow rice again in order to get enough seedlings for transplanting. To speed up the growing period, the solution is to use short-term rice seeds. Therefore, the agricultural service must work out emergency measures and plans to provide localities with this type of seeds by taking seed from localities with extra seed and sending it to localities suffering from shortages. However, all types of rice seed should also be made available, and the state may sell rice seed and fertilizer on credit to the peasants.

The agricultural service must send agronomists to the localities to advise the peasants in preparing nursery beds for rice seedlings, transplanting short-term rice varieties, and experimenting with the growing of new strains.

Provinces with extensive rice growing areas, such as Battabang and Prey Veng, must encourage plowing with cattle as well as by tractor and work out fuel supply plans for tractors.

All localities and all production solidarity groups must pay attention to tending oxen and buffalo to ensure the long life of the draft animals for success of the plowing process.

Local party and administrative committees must have concrete plans and measures to cooperate closely with all mass organizations and encourage students during the current school recess to joint in transplanting rice to fulfill plans. Moreover, according to the prevailing conditions of each locality, from now until the end of the year, the people must be persuaded to actively grow all kinds of subsidiary food crops such as corn, sweet potatoes, and cassava on the remaining fields. At the same time, it is imperative to maintain constant monitoring of the situation and put into action, with the greatest attention, a system of keeping the higher authorities informed in a constant and timely manner.

DIVISION 'E' HOLDS CONFERENCE ON POLITICAL REPORT

[Text] After completing political life campaigns for party units and party committees attached to various grass-roots units, the Division "E" party committee held and successfully concluded a conference in the latter part of August. Attending were Comrade Brigadier General Keo Douangsena, senior party cadre; the comrade commander of the division; heads of various subordinate divisional offices; and representatives of party members from units, battalions, schools, and hospitals.

In addition to hearing a brief report on the study of the draft political report to be submitted by the party Central Committee to the Fourth Party Congress, the conference heard a report reviewing the guidance work which the party committee attached to the division carried out in the 1st half of 1986 and on the party committee's line and plans for the 2d half of 1986.

The comrades representing grass-roots party members contributed their views to the report. A Division "E" command representative read a resolution to the conference. He pledged to persistently consolidate organizations, party units, and party committees; to make party units pure and solidly strong; and to build mainstay party cadres and members and their successors and all-round, strong companies.

The conference then voted to select representatives from the party organization attached to the division to attend the congress of the Army party organization.

In conclusion, senior party cadre Keo Douangsena made a speech. He first hailed the success of the conference and called on party committees and party units at various levels to heighten their sense of responsibility, firmly grasp the party Central Committee's leadership line, pay attention to strengthening the party's leadership and role in their units in the ideological, political, and organizational spheres, mobilize cadres, combatants, party members, and organizations to successfully fulfill the 1986 plan, and enthusiastically score achievements to welcome the coming Fourth Party Congress.

CONFEREES DEBATE IMPACT OF U.S. FARM ACT

[Text] Phatthaya -- The US Farm Act came under fire again yesterday during the opening day of a United States Information Service (USIS)-organized seminar titled Thai-US Trade: Conflict or Cooperation.

The attack came after two American panelists urged that Thailand try to solve its agricultural export problems, such as the September 15 GATT talks in Uruguay rather than rely too much on bilateral means.

Under ground rules dictated by USIS, comments by both Thai and American participants could not be attributed by name.

"The rice title of the US Farm Act is clearly, unequivocally a bilateral US action against Thailand," a Thai participant commented.

The Thai participant said that a section of the rice title "targets Thailand" and therefore this is a problem with the US and those who believed this was not so were "unrealistic."

The Thai participant added that the solution lies with bilateral action between Thailand and the US, adding:

"The US must move off its behind, it should start acting on its own."

"Unless and until the US mission (in Bangkok) right through to the US Secretary of Agriculture (Richard Lyng) takes action I don't see why we should feel sympathetic to the US administration," the Thai participant added.

The participant added by saying that the US prides itself as a nation of "sharpshooters" but with regards the Farm Act and its aim of countering EC subsidies "the US has become sloppy."

The Farm Act and its repercussions, the Thai participant said, has drawn criticism from Thailand, Australia, Brazil and Uruguay but "not a word" from the EC which the act is aimed at targetting.

The participant said that the US has a real farm problem similar to that of the EC, namely an oversupply from over production with "nowhere to go."

"I don't think our government officials should be allied with the US. The US must be seen as the enemy along with the EC.

"The problem is that United States and multilateral action get us nothing," the Thai participant said.

One of the American participants argued that if Thailand adopted such an attitude, it would "get nothing from the US."

"You are a victim of a (global agricultural) system that is no longer working and rice cannot be separated from other agricultural areas," the American added.

Before the comments by the Thai participant attacking the US Farm Act, one of the two American participants said that bilateral disputes are only a small part of a larger problem such as in the case of agriculture.

The American participant said that if "the larger problem can be solved then the bilateral problems would be reduced."

The American participant added that there is a general perception in the US that while America is an open market, other countries are not.

"Special relationships (between countries) are understood by some but not much and this (special bilateral relationships) does not carry much weight," the American said.

Agricultural subsidies, the participant said, are not a problem caused by the US but by the "chronic" subsidies of the European Community.

The United States cannot solve the problem alone nor does it have any options left to deal with the problem, she said, adding that other countries cannot look at the US for a solution.

The participant urged countries such as Thailand that do not subsidise farm exports to pressure the EC for changes at a multilateral level, namely the forthcoming GATT talks.

"If we can get the EC to change their common Agricultural Policy of heavy subsidies, then the US will get rid of the Farm Act subsidies," the participant added.

Another American participant said that the enormous focus on bilateral trade balances is a "silly type of focus."

He said that Thailand's plea to be treated as a special case when problems occur is the "wrong type of plea," adding that further focus on this type of relationship undermines multilateral trade relations.

The American urged that Thailand push the US as much as possible through multilateral rather than through bilateral means.

BK091006 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 9 Sep 86

[Text] Thailand gained a trade surplus with Laos up to more than 250 million baht during the first 6 months of this year. Thai commercial counselor to Vientiane Worathep Suphadun said during January to June this year, Thailand exported goods worth 270 million baht to Laos, an increase of 90 percent over the same period last year. Imports from Laos registered 14 million baht, or a decrease of 20 percent. [all figures as heard] Mr Worathep said Laos is tending to increase its imports following the implementation of its new economic development plan, which will enable the Laotian Government to have more purchasing power. He said the relaxed import controls could benefit Thai businesses. According to Mr Worathep, during the 2d half of this year Laos plans to import machinery, gunny bags, farm tools, batteries, and spare parts. About 60 percent of Laos' imports, mainly consumer products, come from Thailand.

PROVINCES SUFFER CASUALTIES, DAMAGE FROM STORM

[Text] A Thai Binh radio station correspondent has reported as follows: Typhoon No. 5 hit Thai Binh exactly at midnight [1700 GMT] on 5 September and lasted until 0300 on 6 September, with winds of force 11-12, gusting at times to force 13. Gale-force winds knocked down and damaged many houses and warehouses, devastated large areas of rice and other crops, and resulted in death and injuries to many people, especially in the coastal districts. Initial reports reveal that in Tien Hai, Kien Xuong, and Thai Binh City, dozens of people were killed and hundreds of others injured. The elementary school network and hospital of Tien Hai District collapsed. Almost all the fertilizer depots situated in the fields and rice seed depots had their roofs blown away. Tens of thousands of hectares of 10th-month rice now in the blossoming stage were damaged.

Provincial and district leaders, together with cadres in charge of the trade, public health, agricultural, water conservancy, and other sectors, have promptly made themselves available at the stricken localities to help the local people deal with the aftermath of typhoon No. 5, such as providing relief to the typhoon victims' families, giving medical treatment to the injured, arranging food supply and shelter for typhoon victims, and retrieving and protecting property of the state and the people.

The province and its various districts are urgently moving materials to the stricken localities in order to rebuild schools, hospitals, and warehouses while motivating the people to help one another overcome the typhoon's consequences.

A Ha Nam Ninh radio station correspondent's message says that in Ha Nam Ninh Province, the typhoon hit with winds of force 11-12, gusting past force 12, knocking down thousands of houses in coastal districts as well as adjacent ones and seriously damaging tens of thousands of other houses and state warehouses. According to initial reports, dozens of people were killed and hundreds of others injured. Numerous power and communications cable lines were severed. The typhoon overwhelmed the provincial sea and major river dikes and put tens of thousands of 10th-month rice under water.

Before and during the passage of the typhoon, Ha Nam Ninh actively carried out typhoon-control activities according to plan. The coastal districts of Hai Hau, Gghia Hung, and Xuan Thuy had mobilized more than 5,000 assault unit members to guard the dikes, concentrating forces on important dike sections and major protective dikes and sluice gates. Thanks to this, the province was able to keep intact the whole stretch of sea dikes, including the most important dike section in Hai Trieu village, Hai Hau District, which had often collapsed in past years.

At present, Ha Nam Ninh is actively overcoming the consequences of typhoon No. 5. The water conservancy, agricultural, and electricity sectors are striving to restore the network of power cables and transformer stations so that the drainage pumping stations can soon start flood-control operations. The public health and education sectors have sent many teams of cadres to the hard-hit areas to help the local authorities care for the people's health and repair school facilities. The province has also instructed the coastal district to protect their sea dikes during periods of high tide and districts situated on the banks of Hoang Long River to prepare for unexpected flash floods that may be caused by heavy rains in the river's upper reaches as typhoon No. 5 moves west.

A message from our Voice of Vietnam correspondent in Haiphong says that thanks to good preparations and low tide, damage caused by the typhoon to the municipality was not serious.

Winds of force 9-10 deroofed many huts and a number of brick houses and bent or knocked down a number of low-voltage power, telephone, and loudspeaker posts. All warehouses, domestic animals and fowls, and the people were safe. A number of areas planted to the early 10th-month rice were damaged by driving rains and winds.

On the morning of 6 September, the people of Haiphong promptly shored up houses, removed fallen trees, cleared the roads of obstacles, and repaired low-voltage power cables, loudspeaker lines, and schools. The Steering Committee for Flood and Typhoon Control of Haiphong has mobilized forces to repair major dike sections in preparation for the rains expected to come in the wake of typhoon No. 5 and to ensure the people's normal activities.

NHAN DAN ON THACH HA DISTRICT PARTY CONGRESS

OW020153 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 31 Aug 86

[NHAN DAN 31 August Report by Thanh Phong: "Thach Ha District Party Organization Holds Its Congress"]

[Text] The 19th party organization of Thach Ha District in Nghe Tinh Province has held its congress. While joining the local people in bravely fighting droughts to protect the 10th-month rice, the Thach Ha District party organization held basic-level party organization congresses in mid-August.

The Thach Ha District party organization was founded in 1930 during the Soviet Nghe Tinh Movement. At its recent congress, the organization assessed the achievements it has recorded in various fields since its previous term. Noteworthy is the fact that, on the grain and foodstuff production front, Thach Ha District increased its total grain output by 16,000 metric tons from 1981 to 1985, raising its annual per capita grain output from 260 to 300 kilograms. In 1985, the district delivered 12,000 metric tons of obligatory grain to the state, triple the amount procured in 1981.

Faced with a permanent shortage of food, Thach Ha District together with the entire province, has exerted great efforts in irrigation work, ricefield replenishment, labor distribution, and the development of occupations and trades. As a result, Thach Ha District, an area constantly affected by floods and droughts, has been turned into a region in Nghe Tinh capable of producing farm and marine products for export.

At the Thach Ha District party organization congress, delegates from various rice-growing and coastal areas and organs have honestly reviewed their achievements, weaknesses, and shortcoming; criticized the backward managerial system and other policies on the basis of reality; and submitted many motions to the province and even to the central government. All delegates have agreed that Thach Ha District is endowed with great potentialities and that the exploitation of them requires a thorough understanding and correct application of the party's line and policies to the specific local conditions as well as a contingent of qualified leading cadres from the district to the village levels who can win the masses' confidence and influence them.

According to many comrades, now is not the time for shouting empty slogans and uttering empty words, but it is necessary to influence the masses through concrete deeds. As revealed by some comrades, many cadres have lost their prestige because they have not proven to be exemplary and honest; instead, they have talked too much while doing little or nothing.

The problem raised by many delegates is that peasants have begun to lose their zeal in agreeing to work in ricefields on a contractual basis as they did during the initial years of the application of the contractual system. As noted by nearly all delegates, this is primarily attributable to the shortage of material supplies which peasants have to purchase outside at a loss and the poor and loose management by the collective. In fact, cooperative members have been compelled to secure supplies by their own means, thus creating a fairly great income imbalance in the rural areas.

The delegates have stressed the need to perfect the contractual system, consolidate the new production relations, ensure the interests of the state, collective, and laborers in a harmonious manner; and consider the people as the basis of all policies. Based on the actual situation in their villages and district over the past 5 years, the delegates have submitted to the province and the central government their practical suggestions on renovating the management system, policies, mechanisms, and cadre organization and have strongly criticized bureaucratic guidance and centralism. They have laid the greatest emphasis on the issues related to the party and state and on the adoption of a rational policy toward peasants at an early date to ensure good relationships between the state and peasantry.

Nearly 9,000 party members and nearly 200,000 people in Thach Ha District have pinned their hope on the party organization congress and their 240 delegates. The comrade secretary of the district party committee and concurrently member of the provincial party committee has led an incorrupt life and enjoyed the love, respect, and confidence of the district party organization and local people. Since he is aged, he has volunteered to submit his resignation to rejuvenate the district's leadership.

The comrade chairman of the district party committee, after the self-criticism and criticism drive, has remedied his shortcomings. Although he is a capable, trustworthy leader, he has also volunteered to resign in order to give young cadres an opportunity to work.

The delegates have carefully discussed the election of party committee echelons and stressed the need to link party structure with the cadres' capability and ethical qualities. They have elected to the new executive committee those who have undergone ordeals and matured and who have proven to be qualified and capable when working in various village installations, enterprises, state farms, stations, and corporations. They included a number of workers engaged in production and young socialist intellectuals capable of achieving great progress.

A comrade who was severely criticized in the recent self-criticism and criticism drive for committing shortcomings regarding his behavior, has been elected to the district executive committee because he is still young and capable and has scrupulously remedied his shortcomings.

Comrade Nguyen Van Trong, 42, secretary of the newly elected district party committee, said to me: I have many worries about my new responsibilities entrused by the party organization and local people. I believe, however, that with the unity and singlemindedness of the party committee echelons, with the efforts of the collective, and with the support of the entire party organization and local people, I will be able to fulfill my tasks. The lessons drawn from the recent self-criticism and criticism drive and the sincere remarks of delegates at the district party organization congress teach us to constatnly enhance our capabilities and qualities and to work well in order to be worthy of the confidence of the Thach Ha district party organization and people.

Thach Ha District is embarking on the new program of action worked out by the district party organization congress. According to this program, the district has to strive to achieve a grain output of 67,000 metric tons toward 1988 while ensuring an annual increase of nearly 4,000 metric tons. In the immediate future, the district will concentrate efforts on tending and fertilizing more than 10,000 hectares of summer-fall and 10th-month rice, on preparing to harvest 6,000 hectares of ripened summer-fall rice, and on building material and technical bases for the winter-spring rice crop cultivation.

To greet the success of the district party organization congress and to record achievements in honor of the 12th provincial party organization congress and the Sixth Party Congress, Thach Ha District has embarked on perfecting its irrigation projects, installing electrical lines in the village, building more water pumping stations, and making investments in the Thach Mon, Thach Dong, and Dong Tien handicraft installations to increase export goods production, effect socioeconomic changes, consolidate the confidence and enthusiasm of the party organization and local people, and score achievements in honor of the Sixth Party Congress.

BAC BO DELTA DISTRICT HOLDS PARTY CONGRESS

OW031135 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 2 Sep 86

[Text] Hai Hau district of Ha Nam Ninh Province was the earliest district in the Bac Bo Delta to hold its party organization congress. From 26 to 30 August 1986, the party organization discussed, analyzed, and commented on the CPV draft political report to be presented at the Sixth National Party Congress and the draft political report of the provincial party committee. It also thoroughly discussed and assessed the local situation during the 1983-1985 period and set forth the orientation and tasks for its 1986-1988 term, determined to effect a new change in developing the advantages of the district in its marine economy, building an agriculture, industry, and fishery to the level of the district's potential.

Over the past 3 years, despite difficulties encountered by the country and the district, which is the coastal region with saline and alkaline soil, the Hai Hau party organization and people have carried out intensive cultivation and stabilized grain production by achieving an average yield of nearly 82 quintals of grain per hectare and increasing paddy output by 22 percent over the previous period, thus achieving a per capita grain output of 434 grams in paddy equivalent.

Over the past 3 years, Hai Hau has developed many typical models and gained useful experience in maintaining public order and security, building a coastal defense line, and caring for the local people's material and spiritual life. For many consecutive years, Hai Hau has held the country's district cultural banner for consolidating its party chapters and its contingent of key cadres. Nearly 90 percent of the village-level party organizations and almost 70 percent of the party organizations and chapters of various organs have met the criteria for being steadfast party organizations.

At the congress, on the basis of self-criticism and of facts in the district and primary installations, delegates discussed and pointed out outstanding weaknesses and set forth the orientation and measures to help party organizations renovate their thinking, organize their activities, build a rational economic structure and new management system, and develop the actual potentials and advantages of the coastal district, the gateway to the Bac Bo Delta.

Delegates also concentrated on analyzing the imbalances and defects in the current economic structure of the district and the shortcomings in the management of cooperatives and financial matters as well as the imbalances in production in various areas and installations and in the distribution of the population, which had maintained a high growth rate.

The congress decided that in the coming 3 years, Hai Hau should strive to maintain intensive cultivation and continue large-scale hog breeding and further increase the output and yield of grain and other agricultural crops while seeking to remove difficulties in salt production and fishery as well as in the processing of marine products.

Delegates unanimously approved a resolution containing the following specific objectives for the 1986-1988 period: achieving a paddy yield of 85 quintals per hectare, a 3 percent increase in the output of food crops in terms of paddy equivalent, a 22 percent increase in pork production, an output of 63,000-65,000 tons of salt, and an output of 2,000-2,200 tons of sea fish; expanding the acreage of industrial and export crops, such as rush, jute, mulberry, and peanut and increasing the output of these crops; developing small industry, handicraft, and fine arts production; and deoubling the value of export goods.

Thanh Hoa Districts Hold Congresses

[Text] As of late August Nong Cong, Tho Xuan, Nha Son, Thieu Yen, Cam Thuy, and Ha Trung district in Thanh Hoa Province had completed their party congresses. Party organizations of these districts organized and supervised the party congresses, while helping various sectors to eradicate harmful insects, care for the 10th-month rice, control floods and typhoons, and prepare land for the winter crop, thereby creating a seething emulation impetus among the masses to score achievements to welcome the Sixth CPV Congress.

These districts' party organization congresses discussed various basic standpoints to the center and the province in strengthening the economic structure of the agricultural, forestry, fishery, and industrial sectors; accelerating exports, consolidating socialist production relations, improving the management system, and combining economic tasks with national defense. The party organizations of Tho Xuan, Nong Cong, Nha Son, and Thieu yen districts are striving to help various sectors to become self-reliant, overcome negative phenomena, increase grain and local industrial output, apply scientific and technological advances to obtain better results in production and combine the three economic components of state-run, collective, and family.

These congresses also spent time on exchanging views and contributing ideas to the party building task, discussed cadre-related tasks and tasks concerning party chapters and basic party bases. They also discussed measures to improve work methods and enhance the quality of party members, while exchanging views on problems of party discipline and the functions, tasks, and activities of mass organizations.

CHI LIANG ARMY CORPS STUDIES POLITICAL REPORT

[Text] Developing results of the recent self-criticism and criticism drive, the Chi Lang Army Corps has held a conference to study seriously and contribute ideas liberally to the draft political report of the party Central Committee and the report on the amendment to the party statutes to be presented at the Sixth CPV Congress. The conference also produced a report on the party organization's leadership task during the past period for serious review and objective evaluation. Each party organization of the corps has also clearly pointed out mistakes, shortcomings, weaknesses, and responsibilities of leading cadres of party committees. Congresses at various levels of the corps also set forth concrete measures to ensure combat readiness and strengthen the capability of their units.

During the same period, the corps' party committee also launched an emulation drive to fulfill three objectives: namely, training for effective combat readiness, seriously observing Army discipline, and striving to improve the material and spiritual life of the corps satisfactorily.

HOANG LIEN SON DEALS WITH CADRES SHORTCOMINGS

[Text] During the recent self-criticism and criticism drive, people of various nationalities in Hoang Lien Son Province contributed almost 10,000 ideas criticizing party cadres and members collectively and individually. Various key cadres of the province, branches, sectors, and districts held talks with the people and integrated 3,500 ideas on the task of party building.

Standing bodies of various party organization echelons have assigned personnel to various sectors, units, and party cell committees to satisfactorily organize political activities for every party member. Some 93 percent of the party members in the province have conducted self-criticism. Most of the shortcomings of party cadres and members involved embezzlement, illegal trading, corruption, and land-grabbing. It is noteworthy that many party cadres and members lost their combat zeal, neglected their duties, and paid less attention to revolutionary qualities and ethics. Some party cadres and members still oppressed the people and persecuted those who criticized them at various levels.

Generally speaking, the province was still slow in dealing with party cadres and members who failed to redress their shortcomings. This has caused a failure in enhancing the party combat spirit and in strengthening the people's confidence. In addition to making preparations for party organization congresses at various levels, the Hoang Lien Son party committee is formulating concrete plans to supervise various grassroots units to accelerate the second phase of self-criticism and criticism drive. It is encouraging cadres from the internal affaris organs to accelerate party building tasks and promptly discover shortcomings of party cadres and members. Various serious violations of regulations, newly found mistakes, and personnel who persecuted those who criticized them must be promptly reported to the province for serious actions to ensure the people's confidence.

The Hoang Lien Son party committee also urged districts to accelerate tasks on classifying party members, evaluate the performance of party members, formulate plans to improve the quality of party cadres, and assign more cadres to help organize party organization congresses at various levels.

HAYDEN TO DISCUSS AID IN PAPUA NEW GUINEA

[Text] Australia's Minister for Foreign Affairs Mr Hayden goes to Papua New Guinea tomorrow for exploratory talks on the future of Australian aid to Port Moresby. Mr. Hayden's 2 days of talks with the government of Papua New Guinea's Prime Minister Mr Wingti will also cover possible financial assistance for Papua New Guinea in dealing with border crossers from Irian Jaya. From Canberra, Graham Dobell:

[Begin Dobell recording] Mr Hayden will given a speech tomorrow night to a conference on the ethics of development assistance and then spend 2 days discussing the practical aspects of Australia's tightened approach to foreign aid. Federal cabinet last week looked at Australia's 5-year aid program to Papua New Guinea and had asked Mr Hayden to report back on the restructuring of the program. This is in line with Mr Hayden's recent comments that development aid must suffer at a time of budget restraint.

The foreign minister is expected to tell Port Moresby that while it suffers a cut of $10 million [Australian dollars] in the aid it received in the last month's budget, it still is better than most other aid areas.

Under the present 5-year arrangement, Australia's direct budgetary aid is to be cut at an annual rate of 5 percent in real terms. In his talks with the prime minister, Mr Wingti, and the finance minister, Sir Julius Chan, Mr Hayden is to discuss the options available for further cuts in the aid payments, but it is also expected the talks will cover Port Moresby's need for further money to cover the relocation costs of border crossers from Irian Jaya. Mr Vagi says the suggestion that Australia may further cut aid to his country means a special relationship between the two countries can no longer be taken for granted. The talks with Mr Hayden are also expected to consider Port Moresby's need for further funds for the relocation of border crossers from Irian Jaya.

AQUINO WARNS AGAINST U.S. INTERFERENCE

[By Georges Biannic]

[Text] Manila, Sept 10 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino has warned Washington not to interfere with her government, but said that she may adopt a U.S.-backed hardline stance against communist rebels if they reject her peace efforts. Mrs Aquino leaves Monday for a week-long official visit to [the] United States, the Philippines' former colonial ruler and currently its top aid donor and trade partner. Two strategic U.S. military bases are located near Manila. The Philippines leader made the statements in an interview here given after the oath-taking ceremony of new presidential press secretary, retired AFP Manila bureau chief Teodoro Benigno.

Recent U.S. press reports said administration officials were concerned that Mrs Aquino was being too soft on communist rebels, with whom her emissaries are currently negotiating for a ceasefire. The White House has denied the reports, but U.S. officials have openly pressed for her to pursue the armed struggle along with the negotiations -- a move Filipino nationalists, including some members of Mrs Aquino's government, see as meddling by the United States.

Asked during the interview here if she would express concern during her visit about such interference, Mrs Aquino laughed: "So long as they don't interfere -- but if they interfere, okay, you watch out. "But if they're not interfering," she added in a more serious tone, "I won't even talk about it."

She said her predecessor, Ferdinand Marcos, a U.S. ally deposed by a revolt in February after 20 years in power, "needed the United States to prop him up, so he allowed them to interfere." Mrs Aquino said she was constantly being asked how she felt about President Ronald Reagan, a longtime Marcos friend, since Mr Reagan "hasn't really treated you or your husband very well."

Mrs Aquino and her late husband, assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, lived as self-exiled Marcos opponents in Boston, Massachusetts, until Mr Aquino was shot dead at Manila Airport on his return here in August 1983. Friends say they were treated coldly by U.S. officials during their exile. "I always say what is past is past," she said. "His (Mr Reagan's) friendship for Marcos is something personal. So long as their friendship doesn't intefere with my government, it's okay.

"As far as I am concerned, the two of us can start on a clean slate and just work to the mutual advantage of the Philippines and the United States. I don't think I'll have any problems" during her visit, she said. "I'm not about to fight with everybody, so I've already psyched myself," she added. "I'm, just gonna make friends: whatever will be for the good of the Philippines." Asked about the communist New People's Army rebels with whom her government is currently holding ceasefire talks, Mrs Aquino reiterated her basic stand that "I want to exhaust all peaceful efforts first, but if all peaceful efforts fail, then we will just have to use force."

Despite her meeting last week with Muslim separatist leader Nur Misuari, she discounted the likelihood in the near future of meeting the communist negotiators, saying the NPA would for the moment be dealt with by her representatives. "I guess it takes longer," she said. "These are two different problems."

Mrs Aquino and Mr Misuari, chairman of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), agreed Friday on a "continued cessation of hostilities," but their meeting was marred by a breakaway MNLF faction's attack on a Roman Catholic church that left 18 dead. She also recalled a staring match during her meeting with Mr Misuari, recounting how he had coldly sized her up throughout their two-hour meeting in a rebel stronghold in Jolo town, site of numerous bloody MNLF-government clashes since the Muslim rebellion began 14 years ago.

"I think he was trying to outstare me or something," she said. "His eyes were focused on me all the time. You know, I was not about to retreat from this. I guess most of the time he was trying to size me up. In fact I told him: 'It must be very difficult for you, because my husband always told me that...(Muslims) consider women as second class citizens.' Anyway, I said that even if I am a woman ... I am very determined as far as my search for peace is concerned," Mrs Aquino explained.

The U.S.-educated Mrs Aquino, 53, sat during the brief interview behind an uncluttered desk flanked on one side by bulletproof windows with panes at least an inch thick. A portrait of her assassinated husband hung on a wall facing her in the spacious and well-appointed office in a guest house of the former presidential palace, Malacanang.

RALLY DEMONSTRATES SUPPORT FOR U.S. BASES

HK090657 Manila THE MANILA JOURNAL in English 8 Sep 86 p 8

[By Hector Soto]

[Text] Angeles city -- Close to 10,000 residents here headed by Mayor Francisco Nepomuceno held a mass rally yesterday to dramatize their support for the retention of the U.S. military bases in the Philippines.

The placard-bearing marchers coming from various sectors of the city gathered at the Nepo Mart square and converged at the main gate of Clark Air Force Base where a battery of speakers justified the retention of the U.S. military bases.

Mayor Nepomuceno stressed the importance of the bases in the country not only for the defense of the Philippines but also for the whole of Southeast Asia.

He said that he does not believe that the bases serve as magnets of a nuclear attack because he is yet to hear of an account of a country being invaded because of the presence of U.S. bases.

Assailing some of the present government officials who were fighting for the removal of the U.S. bases, Nepomuceno said that it is ironic that this "super Filipinos which call themselves as nationalists have been residents of the U.S. and continue to patronize living in U.S."

Nepomuceno explained that the U.S. bases in the country continue to support the economy and their removal would be disastrous particularly to the community near the U.S. bases.

Other speakers in the rally were Vice Mayor Robin Nepomuceno, Cesar Reyes, and former Angeles city vice mayor Aster Angeles and Mrs. Sylvia Antonio.

Survey on Retention of Bases

HK081311 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 8 Sep 86 p 21

[By Glenda Gloria]

[Text] Majority of the people in the countryside favor a referendum to decide whether the US bases will be retained or not after 1991.

A summary of consultations done in 24 provinces by the Bishops-Businessmen Conference of the Philippines (BBC) arrived at this conclusion, which will soon be presented to the Aquino government.

The provinces include Ilocos Norte, Cagayan Valley, Batangas, Negros Occidental, Leyte and Zamboanga. The BBC has yet to consult 48 more provinces before the final draft of the nationwide consultations.

Despite this sentiment on the US bases, the survey shows a strong clamor for economic and political independence and the banning of foreigners from further exploiting the country's natural resources.

People also feel that the antagonistic relationship between the civilians and military in the countryside has not changed although "mutual efforts are being undertaken to improve it."

Free education, a provision recently approved by the Con-Com [Constitutional Commission] was also a popular clamor among the sectors surveyed by the BBC. A proper re-orientation of education, focusing on value formation and nationalism, has also been demanded by them.

This kind of people's participation, the BBC said, will not only benefit the Con-Com, but the policymaking body of the Aquino government as well.

The consultation will involve the direct participation of about 9,000 multi-sectoral leaders throughout the country and also serve as a "political education."

The surveyed provinces have also demanded the improvement of roads and prefer more autonomy for their areas.

The majority likewise believe that the Muslims affected by the Tripoli Pact of 1976 "were not properly represented in the negotiatons."

The sectoral representatives have expressed disagreement with the government's policy of appointing local officials and asked that the power to elect officials be given back to the people.

The nationwide consultations are expected to end this year. Sponsoring this program aside from the BBC are the Philippine Jaycees, Catholic Educators Association of the Philippines, NAMFREL [National Citizens' Movement for Free Elections], the different chambers of commerce and industry, Communications Foundation for Asia, Catholic Broadcasters League of the Philippines and the Lakas ng Sambayanan [Strength of the Nation].

CABINET, ENLARGED SECURITY COUNCIL MEET

[Text] Manila, Sept 10 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino's cabinet members were unusually tight-lipped Wednesday after the first meeting since a bitter public squabble erupted between two key ministers over the approach to the communist insurgency. Mrs. Aquino, who is due to leave Monday for a week-long visit to the United States, convened the National Security Council (NSC) for the first time prior to the cabinet meeting and expanded its membership from five to 11.

Ministers were unusually restrained when they emerged from the presidential palace, unlike after previous cabinet meetings when they freely answered the most sensitive questions at the doorstep. Ministers declined to answer queries Wednesday, a possible indication that Mrs. Aquino had disciplined her cabinet, longtime palace reporters said.

Press Secretary Teodoro Benigno told a news conference later he was "absolutely surprised" no quarrel broke out during the cabinet meeting. Asked why cabinet members were silent after the meeting, Mr. Benigno said: "I have no knowledge on that."

Mrs. Aquino told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE in a recent interview that following the quarrel between Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Local Governments Minister Aquilino Pimentel, "I guess it takes one more reminder." "I guess I just have to tell them again: 'Okay, you know we're in one team, and that we have to work well with each other.'" Mr. Pimentel last week dared Mr. Enrile to resign or risk being fired for hardline statements allegedly undermining Mrs. Aquino's peace efforts.

Mr. Benigno said the cabinet discussed Mrs. Aquino's U.S. visit and the country's mothballed nuclear power plant. Manila is trying to void its contract with the U.S. firm Westinghouse, which built the two-billion-dollar facility, saying the terms were unfair and the plant substandard. Mr. Benigno said six new members including himself and Mr. Pimentel are to join an expanded NSC that originally included only Mr. Enrile, Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, Vice President Salvador Laurel, Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales, and Armed Forces Chief General Fidel Ramos. The NSC, created last month by presidential order, is the highest policy-making body on security affairs. The other new members are Education Minister Lourdes Quisumbing, Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez, Finance Minister Jaime Ongpin and Budget Minister Alberto Romulo.

Mr. Laurel, who is also foreign minister, told reporters after the cabinet meeting that "we're not supposed to talk about (the NSC). It's a closed-door affair. Nothing said there should be mentioned." On the timing of the meeting, he said: "This is the right time for it."

Mr. Enrile and Mr. Pimentel, emerged separately from the palace following the cabinet meeting. Mr. Enrile refused comment, but Mr. Pimentel said relations between the two men were "civil" and "proper." "My reaction will depend on his pronouncements," he said. Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra, the chief negotiator with communist rebels, said the cabinet took up the Enrile-Pimentel conflict, "But this was discussed in strict confidence."

ENRILE REASSURES AQUINO OF SUPPORT FOR NEGOTIATIONS

[Excerpt] Manila, Sep 9 (BERNAMA) -- Philippine Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile Tuesday reassured President Corazon Aquaino of his support to the ongoing peace negotiations between the government and the National Democratic Front (NDF). He made this assurance during a telephone conversation with the president, presidential spokesman Teodoro Beningno told reporters Tuesday. He had no other details of the discussions between Enrile and Aquino, he said.

The assurance cam as reports quoting some ministers as saying that Enrile and the military were "sabotaging" the peace talks between the government and the NDF -- the political front of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines and its armed wing the New People's Army (NPA).

The defense minister on Monday lashed at his critics in the government and challenged them to come out and out and tell the people what was actually going on. "I am saddened that those in the government are not saying anything," he said. "My patience is running out that I might go on Rambo even if I am alone," he was quoted as saying. FNRILE, RAMOS URGE AQUINO TO WITHDRAW CEASE-FIRE

[Text] Defense and armed forces officials yesterday [9 Sep] urged President Aquino to withdraw her 30-day cease-fire offer to the communist rebels. Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said the communist rejection of the president's cease-fire offer could lead to a resumption of full scale military operations against the New People's Army. The call for the abrogation of the cease-fire offer was made by Minister Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos in yesterday's AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] command conference at Camp Aguinaldo. In a speech later, Minister Enrile accepted a the challenge of the National Democratic Front, which rejected the cease-fire. He addressed the Publishers' Association of the Philippines at the Silahis Hotel yesterday afternoon.

[Enrile recording indistinct]

For his part, General Fidel Ramos asked President Aquino to abrogate the cease-fire agreement in Davio del Norte because it is disadvantageous to the government. Ramos pointed to the recent ambush in San Vicente, Davao del Norte, by the NPA when 15 army rangers were killed and 15 others wounded. He said that the ambush was a blatant violation of the cease-fire agreement entered into between Acting Governor Prospero Amatong of Davao del Norte and the NPA in the area. He said the ambush was premeditated [words indistinct] caught by surprise.

Despite the communist rejection of her truce offer, President Aquino yesterday reiterated that her policy is [words indistinct] to achieve a peaceful and non-violent solution to the insurgency problem. Her reiteration of the policy, which she first announced in her commencement address at the University of the Philipiines last April 21st, was announced by Press Secretary Teodoro Benigno in a press briefing at Malacanang. Benigno disclosed that the president has scheduled a meeting of the National Security Council [NSC] for a first meeting.

Aside from the president, members of the NSC include Vice President Salvador Laurel, Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, and Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales. Laurel said matters pertaining to national security should not be discussed in public.

MINDANAO COMMUNISTS REJECT DAVAO CEASE-FIRE PACT

[Text] The Mindanao Commission of the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] said that the regional cease-fire reportedly concluded in Davao between the rebels and government officials is null and void. Therefore, all NPA units in the entire country are under orders to confront any assaults and attacks mounted by the armed forces. However, the Mindanao Commission stated that any cease-fire agreement concluded between the National Democratic Front [NDF] and the Aquino government will be recognized by the NDF, CPP, and the NPA in Mindanao and other parts of the country. The Mindanao Commission's declaration was published by the BALITA NG MALAYANG PILIPINAS [NEWS OF THE FREE PHILIPPINES] in response to President Aquino's call for a temporary truce.

PLOT TO KILL REBEL PRIEST BALWEG REVEALED

HK090443 Manila THE MANILA TIMES in English 5 Sep 86 p 16

[Text] Baguio City — Renegade priest Conrado Balweg has been marked for liquidation by the New People's Army (NPA) based in Northern Luzon, insiders of communist organizations in the area disclosed yesterday.

Balweg is now leading NPA's splinter organization -- the Cordillera People's Liberation Army (CPLA) -- since his expulsion from the CPP [Communist Party of the Philippines]-NPA last April 25.

Sources said NPA groups under "Ka Benjie" and Wilfredo Falag-Ey have planned to liquidate Balweg. Assigned to kill Balweg was NPA terrorist Joseph Immaog, a native of Barangay Basao, Tinglayan, Kalinga-Apayao.

Balweg's planned assassination was an offshoot of the ongoing rivalry for supremacy in the Cordilleras between the hardcore communist CPP-NPA and the reformist CPLA.

CPLA was established last April 7, 18 days before Balweg was expelled from CPP-NPA due to alleged sowing of intrigues between NPA lowlanders and NPA Igorots, misappropriation of dissident funds, womanizing, giving unauthorized media interviews and intolerance to criticism.

Apparently insiders said, CPP-NPA Northern Luzon Front Chief Ignacio Capigsan resented Balweg's objective of establishing a renegade group in the Cordilleras.

They said they fear a shooting war between the NPA and CPLA would start if their "battle for supremacy" would continue.

Further on Shootings

[Text] Manila, Sep 10 (AFP) -- A captive suspected communist guerrilla broke free from his military guards, shooting dead one of them, at the gates of the Armed Forces HQ near here Wednesday, military spokesmen said. Two suspected New People's Army (NPA) guerrillas, one called Reynaldo Andaya and another identified only as Ely, had been arrested in a raid Wednesday and were being brought by two military escorts to Camp Aguinaldo in a jeep when the shooting occurred, the spokesmen said. Just as the jeep was about the enter the camp, which houses the Defense Ministry and the Armed Forces Headquarters, one suspect snatched one of his escorts' pistols, shot them both, and escaped. However, Mr Andaya was caught between the two fallen soldiers and was recaptured. He denied any involvement in the communist underground and in the attack in an interview aired by government television.

The station, citing witnesses, said that a third man, a bystander, may have helped the escapee. One soldier was slain in the shooting while the other, a captain, is in serious condition, military spokesmen said. Earlier police and military spokesmen had a said two soldiers had been killed.

The spokesmen quoted military intelligence officers as having said Mr Andaya was in the order of battle of the 16,500-strong NPA, the guerrilla wing of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines. The government station said that Mr Andaya and the other suspect arrested Wednesday may have been part of an NPA team assigned to monitor events at the sprawling camp, located in a suburb of Quezon City near here.

The two suspects were arrested at a house near the camp earlier in the day. Then entire camp was placed on full alert after the shooting. Government and communist representatives are at present engaged in peace talks.

Two New People's Army (NPA) guerrillas were killed and a soldier wounded in the operations in the hinterlands between Capiz and Iloilo Provinces on Panay Island, PNA said, quoting the army commander who led the attack.

The biggest of the three camps, hidden in a valley near Tapaz Twon 380 kilometers (228 miles) south of Manila, was defended by some 100 NPA guerrillas who retreated after a two-day army offensive ending Tuesday, PNA said. CORPORATION SUSPENDS NUCLEAR PLANT PAYMENTS

HK280311 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 27 Aug 86 p 9

[By Staff member Ray Enanao]

[Text] The state-owned National Power Corp. (NPC) has suspended payments to Westinghouse International Project Co. and insurance firms following government's decision to mothball the $2.3-billion Bataan nuclear power plant.

Josue d. Polintan, NPC senior vice president, confirmed this yesterday even as he disclosed that "mothballing operations" have started on the project.

Before the decision to shut down the nuclear plant last June 30, NPC had been paying a premium of $5 million to $7 million a year for an all-risk insurance on the plant, including equipment and fuel that had been stored in the Bataan site.

On the Westinghouse contract to build the project, Polintan said NPC has also stopped payment of "suspension charges" of $200,000 a year, not including other expenditures for support services and personnel.

"The order from the national government through a presidential Committee chaired by spokesman Rene Saguisag is to stop implementation of the nuclear plant contract," Polintan said.

However, he said, NPC has refrained from sending out official notifications to various creditor banks of the project in the absence of specific instructions from the Saguisag committee.

The national government decided two weeks ago to assume the foreign obligations of NPC on the nuclear plant, which is estimated at $1.345 billion as of February 28, 1986.

Foreign lenders to the project including the United States Export-Import Bank [Eximbank], have to be officially notified of the plant's scrapping as stipulated in loan agreements.

The U.S. Eximbank has the biggest exposure in the project or $644.4 million.

Banking sources said the Government could face a default situation on this reported requirement.

Polintan said the NPC needs a formal instruction from the Saguisag Committee concerning the "extent" of the mothballing operation. He said mothballing could mean either resale of the plant itself or its operation at a later date.

He said banks have to be clarified on the exact status of the plant.

GOVERNMENT CRITICIZED FOR SUBSERVIENCE TO IMF

[By Claro Fernandez]

[Text] The Aquino administration was accused yesterday of being "equally subservient" to the International Monetary Fund as the discredited Marcos regime.

A new group, Makabayang Kilusan ng Masa [Nationalist Movement of the Masses] (Makisama), held its founding convention yesterday, attended by some 1,000 delegates representing 100 labor, community and youth organizations, at the St. Mary's Auditorium in Quezon City.

The charge of subservience was aired by keynote speaker Renato Constantino, who said that the new government's emphasis on agricultural development at the expense of basic industrialization is a tell-tale sign of being captive to the dictates of the IMF.

He added that honoring all debts, including those which are unjust, the imposition of trade liberalization, privatization of government-owned and-controlled corporations and the recent retrenchment of thousands of government employees "similarly lead to this conclusion."

While the Aquino government has been peddling the line that the cause of the national crisis has been the sole fault of deposed President Marcos, Constantino said, the problem is rooted to the foreign-dominated economic system imposed by IMF.

He said foreign domination of the economy will worsen as President Aquino leaves for the United States to obtain the U.S. "blessing" for her economic policy that do not differ much from the IMF-imposed debt and recovery plan.

Constantino warned that the scheme to sell the country's debt would only increase the holdings of international financing institutions as they negotiate to acquire non-performing assets and other businesses at bargain prices.

"Ito ay panibagong pagpapalimos (This is another begging mission)," Constantino said, stressing this appears to be the new government's approach in solving the national economic crisis.

"Ang mga ito ang pikakaugat ng ating kawalang kalayaan at patuloy na paghihirap (These are the very roots of our economic dependence and poverty,)" Constantino said.

These realities, he said, were not removed by the events last February, pointing out that colonial system is being preserved by the new government.

PLAN TO SEEK HALT TO PARIS CLUB PAYMENTS CONFIRMED

HK090829 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 8 Sep 86 p 7

[Text] The Central Bank [CB] last Friday confirmed a government plan to request for a suspension of Paris Club debt payments falling due after June 30, 1986 in preparation for talks with the country's official creditors during the latter part of this year.

Reacting to a BUSINESS DAY story (see BUSINESS DAY, Sept. 4), the CB, in a press statement, said "the government may in the interim request for a suspension of payments of debts falling due after June 30, 1986 preparatory to any negotiations with the Paris Club in the latter part of the year."

The CB however "categorically denied" that the government has already asked for a suspension of payments of all debts due in the second semester to creditor-governments participating in the Paris Club.

The Paris Club is a forum of industrialized countries for negotiating debts of developing countries. In the case of the Philippines, Paris Club participants are France, Finland, West Germany, Italy, the United States, Belgium, Switzerland, Canada, Japan, United Kingdom, Australia, Austria and the Netherlands.

The CB further stated that it "disclaims knowledge of a telex supposedly signed by Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin and Central Bank governor Jose B. Fernandez Jr. conveying this alleged government decision to Jean Claude Trichet chairman of the Paris Club."

A senior finance ministry official last Friday confirmed the existence of the controversial telex but pointed out that it "was just a draft." BUSINESS DAY sources at the CB indicated there is a plan to send the telex to the Paris Club.

Pending the actual suspension of shipments, the CB said the government continues to allow payments of Paris Club obligations maturing after June 30 this year.

In the direct telex which the government will shortly send to the Paris Club, the CB is officially requesting that all loans maturing from July 1 to Dec. 31 this year be included in the next debt restructuring talks with the Paris Club.

In the telex, the government said it cannot repay these loans without adversely affecting the country's international reserves, which, at present, stand at about $1.75 billion.

"To remit payments of all Paris Club loans falling due in the second half of 1986 would entail a huge foreign exchange outflow and would adversely affect the country's international reserve and balance of payments position," the telex said.

"At this time, even with the country's quite comfortable reserve position, it still needs to conserve its foreign exchange resources to finance essential imports, service external obligations and meet IMF (International Monetary Fund) target levels," it added.

Also, talks are set to begin later this month between the government and foreign commercial banks on the restructuring of the country's debts falling due from 1987 to 1991 and the Philippines would like a similar multiyear restructuring agreement with foreign governments, the telex explained.

To prevent a scenairo where foreign commercial banks will "bail out" the creditor governments, which will lead to higher costs of funds and increased dependence on commercial credits, the Philippines needs a parallel restructuring accord with the foreign governments.

In the telex, the government also indicated that some borrowers from the Paris Club continue to experience cash flow problems and cannot meet interest payment schedules.

Some borrowers have officially informed the CB that they can remit only a third of the 40 percent of the interest on loans falling due after June 30 based on the rescheduling terms under the 1984 agreement.

The government indicated that arrears arising from nonpayment of obligations due from June 30 to yearend should be consolidated and included in the next Paris Club restructuring exercise.

Also, the government said the country is expecting new loans secured from and guaranteed by Paris Club members for this semester. Nonpayment of debts to these creditors might result in a halt in the disbursement of these loans.

The last restructuring agreement between the Philippines and the Paris Club was reached on Dec. 20, 1984 and covers principal and interest payments due from Jan. 1, 1985 to June 30, 1986. These obligations were restructured over 10 years with a five-year grace period.

LIBERATION VIEWS NPA GAINS, TASKS

HK210940 (Clandestine) LIBERATION in English Apr-May 86 pp 3-7

[By Abdul Ulap]

[Text] It was the first of its kind in Central Luzon, cradle of the first guerrillas of the New People's Army (NPA). For the first time in 17 years, NPA commanders based there -- the best and the brightest -- conducted an NPA military officers' training course. Held somewhere in the Sierra Madre mountains, the training course coincided with the 17th anniversary of the NPA last March 29, 1986. The training turned out to be a joyful occasion.

But in the beginning, it wasn't.

Training had barely started when the trainees, mostly platoon- and company-level commanders, agitated for deeper discussion about the February "snap revolution" and the Aquino government's call for a ceasefire. Apparently, they were painfully aware that the new developments had put into question the necessity of continuing the armed struggle as well as the continued existence of the NPA itself.

The first part of the training, a lecture on the new situation, had failed to allay their consternation. They became disturbed upon hearing the new guidelines issued by the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Philippines concerning the conduct of tactical offensives. The guidelines had called for the dismantling of the fascist remnants of the Marcos dictatorship but urged a slowdown in big tactical offensives like raids on townhalls. Questioned one guerrilla: "How can you strike at the CHDF [Civilian Home Defense Force] and dismantle them without attacking the town center? Eh, sa munisipyo ang base ng mga 'yan [Their bases are in the minicipalities]."

As the lecture continued, the trainees only became more agitated. Finally, they asked for a break. "Teka muna. Teka muna," they said. "Break muna tayo. Mag-usap muna tayo at magkalinawan. Ano pa ang halaga ng training kung ganito lang ang mangyayari sa NPA [Hold on a minute, let's take a break. Let's talk things over and clear the air. What's the use of such training if this is what will becomes of the NPA]?"

For the whole day, the entire camp then sat down to an open and frank discussion. Everyone took part -- the training command from the NPA General Staff, the trainees, the security detail, the kitchen staff, the medical unit and the masses in the surrounding area. "Walang ranggo-ranggo [There was no pulling of rank]" said one participant. "May panel na magsasalita mula sa training command at may moderator, tapos free for all na ang talakayan [A panel from training command and a moderator spoke, then the discussion turned into a free-for-all]." Added Miguel, an instructor and member of the NPA General Staff: "Parang kapihan talaga [This really is like a coffeeshop discussion]." Lifting his cup of coffee, he quipped, "May tunay pang kape [At least we still have real coffee]."

During the discussion, the guerrillas and the masses raised questions about the role of armed struggle under the new situation. They also asked: What is a ceasefire? Does it involve a laying down of arms or surrender? What is the basis for entering into a ceasefire? What is the nature of the Aquino government? What is the role of the NPA under the new conditions? What is our assessment of the national democratic movement's boycott policy?

The instructors led by Miguel explained that although the Aquino government has made some democratic changes by restoring civil liberties and releasing many political prisoners, the oppressive and exploitative social structures that in the first place gave rise to the NPA still remain intact.

"The peasantry continues to suffer feudal exploitation from despotic big landlords," said Miguel. "Warlords continue to terrorize peasants in the countryside. The military's counter-insurgency drive persists, wreaking havoc on the people's rights and livelihood. Military-armed fanatic cults roam the countryside at will, striking fear among peasant communities. Overall, U.S. imperialism continues to intervene in the country and support reactionary elements in society who in turn ensure the protection of the U.S. military bases and their economic empire." He also said the U.S.-supported AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines], which had been Marcos' main instrument of repression throughout his 20-year rule, has survived the change in government leadership virtually unscathed, and remains a potential threat to the progressive and liberal tendencies of the Aquino government.

For these reasons, the trainors said, the NPA cannot lay down its arms and disband. "The people's army is duty bound to protect what the revolutionary movement and the masses have gained after 17 years of fighting," they stressed. "It is justified to continue waging armed struggle against the repressive remnants of the Marcos regime and certain reactionary elements inside and outside the government who are determined to preserve the old oppressive structures of society and wipe out the people's gains."

After the free-wheeling discussion, everyone felt reassured that their training was not an exercise in futility. They now fully understood that so much still remains to be done to remove the main roots of the people's impoverishment and suffering. As one guerrilla said, "For 17 years, we have been fighting for the people's interests. Our struggle is not yet over."

Indeed, the struggle is not yet over for the NPA, which has emerged as Asia's fastest growing insurgent army. The new political situation, however, has spurred the NPA to adjust its tactics. To show the people the continuing justness and necessity of armed struggle, the NPA presently gives high priority to military operations that have a big political impact and which serve to disrupt the fascist machinery. The NPA's main targets of attacks now are more selective, striking principally at key holdouts of the old regime like the CHDF, private armies of warlords and other paramilitary units as well as detested fascist leaders and units.

This adjustment in tactics has affected the intensity of tactical offensives. From nine times a week in 1985, the rate of tactical offensives dropped to twice a week immediately following the February uprising.

Only with the escalation of counter-insurgency operations in the countryside, has the NPA been recently forced to continue its tactical offensives. It has taken an active defense posture to more effectively protect the masses and revolutionary forces from relentless military assaults.

The NPA certainly has much to protect, considering the many political and economic gains it has reaped after 17 years of struggle. In the 59 guerrilla fronts throughout the country, NPA forces have helped tremendously in transforming exploitative relations in the countryside and building the people's faith in their own capacity to change oppressive conditions. No amount of military black propaganda can erase these innumerable positive contributions of the NPA.

In fact, in their concrete service to the people lies the NPA's greatest strength -- and the military's greatest weakness. The NPA, for one thing, could not have grown to pose such a formidable challenge to the previous regime were it not for the people's strong and deep support. Today, the product of the guerrillas' painstaking work is inscribed in the confident strides of peasant men, women and children in every guerrilla front.

In an interview with LIB [LIBERATION], NPA cadre Miguel discussed the NPA's concrete contributions in improving the people's welfare and in helping them to assert their rights, especially in the advancement of the agrarian revolution in the countryside. He also discussed how the masses and the middle forces themselves, realizing the justness of the revolutionary armed struggle, have helped in building up the NPA.

In implementing the revolutionary land reform program, the role of the NPA initially was to negotiate with the landlords. Landlords were persuaded to lower the land rent which they exact from tenants and raise the wages of their farm workers. In the frontier areas, the NPA also negotiated with concessionaires to allow the people to farm the idle lands within their concessions. These tasks went hand in hand with the NPA's political and organizing work among the peasantry.

"Ngayon, supporting role na lang ang papel namin [now, ours is only a supporting role]," said Miguel. "We only enter the picture when there are misunderstandings. It is now the farmers themselves, through their people's organizations, who do the talking and engage in negotiations. Iginigiit nila ang kanilang mga karapatan ayon sa pag-unlad ng sarili nilang lakas at sa antas na naabot ng kilusang masa sa area [They are pressing for their own rights in accordance with their strength, and to the extent covered by the mass movement in the region]."

For example, in the coastal areas of Aurora Province where the people depend on small-scale logging and making charcoal for a living, the organized masses through their own efforts were able to raise the price of uling [charcoal] from P17 to P22 per sack. Through the same process, Miguel said saltmakers in Central Luzon were also able to successfully demand higher prices for their produce. Another case, he added, is that of a group of workers from a big mining firm in Zambales who were also able to get their fair share in company profits. Through negotiations with the management, and their own concerted efforts, the workers got a P14 across-the-board increase -- the biggest wage increase ever in the history of labor in the Philippines.

In Bicol, Miguel said the peasants would sometimes take over large land holdings of absentee landlords with the NPA's backing. "However, if the landlord is a resident, we approach him and bring to his attention the shareholders' demands. In our experience, it has been easy to strike a mutually satisfying agreement.

"The NPA has also helped the masses plan their mass actions," Miguel noted. "Kasi dapat realistic din yung demands ng masa. Kung masyandong mataas halimbawa, ang hihingin nilang presyo para sa kanilang produkto, baka malugi o matakot ang mga negosyante at wala nang bumili. Ang masa rin ang kawawa. Tinitiyak natin na ang kabutihan ng higit na nakararami ang mananaig [The demands of the masses should be realistic. If they ask for too much in the prices of their products people might be scared off and no one will buy. Then its the masses who will suffer. We are ensuring that the welfare of the majority is of paramount importance].

In other cases, however, you have to be firm with the landlords, said Miguel. He cited the case of Marcos crony Eduardo Cojuangco and one of his logging concessions in Mindanao. He said its operations had caused much erosion and destruction to the land and its resources. "The company wanted to negotiate with us. Name your price, they told us. But the masses wanted them out because the were really very destructive. So we had to tell the firm to leave," said Miguel.

Also a part of the NPA's contributions to the upliftment of the people's economic condition is ensuring the integrity of the environment. "We discourage people from cultivating watershed areas," said Miguel. "We ourselves engage in tree-planting in eroded areas and we encourage the people to do the same."

The NPA has also greatly helped in improving the economic, health and socio-cultural life of the people in many areas of the countryside. The NPA provides seed money or farm animals for the people's cooperatives and also to establish other economic projects. They also provide medical services and train medical workers. Today, many barrios inside guerrilla fronts have their own "homegrown" medical units operated by the peasants themselves.

"In the past, people lived in fear of bandits, cattle-rustlers and other criminal elements," Miguel said. "Gambling and drunkenness were also rampant. But when we began organizing in these barrios, we removed the bandits and rustlers. We discouraged gambling and drunkenness." But in the latter practices, their initial efforts to discourage these failed. "This is because we did not offer alternatives to gambling and drinking. So the next time we went to some barrios, we brought along basketballs, volleyballs and net. We also built basketball courts in some areas. In some places like Samar, we introduced indoor sports like ping-pong. Now, people engage in sports rather than gambling during their leisure time."

"May joke nga ang militar tungkol dito," Miguel said, smiling. "Basta makakita sila ng basketball court sa isang liblib na lugar sa bundok -- NPA area 'yan [the military have a joke about this. If they see a basketball court in some remote mountain area, they say its an NPA area]."

The NPA's contribution to the peasant mass movement and the agrarian revolution have in turn spurred many poor peasants to directly join the NPA, and help build up its strength and influence in the countryside. The peasantry presently comprises the NPA's main force of 15,000 full-time and 20,000 part-time guerrillas. Miguel cited the direct contributions and participation of the peasant masses in actual combat and army-building.

"We usually request various forms of combat support from the people. But the people have gone beyond that. Thousands are offering themselves as fighters for the NPA," he said. "With the presence of so many volunteer fighters, our NPA cadres can now shift to and specialize in politico-militlary tasks."

The organizational expansion of the NPA has also enabled it to form special support groups. These groups mainly perform military tasks and are organizationally distinct from the mass organizations and territorial units in an area. They are organized along special lines of work like intelligence, logistics, ordnance and medical work.

Miguel cited many instances when the masses themselves not only gave combat support but actively participated in fighting alongside the NPA. "I can still remember the battle of Libay-Libay in Mindanao in 1983. The First Scout Ranger Regiment had established a base at Maco, Davao, 12 km away from Libay-Libay town. At that time, the Rangers had not yet fought with the guerrillas and they were being touted as 'panlaban sa NPA. [Anti-NPA Fighters']"

"One morning, hours before dawn, they entered Libay-Libay in search of us," Miguel narrated. "My comrades and I were then meeting in a mountain camp nearby, unaware of the enemy's presence. Since the masses were very vigilant, they searched for our camp and warned us of the enemy's approach. As each hour passed, another group of masses would come up to report on the enemy's movements until we were given a complete intelligence picture."

Miguel recounted that he and his comrades debated whether or not to attack the Ranger team. Two big factors going against them were their unpreparedness and unfamiliarity with the terrain. "It was the masses who finally convinced us to attack, assuring us that they would guide us, for they knew the area like their own backyard," Miguel said.

"So my comrades and I formed two groups, an assault force and a blocking force against more than 50 fully armed troopers," Miguel said. "But because we lacked certain information, our assault force was not able to attack the enemy who ran smack into our blocking force. Unprepared, our blocking force was pinned down. We quickly sent our assault force to reinforce them. But soon, the Rangers also received reinforcements."

But Miguel said they had a big advantage the military didn't have -- the masses' support. "By then, the masses were wondering why the battle was taking so long and were worried that we might be hungry. So they cooked food and brought this to us. Upon seeing us being attacked under heavy fire, they guided us along the unfamiliar terrain. They pulled out our wounded and carried them to safety on carabao-pulled carts. They picked up the guns of fallen troopers and comrades and used these themselves to fight back the rangers."

After a four-hour gunbattle on uneven terrain, the enemy began to retreat. Inch by inch, fired up by the courage and support of the masses, the NPA persevered and won the day. "Without the masses there, we would surely have perished," said Miguel.

He also recounted the story of a three day engagement in Bayog, a town in the Zamboanga Peninsula, which likewise demonstrated the upgrowth of "people power" in the countryside in support of the NPA. "A district guerrilla unit (DGU) had been encircled by soldiers. Upon learning of this predicament from the masses, the front guerrilla unit (FGU) in the area reinforced their embattled comrades," said Miguel. "But reinforcements soon arrived for the soldiers which then encircled the FGU. Finally, the people's militia, supported by the masses, encircled the military reinforcements and harassed the enemy lines."

This encirclement and counter-encirclement operation took three days. In the end, the soldiers got so tired, they gave up and retreated. Some gave away their guns to the people as they fled the area. Miguel said the generals were so incensed that they decided to punish the masses who supported the NPA. They bombed Bayog, killing a number of people, including children.

The role of the tribal masses is also exceptional in the Cordilleras. Here, there are the Seasonal Red Fighters who work nine months a year on their rice fields and three months during the rest of the year as guerrillas. During their full-time stint in the NPA, they play the major role in battles. They provide the main force in large-scale military operations that involve the occupation of municipalities and capitols.

"Through this special group of guerrillas," said Miguel, "sustained operations against enemy forces such as the 11th Infantry Battalion based in Cordillera are possible. Talagang napapagod ang ka-away [The enemy are really exhausted]. With the active involvement of the tribal masses and the people's militia, the NPA cadres' work has now been mostly to provide political guidance.

Miguel also cited the exemplary case of the masses of Bataan last year. "Dito, tampok na tampok ang papel ng masa sa gindwang pagpapasabog ng mga transmission towers ng bataan Nuclear Plant. [Over here, the masses had a large role in blowing up the transmission towers at the Bataan Nuclear Plant]." The NPA ordnance unit that carried out the demolition and sabotage operations was very small. But they received massive support from fishermen knowledgeable in the use of dynamite."

Nearer to the metropolis, the NPA partisans at the Manila Bay area in Bulacan have also gained headway in winning the masses' support. According to Miguel, many fishermen, using their own boats, have joined NPA operations there. "They team up with the partisans in dismantling illegal fishpens in the bay area and in hitting back at abusive military and security guards employed by owners of large fishpens."

These are only some of the many examples of the dynamic and mutually supportive relationship that has developed through the years between the NPA and the masses. But though the NPA and the revolutionary masses have reaped many gains, certain problems remain. These problems are mainly "problems of progress." One example is the problem of resources which cannot keep pace with the NPA's rapid growth.

"Our resources are inversely proportional to our gains in the field," said Miguel. "For example, whenever we gain 50 rifles from an ambush, we automatically have less ammunition in relation to our total supply of rifles. Most of our guns, ammunition and ordnance were acquired through tactical offensives. Pero hindi tayo laging makka-asa sa battle field [however we cannot always rely on acquiring arms on the battlefield]. In the past, we tried to produce our own ordnance. But we found out that it is cheaper to buy bullets than to manufacture them on our own."

The average amount needed to maintain an NPA company, presently the highest formation level of the NPA, comes to around P30,000 a month. This includes expenses for rice, regular viands like tuyo [dried fish], soap, cigarettes, etc. The cost of maintaining a Red fighter everyday runs to P4 to p17, depending on the conditions in an area. "Mura, ano?" [cheap, isn't it] remarked Miguel. "Wala namang salary sa atin. [We aren't paid any wages]. As you can see, many of our fighters are lean and pale. Kulang talaga." [It's just not enough]

While there are progressive legal organizations and institutions which have economic programs in the countryside, Miguel said most of these, sadly, do not respond to the needs of the revolutionary army for adequate nutritious food. "We need more economic programs whose direct beneficiaries are the NPA. Sana matugunan nila ang mga pangangailangan namin [we wish they could supply us with what we need]."

Another problem involves the upgrading of staff work and increase of personnel. The NPA needs specialists in their field who can help serve the growing needs of the revolutionary army. One such field is medical work where the NPA needs more skilled personnel.

The urgency of this problem is rapidly being felt as the guerrilla war advances. Miguel cited the case of a Bicol guerrilla unit which imposed a policy prohibiting offensives with a probable casualty rate of four. "Dahil di nila ma-siguro ito, hindi sila nakapaglunsad ng mga opensiba," he said. "Kasi may mga kaso tayo na di naman fatal ang tama pero namatay ang kasama dahil hindi handa ang medical team [because they cannot make sure of this, they have been unable to launch offensives. This is why we have cases where men have not been fatally wounded but have died anyway because the medical team was unprepared]."

The NPA presently needs doctors and medical personnel willing to work under battlefield conditions, who can treat gunshot wounds and do field surgery, and set up and administer mobile field hospitals. Though the NPA has some skilled medical personnel and even doctors, many, because of lack of training in this type of work, are afraid to treat gunshot wounds with more than a four-inch penetration. To meet this problem, the NPA is urging progressive medical organizations like the Makabayang Samahang Pangkalusugan [National Health Association] (MSP) to reorient their services towards the needs of guerrillas in the battlefield.

Another limitation facing the NPA is the training of qualified personnel to perform management and administration work in the guerrilla army. "Many of our army officers are fighting leaders," Miguel explained. "For a long time, they themselves led squad- and platoon-level formations which carried out relatively small military operations. But with the rise of the NPA's bigger formations like the company, our officers now not only have to lead their men to battle, they also have to master the skills needed in administering and managing larger formations."

At present, Miguel said there is a high casualty rate among NPA officers in the field. "Ikaw na kasi ang namamahala, ikaw pa rin ang humaharap sa labanan," he said. "Hindi halimbawa tulad ng AFP na ang mga opisyal ay utos lang nang utos at malayo sa labanan. Tayo, nasa forefront [One is in command, and one is also on the battlefield. It is not like in the AFP where officers give the orders and stay far from the fighting. With us, we're in the forefront].

Other problems involve developing the NPA structure and recruiting more activists and cadres for special lines of work like propaganda (for the NPA paper PULANG BANDILA [RED FLAG], intelligence, administration and political guidance, ordinance and medical work. To meet these problems, and to further advance the NPA towards a higher stage of struggle, the Communist Party of the Philippines, the NPA's mother organization, laid down its new tasks late last year.

Regularization is the main thrust of the NPA at present. To achieve this, it is pursuing the following tasks:

-- The establishment of companies and even battalions as the principal formations of the NPA;

-- The development of guerrilla units, partisan units and people's militias to company formation;

-- The establishment and strengthening of territorial commands on the regional, provincial and front levels;

-- The systematization and further strengthening of political work within the NPA;

-- The establishment of permanent military schools to train company- and battalion-level cadres;

-- The drawing-up, dissemination and development of regular and special military courses;

-- The step-by-step development of extensive and intensive guerrilla operations leading to the launching of military campaigns and counter-campaigns;

-- The expansion and consolidation of existing guerrilla fronts and partisan fronts;

-- The development of guerrilla bases within the guerrilla fronts;

-- The expansion of the NPA to remaining strategic areas and big islands; and

-- The expansion and systematization of political work among enemy military ranks.

Every national democrat activist and supporter can do much to help the NPA shoulder these tasks and in so doing, further advance the continuing struggle for revolutionary change in society.

To further project itself and attract more recruits, the NPA is presently trying to develop its own identity. "In many mass gatherings, journalists have been asking us why we don't have our own song (internasyunal (the communist anthem) din kasi ang kinakanta namin ["Internationale" is what we sing also]) and our own flag," said Miguel "Noong unang lumabas ang pulang bandila, masayang-masaya ang rank-and-file namin [when the "RED FLAG" first came out our rank and file were very happy]. At last, we have our own paper, they said. So we are now shopping around for our own logo, flag and song, and even a design for the NPA uniform."

The NPA military officers' training course was designed to cope with some of these problems. Through this, the NPA has been able to further develop its officers and teach them combat skills, and more importantly, teach them how to manage and command large formations according to the rising demands of a growing army.

"You can understand then why the first officers' training course in Central Luzon, especially after their fruitful 'Kapihan, [coffeeshop]' was a big boost to the morale of the Red fighters there," said Miguel. In the end, the 17th anniversary of the NPA in Central Luzon proved to be the happiest -- comparable to the region's first celebration of the NPA's founding anniversary in 1970.

The training course was a turning point for the Red commanders and fighters in the region. During the graduation rites, one could perceive a significant change in the trainees' behavior. Unlike the first day of the training, when most were quiet and shy, they were now more confident and voluble. When asked to give closing remarks by the instuctors, all the trainees spoke even without proding. Quipped one trainee who had overcome his shyness, "Mas madali palang lumaban kaysa humarap sa publiko [It turns out that its easier to fight than it is to address the public].

At the end of the graduation rites, which had lengthened to one whole day due to the long speeches, each NPA commander was called to receive his diploma and serial number. The best of the trainees were awarded honors amid much cheering among the masses.

On the 17th year of the NPA, the year of the people's uprising that toppled the Marcos regime, the graduates of the First Central Luzon Officers' Military Training Course went down a makeshift stage somewhere in the Sierra Madres to confidently take over their commands. Like NPA fighters in other parts of the country, they are ready to face the challenges posed by new conditions and negotiate for a meaningful ceasefire with the Aquino government. But they are just as prepared to continue protecting the Filipino people's interests and resist the rampaging counter-insurgency forces of the AFP.

KURANARI HOLDS TALKS WITH ROK COUNTERPART

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 10 KYODO -- Japan and South Korea mended bilateral relations Wednesday after a controversy over remarks by sacked Education Minister Masayuki Fujio on Japan's military actions in Korea before and during the World War II and confirmed mutual efforts to expand relations in the future, a foreign ministry official said. Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari and his South Korean counterpart Choe Kwang-su restored bilateral relations in the first regular Japan-South Korea foreign ministers' meeting. They also confirmed that Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will visit Seoul September 20 to 21 to attend the opening of the Asian Games.

The meeting had twice been postponed, first by a South Korean cabinet reshuffle and then again Monday following disclosure of Fujio's remarks in a magazine interview, in which he defended Japan's 1910 annexation of Korea. The South Koreans reversed their decision to postpone the meeting after Fujio's dismissal Monday. Choe said the Fujio remarks gave a "great shock" to the South Korean Government and its people as they were made by the then incumbent education minister. He also referred to earlier controversial remarks by Fujio concerning a Japanese history textbook, the official said. Choe praised the Japanese Government's action in dismissing Fujio, but added that a "scar" will remain among South Korean people, although the issue has ended at the diplomatic level. Choe asked Japan to bear in mind this feeling among South Koreans, the official said.

The Japanense Government issued a statement expressing regret over Fujio's remarks after his dismissal. Kuranari apologized over the issue and expressed his view that a similar occurrence should never be repeated again, the official said. Kuranari said the Fujio incident aroused needless doubts about Japan's diplomatic policy, which stresses peaceful and friendly ties with neighbouring countries and takes account of the history and emotions of the people of those countries, the official said.

The incident was regrettable for both the Japanese Government and its people, Kuranari was quoted as saying. Kuranari said he took the matter "seriously" as both foreign minister and as a politician and he had made utmost efforts to settle the issue with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, the official said. He said settlement of the Fujio issue served as an example that Japan and South Korea can overcome difficulties by mutual trust and a conciliatory spirit in the future. But he added that the incident provided a warning that Japan must behave with cautious consideration of national emotions, the official said.

The meeting was attended also by Pak Su-kil, first assistant foreign minister, and Kwon Pyong-hyon, director of the Asian affairs bureau from South Korea. Japan was also represented by Shinichi Yanai, deputy foreign affairs minister, and Kimio Fujia, director general of the Asian affairs bureau. The meeting covered such matters as international affairs and the situation on the Korean peninsula as well as bilateral issues, including the trade imbalance, and the fingerprinting and social status of Korean residents of Japan, the official said. The meeting was held in two sessions in the afternoon due to Kuranari having to attend a special cabinet meeting.

On the Soviet Union's recent policy on Asia, as shown in a speech by Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Vladivostok in July, the Japanese and South Korean ministers had a similar assessment, the officials said. He said the Japanese delegation took the view that the Gorbachev speech implied that the Soviets attach no importance to Asia, and their prime concern is to reconstruct relations with the United States. The Soviets are believed to be using China, or the so-called "China card," in order to negotiate for the second summit between Gorbachev and U.S. President Ronald Reagan, the official said. The South Korean representatives held similar views, according to the official.

South Korean officials asked Japan to take a cautious attitude toward links with North Korea and extend support to their country, as their relations with North Korea are at an important stage, the official said. Kuranari said there is no change in Japan's policy toward North Korea and pledged to take a careful attitude, the official said.

South Korean officials insisted that the bilateral trade imbalance now in Japan's favor should be corrected, according to the official. Japan had a bilateral surplus of 3 billion dollars last year, and South Korean officials predicted the surplus will reach to some 6.6 billion dollars this year, he said. They asked Japan to import more South Korean products and reduce nontariff trade barriers and tariffs on 66 items. They also requested Japan to send an import mission to their country and support publicity for South Korean products and cooperate in a "made-in-Korea" fair. South Korea also asked about the possibility of South Korean companies joining in the Kansai International Airport project.

Kuranari promised to make efforts to reduce the imbalance although he said it will take time to resolve the matter, the official said. Kuranari proposed that South Korea expand imports from Japan. Kuranari also said he will take note of the South Korean request concerning the airport project.

On the fingerprinting issue, South Korean officials requested Japan to come up with a solution before Nakasone visits Seoul. Kuranari, however, said although the Japanese ministries concerned are studying the matter there is no concrete plan to solve the issue at present, the official said.

Nakasone, Choe Meet

OW110935 Tokyo KYODO in English 0924 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 11 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone apologized to South Korean Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su Thursday over the controversial remarks by dismissed Education Minister Masayuki Fujio on Japan's annexation of Korea in 1910, a foreign ministry official said. Choe paid a courtesy call on Nakasone after the first Japan-South Korea foreign ministers' meeting ended Wednesday. At the meeting, Choe said the Fujio remarks were settled at the diplomatic level but had left a "scar" among the South Korean people.

"I apologize over the incident. I believe the scar among South Koreans has not yet healed, but I will try to promote friendly ties with South Korea and make a sincere effort to remove the scar in the future," Nakasone was quoted as saying.

Choe said the remarks had hurt the self-respect of South Koreans, adding, however, he rated highly the actions Nakasone took over the issue, the official said. The Japanese Government issued a statement Monday expressing regret over Fujio's remarks after his dismissal.

Choe delivered a message from President Chon Tu-hwan in which Chon said Nakasone's action in the incident was a clear political decision. Chon is expecting Nakasone's visit to Seoul September 20-21 to attend the Asian Games, Choe quoted the president as saying in delivering the message.

Choe asked Nakasone for an improvement regarding the fingerprinting requirement for Korean residents of Japan. Nakasone replied that the issue is being studied by the ministries concerned in order to produce a solution as soon as possible. Choe requested Nakasone to correct the trade imbalance, now in Japan's favor. Nakasone said Japan will try to increase imports from South Korea, the official said. Japan's bilateral trade surplus is expected to double to 6 billion dollars this year compared with last year, according to Choe.

NAKASONE SAYS MIYAKE AIRPORT PROJECT STILL ON

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 11 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Thursday the government plans to go ahead with a project to build a military airfield on Miyake Island despite increased opposition from the islanders. Nakasone was commenting on the victory of three anti-airport candidates who won election to the island's municipal assembly Wednesday.

"There is no change in our policy," Nakasone said, adding that the government plans to persuade the islanders to accept the government plan. The project involves building an airfield for night-land practice by U.S. carrier-borne aircraft.

The latest victory brings to 11 the number of members of Miyake Island municipal assembly who are against the NLP plan. With 89.39 percent voter turnout the opposition groups were also able in a recall vote to unseat a municipal assemblyman who had favored the airfield plan. Three independents in the assembly advocate that the islanders should at least listen to the government's proposal on the construction plan. The assembly had earlier postponed a resolution calling for the construction of the airfield in December 1983 following a volcanic eruption that rocked the island.

LDP FORMALLY ENDORSES NAKASONE TERM EXTENSION

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 11 KYODO -- The ruling Liberal-Democratic Party Thursday formally gave Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone one more year in office through an unprecedented change of party rules. Nakasone's current term as president of the LDP expires at the end of October, and the extension endorsed by an LDP Diet members meeting Thursday means he can stay in the job until October next year.

The decision to change the party rules on the presidential term had been worked out earlier by a party panel, and the party meeting Thursday gave their unanimous approval to the panel recommendation. The dietmen are empowered to act on behalf of the party pending the convening of a full-sized party convention, which is usually held once a year. Article 85 of the LDP by-law provides a maximum of two consecutive two-year terms for the presidency.

The ammendment approved Thursday says that the holder of office may serve one more year provided it is approved by a two-thirds majority of the Party's Diet members. It was the first time in LDP's 31-year history to revise the party presidential term and have it apply to the incumbent. Nakasone is prime minister by virtue of his position as president of the LDP, the majority party in the Diet.

Nakasone, who assumed office in November 1982, staked his leadership last July by calling a general election for both houses of the Diet. The LDP won a landslide victory, and the triumph paved the way for the extension of Nakasone's tenure.

If Nakasone serves his full extended term, he will surpass the late Hayato Ikeda as the second longest serving prime minister in Japan since the LDP was established in 1955. The late Eisaku Sato, who was prime minister between 1964 and 1972, remains the longest serving prime minister with 7 years and eight months in office. Ikeda, Sato's predecessor, served 4 years and four months.

PAK SONG-CHOL ADDRESSES NONALIGNED SUMMIT

["Text" of Speech by Vice President Pak Song-chol, Head of the DPRK Delegation, at the 5th-day session of the Eighth Summit Conference of the Nonaligned Countries in Harare, Zimbabwe -- read by announcer]

[Text] Comrade Chairman, Your Excellencies the heads of states and governments, and delegates: I am very pleased that we are holding the historic conference of the heads of state of the nonaligned countries in Harare, the capital of the Republic of Zimbabwe, a frontline country, which is vigorously advancing under the banner of anti-imperialist independence.

At this significant conference, I, by authorization, first convey the fervent congratulations and warm greetings of friendship that the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the WPK Central Committee and president of the DPRK, extends to the Eighth Summit Conference of the Nonaligned Countries and Your Excellencies the heads of the states and governments and delegates attending this historic conference.

The Government of the Republic of Zimbabwe, which has been faithful to the ideal of the Nonaligned Movement, has enabled this historic conference to be successfully convened by making outstanding preparations for the conference in a short time. We highly appreciate the government of the Republic of Zimbabwe for its efforts for the success of this summit conference. We also warmly congratulate Comrade Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, a prominent anti-imperialist fighter in Africa and the outstanding leader of the Zimbabwean people, who has assumed responsibility as the chairman of this conference.

A total of 25 years have passed since the Nonaligned Movement appeared in the arena of history, reflecting the lofty aspirations of the people for peace and progress, and made its first advance. The Nonaligned Movement has today become an organized and influential political force advancing the history of mankind by consistently waging the anti-imperialist struggle for independence. The road traversed by our Nonaligned Movement has vigorously demonstrated the great vitality of the Nonaligned Movement as an independent political force and the correctness of the policy of the movement.

Today, the progressive people of the world, including the people of the nonaligned countries, are expressing great interest in the Harare summit conference, which is being held during the 25 anniversary of the founding of the Nonaligned Movement. At the same time, they hope that this conference will become a significant conference which records a new chapter in the history of the Nonaligned Movement.

The joint meeting of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and the DPRK Central People's Committee convened last June, under the presidency of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and discussed a series of problems related to the Nonaligned Movement on the eve of the Eighth Summit Conference and clarified again the stand of the government of the republic toward the important problems arising in strengthening and developing the Nonaligned Movement.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Because of the imperialists' maneuvers to maintain and expand their spheres of influence, a grave situation in which the national independence and sovereignty of the nonaligned countries and the developing countries have been brutally trampled underfoot is taking place in succession, peace and security are being destroyed in many regions of the world, and, thus, international tensions are being intensified.

The present era is the era of independence. The people of the world want independence and are advancing along the road of independence. This has become a basic trend which cannot be blocked by any force. Several hundred million people in Asia, Africa, and Latin America who were oppressed under the tyranny of imperialism and colonism in the past have today appeared as the masters of the world and are reforming the world in conformity with their will and demands.

The aspirations of the people of the nonaligned countries not to become the victims of the imperialist ruling forces and to build a new independent, sovereign, and prosperous society have been further enhanced. The people of the nonaligned countries who have achieved the historic cause of national liberation and who have firmly grasped their destinies in their hands through their protracted and arduous struggle are today not only pioneering the road to rehabilitating their countries and nations independently, but are also constantly waging the struggle to build a new peaceful world devoid of aggression and war.

In the international arena today, a situation running counter to the aspirations and desire of the people of the nonaligned countries has been created and, because of this, the Nonaligned Movement today faces the grave challenge of the imperialists and other reactionaries.

The sovereignty of the countries and nations in many regions of the world has been trampled underfoot and peace and security there have been gravely infringed upon by the imperialists. The main tactic employed by the imperialists in dominating and plundering other countries is precisely neocolonialism. Finding that their old colonial methods of ruling no longer work, the imperialists have perpetrated domination over and plundering against the new independent countries and the developing countries through more concealed and cunning neocolonialist methods.

Today, the imperialists have grasped the economies of many developing countries by putting the neocolonialist rope of so-called aid and cooperation on them and have made these countries the sources for their raw materials and the markets for the sale the of their commodities. Thus, they have made money by squeezing enormous profits from these countries.

While tenaciously seeking to plunder other countries, the imperialists have frantically adhered to maneuvers for aggression and war in a bid to realize their wicked ambition to dominate the world. As a result, in the world today, the danger of a new war, a thermonuclear war, is further increasing.

The imperialists are utilizing their agents, including the Israeli Zionists and the South African racists, as shock brigades to realize maneuvers for aggression against the nonaligned and developing countries.

Because of such maneuvers by the imperialists, the people of the nonaligned countries and the developing countries have suffered tremendous sacrifices and disasters and have faced numerous difficulties and obstacles in building a new society.

All facts clearly show that the imperialists are precisely the ringleaders of aggression and plundering, the destroyers of world peace and security, and the ringleaders blocking and hindering social progress. The present situation demands that the Nonaligned Movement be further strengthened and its role be constantly enhanced so that the danger of a new war can be prevented, peace can be preserved, and new progress can be achieved in the cause of building a new independent and prosperous world.

The DPRK delegation presents with courtesy its opinion that in coping with the prevailing situation this conference should pay deep attention to the following problems and take relevant steps for them.

First, the Nonaligned Movement should strengthen by all means its activities to prevent a thermonuclear war and to abolish nuclear weapons. Preventing a nuclear war and preserving world peace and security is a most pressing problem of mankind at present. As the people's struggle against imperialism and for independence has been strengthened and their crisis has deepened at home and abroad, the imperialists have adhered to an extremely adventurous strategy to dominate the world by force.

They have not only more viciously perpetrated their maneuvers to desperately block and hinder the struggle of the people of the nonaligned countries for peace, security, progress, and development and to maintain and expand their spheres of influence, but have also increased armaments on a large scale and accelerated the production and deployment of nuclear weapons. By coming up with even the star wars plan, the imperialists are trying to expand the arms race into space, not to mention the earth.

Because of the imperialists' maneuvers, numerous nuclear weapons have been deployed in many countries and regions around the world, nuclear-powered naval fleets are always afloat on the oceans, including the Pacific and Indian Oceans, nuclear armed forces have been concentrated in major regions of rich resources on a large scale, and new nuclear military bases are being increased. The dark clouds of nuclear war hang over all continents. This threatens the existence of mankind itself.

The danger of a new world war -- a thermonuclear war -- exists in many areas of the world. Today, the Korean peninusla is the place where the danger of a nuclear war is greatest. In South Korea, some 1,000 nuclear weapons, including nuclear bombs, have been deployed. The world knows this. The density of nuclear weapons deployed in South Korea is four times greater than that in the NATO member nations. Throughout the world, with the exception of the NATO member nations, South Korea alone is extensively introducing U.S. nuclear weapons. The United States, which has turned South Korea into a nuclear forward base and a nuclear war launching base, openly threatens the use nuclear weapons against the northern half of the republic. By mobilizing all kinds of nuclear weapons and a great number of troops, it frequently stages war exercise commotions in South Korea and in its surrounding areas.

If a war breaks out in our country, this will soon escalate into a global nuclear war and the Korean people and all of mankind will fall into the catastrophe of nuclear war. Peace is an intrinsic demand of socialism. Proceeding from the essence of the socialist system, we are invariably struggling against war and for peace. Our people want to live in peace and do not want another war to break out in Korea and turn the creations of their peaceful labor into ashes.

The peoples of the nonaligned countries also desire to accelerate the building of a new society in a peaceful environment without war and to live stable and happy lives. The peoples' desire for peace grows with each passing day. War is not something preordained. War can be prevented and world peace and security defended if the peoples of the nonaligned countries struggle by pooling their strength.

The Nonaligned Movement is a powerful antiwar, peace-loving force, and the nonaligned policy is a peace-loving policy based on justice. At present, the Nonaligned Movement should regard the prevention of a new world war -- a thermonuclear war -- and defending world peace as its important mission and should intensify its activities to this end.

We acknowledge that, to prevent a new world war -- a thermonuclear war -- and to defend peace, attention should be directed to the following questions:

1. Active struggle should be waged to halt the arms race and realize the comprehensive and complete liquidation of arms, the liquidation of nuclear weapons in particular. The nonaligned countries should give priority to liquidating nuclear weapons and intensifying the struggle to block the production and stockpiling of nuclear weapons and to liquidating nuclear weapons completely and permanently. The existing nuclear armories should be frozen; nuclear weapons should be drastically reduced; and subsequently, they should be completely liquidated. By so doing, the danger of a nuclear war would be ultimately eliminated. Space should be exploited only for peaceful purposes. It should never become a new stage for the arms race. To liquidate nuclear weapons and prevent a nuclear war, nuclear-free zones and peace zones should be established in many areas in the world and should be ceaselessly expanded. The government of our republic and its people will actively struggle to turn the Northeast Asian region, including the Korean peninsula, into a nuclear-free peace zone and, in unity with the peace-loving forces of the world, will make all efforts to establish nuclear-free zones and peace zones in many areas of the world and expand them.

2. The imperialists' policies of military blocs and military bases should be struggled against and opposed. The nonaligned countries must strongly demand the withdrawal of the aggressive foreign military bases and troops from the territories of other countries. They must not offer their territories as military bases and logistical bases to the major powers. At present, the imperialists are strengthening the existing military blocs and trying to establish new military blocs in the Asia and Pacific region and in many other regions. The member nations of the Nonaligned Movement must firmly oppose the imperialists' maneuvers to establish new military blocs and must actively struggle to dissolve all aggressive military blocs. The nonaligned countries must join no military blocs or treaties and must disallow the imperialists' war exercises, nuclear war exercises in prticular, in their countries and their surrounding areas.

We strongly demand that the United States stop the nuclear war provocation maneuvers staged in South Korea and its surrounding areas and withdraw U.S. troops, military bases, nuclear weapons, and other mass-destruction weapons from South Korea without delay.

The nonaligned countries should send active support and encouragement to the peoples of countries struggling for the withdrawal of aggressive foreign military bases and troops.

3. An antiwar, antinuclear, and peace-loving movement should be vigorously waged. The nonaligned countries should firmly expose and denouce the imperialists' policy of aggression and war and more actively wage a worldwide antiwar and antinuclear struggle in various forms. All nonaligned countries should disallow infringement upon approved rules and standards of practice in international relations and should raise their voices in preventing such acts.

Second, the nonaligned countries should more vigorously struggle to liquidate colonialism and racism ultimately and to achieve national liberation. Liquidating colonialism and racism and achieving national liberation are one of the important missions of the Nonaligned Movement. Today, to maintain their crumbling colonial system by any means, the imperialists are suppressing the peoples' cause of liberation by force of arms. To this end, they have declared that South Africa and Israel are their friends and allies and they are intensifying their cooperation with these countries. Under circumstances in which the colonialists and racists are scheming to obliterate the cause of national liberation and intensify their colonial exploitation and domination, the nonligned countries are facing the important task of more vigorously waging the struggle to liquidate colonialism and racism with their united strength. All nonaligned countries should more unyieldingly struggle to liquidate colonialsim and racism ultimately and achieve the cause of national liberation. All nonaligned countries should support and encourage the oppressed people's struggle for national liberation and independence by all means.

1. The joint struggle to end the racist system in South Africa should be further intensified. Without the elimination of apartheid in South Africa, the cause of national liberation cannot be achieved, the situation in that area cannot be stabilized, and world peace and security cannot be defended. We should actively support the South African people's struggle for freedom and liberation, the Namibian people's struggle to oppose South Africa's occupation and to achieve national self-determination and independence, and the struggle of the frontline countries and their neighboring countries to oppose South Africa's aggression and interference and defend the independence of their countries.

The Korean people firmly denounce the aggression and state terrorism which the South African racists recently committed against Zimbabwe, Zambia, Mozambique, Angola, Botswana, and other frontline countries. To the struggling South African peoples, our member nations should offer all forms of support, including political, diplomatic, material, financial, and military aid, and make the peace-loving countries of the world take practical measures such as the discontinuation of trade, economic sanctions and the severance of diplomatic relations to thoroughly isolate the South African racists in the international community. At the same time, joint pressure should be exerted in all areas on the imperialists who ignore the just voice of the world and continue to intensify cooperation with the South African racists.

This time, many member nations of the Nonaligned Movement in Africa and Asia, protesting the act of the British imperialists who have taken no economic sanctions against South Africa, boycotted the sports games of the British Commonwealth nations. This was a serious blow to them.

We are convinced that the Harare summit will provide an important opportunity for the struggle to end apartheid in South Africa and to achieve the complete liberation of southern Africa.

2. The ambition of the Israeli Zionists' expansionist aggression must be frustrated. We must strongly denounce the Israeli Zionists' criminal maneuvers to oppose the Arab peoples and obliterate the Palestinian people's cause of liberation, and we must continue to extend active support for and solidarity with the just cause of the Palestinian and Arab peoples.

The nonaligned countries should regard the Palestinian and Arab peoples' struggle as a common cause and, according to the resolution of the Seventh Nonaligned Summit, should actively seek joint action to reject Israel in the diplomatic, economic, military, and cultural fields and in the areas of marine and air transport. The Israeli Zionists must abandon their policy of expansion and annexation and withdraw from all their occupied Arab soil without delay.

The United States must halt political and diplomatic support as well as military and economic aid which it offers to the Israeli Zionists. It must abandon its ambition to dominate the Middle East region and take its hands off the region.

3. Solidarity with the peoples of the countries struggling for independence, sovereignty, and a new society should be strengthened. The nonaligned countries should thoroughly isolate the imperialists and their stooges -- who are scheming to obliterate the peoples' cause of building a new society -- and should under no circumstances allow aggression, interference, pressure, or state terrorism against sovereign states.

Third, the nonaligned countries and developing countries should pay close attention to South-South cooperation and seek active cooperation and exchanges first for the questions that are realistically feasible and urgent. South-South cooperation is a new form of international relations between developing countries and its expansion and development are the newly emerging countries' unanimous aspiration. Only through the development of South-South cooperation can the self-reliance of a national economy be strengthened, political independence and sovereignty of countries be defended, and the prosperity and development of countries and nations be achieved.

We acknowledge that the most effective way for nonaligned countries and developing countries to free themselves from the imperialists' exploitation and plunder at an early date and accelerate economic liberation is to strengthen South-South cooperation.

The developing countries have huge human and boundless natural resources, and have many good experiences and technologies which they can exchange with each other. If the nonaligned countries and developing countries properly utilize these possibilities and widely seek economic and technological cooperation and exchanges based on the principle of collective self-reliance, major problems can be solved and self-reliant national economies can be successfully estabished without depending on major powers.

1. The nonaligned countries should expand and develop South-South cooperation in the areas of food and agricultural production and should be self-supporting in solving food problems. We acknowledge that exchanging good experiences and technologies and helping one another build irrigation systems can be an effective way to increase food production. To seek cooperation in building irrigation systems, it would be sensible for the nonaligned countries to work out a 10-year irrigation plan for the developing countries as well as a 10-year irrigation plan for Africa, and to establish a mechanism to regulate cooperation in the construction of irrigation systems.

The developing countries should seek new farming methods suitable for the natural and geographical conditions of each region and country and for their climates, and should universalize advanced experience in this field. At the same time, they should establish various joint enterprises for the production and distribution of fertilizer, farm medicines, and farm equipment. By doing so, they should increase food production.

2. The work of expanding and developing cooperation and exchanges between nonaligned countries and developing countries should be conducted in a practical manner. Above all, we acknowledge that a South bank should be established to solve minor problems causing difficulties in South-South cooperation and to encourage the satisfaction of each other's needs, and measures needed to promote cooperation in the fields of finance and monetary circulation and trade should be worked out. Actively seeking South-South cooperation in all feasible areas among the nonaligned and developing countries is presented as a mature demand of the era. Many countries are already expressing close interest in South-South cooperation. They have worked out affirmative initiatives and are striving to put them into practice. Our country, too, has already put forth a positive proposal to encourage South-South cooperation and is struggling to put it into practice.

The prevailing situation demands that the countries -- which have an interest in settling the questions of the era to free the peoples of the nonaligned countries and developing countries from starvation, poverty, and disease -- hold meetings, even meetings at the highest level, make a breakthrough in seeking South-South cooperation, and expand and develop it ceaselessly.

We realize it is necessary for the leaders of countries that have an interest in South-South cooperation and are ready to seek it to get together at an early date and seek measures and ways to accomplish the historic task of our era. If the nonaligned countries and developing countries actively realize South-South cooperation in agricultural and health work and in many other fields, great progress will be made in eliminating starvation, poverty, and disease and in achieving economic self-reliance.

3. The nonaligned countries, with their united strength, should actively struggle to make the developed countries agree on the establishment of a new international economic order. The nonaligned countries and developing countries should make patient efforts to accelerate negotiations for the establishment of a new international economic order. The nonaligned countries and developing countries should make patient efforts to accelerate negotiations for the establishment of a new international economic order. We should workout a correct negotiating strategy, seek negotiating procedures and ways, and effectively regulate negotiating policy and stands. By doing so, we should further enhance our positions in negotiations.

Today, the worldwide economic crisis is largely linked to the unfair international monetary system and trade order. The nonaligned countries, in adopting decisions at international monetary organizations, should struggle to guarantee equality between the developing countries and the developed countries; to establish a stable and realistic exchange rate system; to regulate international monetary circulation according to demand; and to ensure fair distribution between the developing countries and the developed countries. At the same time, in foreign trade the unfair price system should be improved, thus establishing a fair and profitable price system for primary products. By so doing, fluctuation in primary product prices should be prevented and export incomes should be increased.

Fourth, the nonaligned countries should make positive efforts to strengthen and develop the Nonaligned Movement. By so doing, they should help our Nonaligned Movement successfully accomplish its mission.

1. The nonaligned countries should be faithful to the principle and idea of our Nonaligned Movement. Anti-imperialism and independence are the fundamental ideas of the Nonaligned Movement. At the same time it is the basic principle of the Nonaligned movement to move forward independently without participating in any blocs. In all their activities, the nonaligned countries should firmly maintain independence at all times and oppose all interference by foreign forces. They should never follow other countries blindly. The nonaligned countries should invariably maintain their basic stand to avoid participation in any bloc and firmly struggle to oppose all attempts to separte the Nonaligned Movement from its original principle and objective.

2. The nonaligned countries should defend and develop the tradition of unity. Without the unity of the Nonaligned Movement, the existence of our Nonaligned Movement is unthinkable and its might cannot be talked about. The nonaligned countries should make efforts to put unity in first place, make everything serve this, develop conditions for unity, and eliminate the factor of dissension. Among member nations, the nonaligned countries must not use force of arms and must not commit the act of bringing disputes to a military conflict.

We acknowledge that the disputes between some member countries must not continue endlessly, and decisive measures should be taken to end them.

3. Ways to further enhance the action capability and efficiency of the Nonaligned Movement should be jointly sought. To enhance the action capability and efficiency of the Nonaligned Movement, we think it is important to effecively regulate the activities of the nonaligned countries and to seek methods and procedures for activities and an appropriate global framework to help our Nonaligned Movement more actively participate in the settlement of international questions.

Delegates, ending the division of Korea and achieving its reunification are questions directly linked to the defense of peace in Asia and the world. Thus, these questions have become a focal point of the international political situation. The state of the continuing division in Korea ceaselessly aggravates the situation on the Korean peninsula and its surrounding areas and continuously increases the danger of a new war.

The government of our republic is making all sincere efforts to alleviate tension in Korea and peacefully settle the Korean question through dialogue and negotiation. After entering this year too, the government of the republic, in order to settle the basic question of the peaceful reunification of Korea, declared that tripartite talks should be held between our republic, the United States, and South Korea and highest-level talks should also be realized between the North and South. In addition, beginning with 1 February, it decided to cease large military exercises in all territorial soil of the northern half of the republic and to halt all military exercises during North-South dialogue. It proposed that the United States and the South Korean authorities respond to this.

Nonetheless, the United States and the South Korean authorities, instead of responding to our peace-loving step, answered it by staging the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise in South Korea by mobilizing some 200,000 troops and numerous modern war means. By so doing, they brought the long-awaited Red Cross talks and talks in many other fields, which were arranged through our sincere effort, to the state of suspension.

They openly rave that they will continue the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise and have continued to stage provocative military exercise commotions in South Korea against the northern half of the republic, such as "Ttangpol-86" and "Piho-86." Thus, they are increasing the atmosphere of confrontation and war.

With a sincere desire to eliminate tension in Korea by all means, last June we put forth a new peace proposal for holding talks between military authorities -- talks to be participated in by those holding real military power and representing us, the United States, and South Korea. Our peace proposal has earned active support and sympathy from the nonaligned countries and the peace-loving peoples of the world.

Nevertheless, the United States and the South Korean authorities, even without sitting face to face with us, flatly say that our proposal is propaganda. Thus, they have not accepted our realistic and rational proposal and are continuing to move forward along the road of heightening tension under the facade of the bogus threat of southward invasion. This reveals to the world that the dialogue, detente, and peace the United States and the South Korean authorities clamor about are all fictitious, and that they actually seek only aggression and war.

Despite the unanimous wish of the Korean people and the progressive peoples of the world, no breakthrough has been made in the settlement of the Korean question. This is because of the U.S. two-Koreas policy. It is an unchanging U.S. policy to split Korea in two forever and to dominate Asia and the world by using South Korea as a foothold. Recently, through the South Korean authorities and countries that follow the United States, the United States openly advocated simultaneous UN membership and unilateral entry. It is tenactiously scheming to realize this.

UN membership for our divided is incompatible with reunification of the fatherland. The purpose of this scheming is to formulate and internationalize two Koreas on the UN stage. We acknowledge that simultaneous UN membership for the North and South and unilateral entry by one side are all a policy for the two Koreas. Thus, we oppose and reject both of these.

The North and South must never join the United Nations before our country is reunified, and neither should enter unilaterally. We assert that, if there is a desire to enter the United Nations before the reunification of the country, UN membership must be obtained as a single stage with the same name at least by establishing a confederal system. Our people have the same language and characteristics. They are the same nation and have lived on the same soil for thousands of years. No foreign force can split the same nation into two.

We assert that the 24th Olympic Games should be cohosted by the North and the South. This is also to create a favorable environment to prevent the permanent division of the country and accelerate its peaceful reunification. If our proposal for cohosting the Olympic Games is realized, the Olympic Movement will be rescued from crisis and this will favorably influence national harmony and unity and promote North-South dialogue in our country.

The United States must abandon its anachronistic policy of two Koreas and must cease to incite the South Korean authorities to antagonism and confrontation against us. If the United States is interested in peace on the Korean peninsula and the peaceful settlement of the Korean question, it must assist in its peaceful reunification. The South Korean authorities must stop adulating a foreign force and betraying the nation. They must adopt a national stand and come forth to settle the question with us.

There are many obstacles on our people's road to reunification of the country. However, with the world peoples' active support and encouragment, we will achieve reunification without fail.

Availing ourselves of this opportunity, we extend deep gratitude to the governments and peoples of many nonaligned countries and the progressive peoples of the world who extend unstinted support for and firm solidarity with our people's cause of reunification at all times.

I express my firm conviction that this summit will successfully proceed with the active participation of the delegates of many countries, and will thus greatly contribute to strengthening the might of the Nonaligned Movement. Thank you.

[Report by Yon Hyong-muk, member of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and first vice premier of the State Administration Council, at a report meeting held at the 8 February House of Culture, Pyongyang, on 8 September to mark the 38th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK — live]

[Text] Comrades:

Today, we significantly celebrate the 38th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK, our glorious fatherland, under circumstances in which the whole country is surging with high revolutionary zeal and political mettle and new upsurges are being effected on all fronts of socialist construction.

On the authorization of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and in the name of the WPK Central Committee and the government of the republic, on this felicitous holiday I ardently congratulate all workers, peasants, soldiers, intellectuals, and other people who have devoted everything to fighting for the boundless prosperity of the republic and the victory of the socialist and communist cause. [applause]

Along with this, I extend warm greetings embodying compatriotic love to the South Korean workers, peasants, youths, students, other people of all walks of life, and democratic figures who are bravely struggling for national sovereignty, the reunification of the fatherland, the rights to survival, and democratic freedom in defiance of all kinds of suppression and torment by the U.S. imperialists and the military and fascist elements. [applause]

Also, I send ardent greetings to the 700,000 Koran compatriots in Japan and all other overseas compatriots who, with the honor and pride of being Korean citizens, are powerfully fighting abroad for democratic national rights and the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland. [applause]

In the name of the government of the republic and all Korean people, I also ardently welcome many foreign comrades and friends who are attending this meeting to congratulate us on the national holiday. [applause]

Comrades, the question of power is a fundamental question in the revolution. Only when the question of power is correctly solved can the popular masses become the genuine masters of the state and society and the revolutionary cause of realizing independence be successfully consummated in reliance upon their boundless strength.

Our people staged an arduous and steady struggle for the right to be the masters of the state and society and for their power and brilliantly solved the question of power by founding a genuine people's government, representing and defending the interests of the working class and other popular masses, for the first time in the history of our nation.

The glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, which our people waged under the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, was a struggle for national liberation and independence and, at the same time, a struggle for the power of the working people. During the dark period of Japanese imperialist rule, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth concrete lines for the Korean revolution by embodying Marxism-Leninism and victoriously organized and led the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. In the process he planted deep and strong historical roots for the government of the republic. [applause]

During the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, on the basis of his scientific analysis of our revolutionary duties and social and class relations in our country, established concrete lines on the creation of a people's government based on the worker-peasant alliance led by the working class and relying on the united front of a broad range of popular masses, and created experience needed to build a people's government by realizing these lines in the guerrilla districts. On the basis of the lines on building people's government set forth during the period of anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and precious experience obtained in the struggle to realize them, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wisely led the work of founding a people's government without delay and enforcing all kinds of democratic reforms after liberation and achieved the historic cause of finally founding the DPRK in September 1948 on the basis of success in this work. [applause]

The founding of the DPRK was the resplendent realization of our people's long-cherished desire to establish a genuine government of workers and peasants and was a precious fruition of our people's protracted struggle to become the true masters of the state and society.

With the founding of the Republic, our people were able to more powerfully accelerate the revolution and construction with a strong weapon for socialist construction -- a banner of (?freedom and unity) -- and to proudly emerge in the international arena while upholding the flag of the sovereign and independent state. [applause]

Proceeding from the demands of the Korean revolution and the aspirations of the popular working masses, the government of the republic is a chuche-oriented government, (?chosen), in compliance with the demands of our country's reality, and founded and run by ourselves. Its superiority has been powerfully confirmed through [word indistinct] life.

Up to the present since its founding, the government of the republic, under the wise leadership of the WPK, has excellently carried out its mission as a weapon for the revolution and construction and has attained immortal achievements before the fatherland and the people. [applause]

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The government of the republic has powerfully accelerated the revolution and construction by leading the popular masses, thus establishing the most advanced socialist system in this land once dominated by exploitation and oppression and turning our country, once poor and backward, into an independent socialist country with a solid self-reliant national economy, brilliant national culture, and strong defense capabilities.

In the initial period of its founding, the government of the republic actively contributed to building the northern half of the republic into a powerful revolutionary fortress by vigorously staging the struggle to prepare for the socialist-type modeling of production relations and to lay a self-reliant foundation for the national economy on the basis of success in the democratic revolution.

During the grim fatherland liberation war against the armed invasion of the U.S. imperialists, the government of the republic, under the outstanding and tested leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, organized and mobilized the entire army and all the people to the sacred war to annihilate the enemy, thereby honorably defending the revolutionary gains and guaranteeing the great victory of our people.

With their historic victory in the fatherland liberation war, our people showed that no force can bring under its knee those who rise up for national dignity and sovereignty, the independence of the country, and freedom with power in their hands, and they greatly contributed to the cause of defending world peace. [applause]

After the war, the government of the republic was assigned the difficult and complicated task of realizing grand social and economic reforms in accordance with the revolutionary lines of the party and rehabilitating the country from the ashes. After the war, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth the line of accelerating the socialist revolution in a full-dress manner on the basis of his deep insight into the concrete reality of our country and the inevitable demands of our developing revolution, and energetically led the government of the republic and our people to implement it .

Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the government of the republic brilliantly realized agricultural collectivization in only 4 or 5 years by implementing our party's original policy of remodeling the (?form or management) in a socialist manner before technological reform, and consummated the work of remodeling private commerce in a socialist manner. Thanks to the tested leadership of our party and the active struggle of the government of the republic, socialist production relations came to a singularly dominate the urban and rural areas. As a result, an advanced socialist system in which there is no exploitation and oppression, was firmly established in the northern half of our country. [applause]

The government of the republic powerfully pushed ahead with socialist economic construction relying on the socialist system firmly established in the northern half. By firmly adhering to and implementing our party's basic line of economic construction -- giving priority to the development of heavy industry, developing light industry and agriculture at the same time -- the government of the republic cleared away the miserable ruins caused by the war, firmly laid the foundations for a self-reliant national economy, and turned our country, once a backward agricultural state, into a powerful socialist industrial state. [applause]

After establishing the socialist system, the government of the republic, under the leadership of our party, defined the three revolutions -- ideological, technological, and cultural -- as the basic contents of the revolution that should be carried out in socialist society and as the task of continued revolution that should be carried out until the construction of communism, and made a big stride in the remodeling men and in all fields of socialist economic and cultural construction by energetically conducting the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

On the basis of historic success attained in our revolution and construction, the great leader Conmrade Kim Il-song imbued all of society with the chuche idea as the general task assigned to the government of the republic and laid down the wise policy of more vigorously pushing ahead with the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions to carry the work into practice.

Under the leadership of our party, the function and role of the government of the republic have been even further strengthened in conformity with the demands of the cause of remodeling the whole society on the chuche idea, and the three revolutions have been vigorously carried out. As a result, our revolution and construction have been accelerated rapidly.

Thanks to the implementation of the party's policy of giving firm priority to the ideological revolution, great changes have taken place in our people's ideological and spiritual traits and living style. Today, our workers, firmly armed with the chuche idea, are devoting everything to the struggle for the party, the leader, the fatherland, the people, society, and collectives. Trust in the party has increased unprecedentedly among all workers, and the militant force of our revolution has been further strengthened. This is the most precious success achieved in carrying out the ideological revolution. [applause]

Thanks to the strenuous struggle of the goverment of the republic and our workers to implement the party's policy of technological revolution, the (?infrastructure) of the people's economy has been further perfected, its self-reliance has even been further strengthened, and production capabilities have increased much further.

We have attained great successes in socialist economic construction by giving priority to the chuche-orientation of the national economy and by pushing ahead with its modernization and science-orientation all together. Today, production capabilities and technological progress have reached a very high level. We are excellently guaranteeing, with our own strength, the production of many kinds of heavy and light industrial products needed for economic and defense construction and the people's living.

Last year our working class, endlessly loyal to the party, greatly contributed to solidifying the foundations for our country's self-reliant national economy and opening a new prospect for economic construction by excellently making a 10,000-ton press and a large-size oxygen separator with its own equipment and technology by fully displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude. The construction of the gigantic Nampo lockgate -- a project of damming the 20-ri rough sea -- was completed with our own strength and technology within a short period of time, and other grand nature-remaking projects that have made the era of the Workers' Party shine have been powerfully pushed onward, thus renewing the looks of the country day in and day out. These are proud creations achieved in reliance on our people's high creativity and our country's mighty socialist self-reliant national economy, and additionally demonstrate the vitality of the national economy. [applause]

The ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions have been powerfully carried out in rural areas along the road indicated by the great socialist rural thesis, and the chuche farming method has been implemented. As a result, new changes in agricultural production have taken place.

Thanks to the brilliant implementation of the party's line on the construction of socialist national culture, shining successes have been attained in education, science, culture, and art and in other fields of cultural construction, and great changes in realizing the intellectualization of the whole society are being achieved.

In successfully pushing ahead with the revolutionary struggle and construction work, the state and social system of our country has been incessantly strengthened and developed and the political basis and economic foundation of the government of the republic are being even further consolidated.

All people are united as firmly as a rock around the party and the leader on the basis of the chuche idea and are powerfully advancing with a firm conviction toward the bright future of socialism and communism under the leadership of the party while entirely entrusting all their destinies to our party. [applause]

The state and social system of our country is fully displaying its superiority as a people-minded socialist state and social system ensuring the popular working masses genuine democracy and happy material and cultural life. In our country, all state policies are enforced in conformity with the opinions and interests of the popular working masses and all people, including workers and peasants, sufficiently enjoy their independent and creative lives as the masters of the state and society.

To counter the constant new war provocation maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, the governments of the republic has steadily waged the struggle to embody our party's revolutionary principle of self-defense. We have strengthened the People's Army into a one-is-a-match-for-100 revolutionary army, have armed all people, and have turned the whole country into an impregnable fortress by implementing the party's military lines, whose basic contents are converting the entire army into a cadre army, modernizing the entire army, arming all people, and turning the whole country into a fortress. [applause]

Through its glorious struggle over nearly 40 years, the DPRK has, indeed, powerfully displayed invincible vitality and might as a banner of our people's freedom and independence and a weapon for socialist and communist construction. Under the banner of the republic, our people have acheived great victory in the revolutionary struggle and construction work. [applause]

All great victories and successes recorded in the shining annals of our republic are a result of the wise leadership of the WPK led by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and are a proud fruition of the devoted struggle of our people, who have resolutely defended and implemented the party's lines and policies. [applause]

Through their practical life, our people firmly believe that only our Republic -- marked by the leadership of the great party, a true people-minded government, and a benevolent socialist system -- can provide genuine freedom and happy life to them, and they envisage a more resplendent future from the strengthening and development of the republic. Our people in our country regard carrying out the revolution while living as the citizens of the republic as their endless honor and pride and are overflowing with the faith that they can surely build a socialist and communist paradise in the fatherland under the banner of the republic.

Our people, who are powerfully advancing toward the victory of the socialist and communist cause while upholding the banner of the chuche idea under the wise leadership of the party and the leader, will attain greater success in the revolutionary struggle and construction work, and our republic will prosper forever. [applause]

Comrades:

The DPRK, which was founded by the general will of all Korean people, is the sole legitimate government of Korea. Since the first day of its founding, our republic has steadily struggled for the properity and development of the nation and reunification of the country, assuming responsibility for the fate of all Korean people.

Because of the colonial enslavement policy of the U.S. imperialists occupying South Korea and their maneuvers for national division, however, we have failed to achieve the unified development of the country and have not realized national reunification -- long-cherished desire of the nation.

The U.S. imperialists have occupied half of our country with armed forces for some 40 years, have turned South Korea into their complete colony, aggressive military base, and forward nuclear base, have put forward the fabrication of two Koreas as their basic strategy toward Korea, and have persistently perpetrated conspiratorial maneuvers to perpetuate the division of our country.

The U.S. imperialists have clamored as if South Korea were an independent state and as if there were sovereign regime there. However, this is nothing but a deceptive trick to hide their nature as colonial rulers. Just as the preceding South Korean regimes did, the present military and fascist regime is an out-and-out colonial puppet regime, cooked up under the support of the U.S. imperialists' bayonets and moves under their manipulation; it is a treacherous and nation-selling reactionary regime, thoroughly subordinated to the U.S. imperialists, and a splittist regime blocking reunification of the country.

With a sordid wild ambition to continue to seize South Korea as a colonial military base, the U.S. imperialists have more thoroughly subordinated South Korea politically, economically, militarily, and in other areas to realize their aggressive purpose and have egged the South Korean puppets on to fascism, division, and North-South confrontation to carry their policy of two Koreas into practice.

With the support of the U.S. imperialists, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is cracking down, with bayonets, on the struggle of the people for the independence and democratization of South Korean society and is aggravating the strained situation and growing more heated in division maneuvers while kicking up anticommunist and war rackets.

In accordance with a scenario of the U.S. imperialists, the Chon Tu-hwan ring infringed upon the three great principles of national reunification and has maliciously maneuvered to justify the permanent division of the nation while promoting the theory on separate entry into the United Nations, the theory on simultaneous entry into the United Nations, the theory on cross contact, and the theory on cross recognition.

These days, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique are resorting to all kinds of despicable maneuvers to host the 24th Olympic Games in Seoul with the sinister political purpose of realizing their scheme to cook up two Koreas by embellishing South Korea, a colony of the U.S. imperialists, as an indepoendent state and by inciting confrontation and discord between the North and South.

For this reason, countless countries in the world and a broad range of public opinion of the political, social, and sports circles strongly oppose the holding of the Olympic games in Seoul and express active support and sympathy to our proposal to cohost the Olympics.

Because of the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique to perpetuate division and their war maneuvers, not the possibility of peace, but the danger of war, and not the feasibility of reunification, but the danger of permanent division are increasing in our country.

Proceeding from its sincere aspirations to ease our country's strained situation, which is becoming more grave with each passing day, and to provide a favorable precondition for achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, the government of the republic, which shoulders heavy responsibility for the fate of the fatherland and the future of the nation has already set forth an epochal proposal to hold tripartite talks in which the DPRK, the United States, and South Korea will participate, and has presented many reasonable ways for political settlement. This year we also put forward the proposal for discontinuing large-scale military exercises to ease the strained situation prevailing in our country and to create a favorable atmosphere for dialogue and for stopping all military rehearsals during the period in which dialogue is ongoing, and proposed that the U.S. Government and South Korean authorities respond to this.

This notwithstanding, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean persons in authority answered our peace-loving initiative with the staging of the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, the largest exercise in history, thus suspending hard-won North-South dialogue in various areas and leading our country to the brink of war.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are continuously introducing weapons for massacre and war means into South Korea, while babbling about nonexisting armed invasion and armed southward invasion by linking this invasion to us, and, in the meantime, are pushing ahead, in a full-dress manner, with maneuvers to fabricate a triangular military alliance involving the United States, Japan, and South Korea and to provoke a new war.

Unless the danger of war is prevented and the strained situation is eased in our country, the question of resuming the suspended dialogue and improving North-South relations cannot be solved and a phase for the peace and peaceful reunification of the country cannot be opened, either.

We set forth a new peace proposal to hold talks between those in military authority -- a forum aimed at taking such substantial measures to prevent war and ease the strained situation as stopping military exercises and the arms buildup and decreasing military forces and armaments under the prevailing situation.

In its statement issued last June, the government of the republic put forth a proposal to turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free and peace zone and expressed its willingness to hold whatever form of negotiation with regard to this. However, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets openly refused our fair, aboveboard, and reasonable peace proposals which could be accepted by everyone, thereby revealing once again their sordid nature as splittists and war maniacs.

While refusing our proposal for talks between those in military authority to resume the suspended dialogue and ease the acutely strained situation, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique are more noisily clamoring about the threat of southward invasion -- an act without reason.

The criminal maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean ruling quarters, who are following a war policy under the preposterous pretext of southward invasion while hindering peace and peaceful reunification on the Korean peninsula, are a mockery and deceit to the world's people as well as the Korean people.

The government of the republic and our people have already declared on many occasions that, whatever situation may be created in South Korea, we will not invade the South and have elucidated more than once or twice that we do not wish to impose the social system in the northern half of our republic on South Korea. Considering that the proposal to realize the confederal system with the two systems in the North and South intact on the basis of national unity is invariably the most correct way to reunify our country, we demand once again that this proposal be realized at an early date.

Today, our country's situation demands that tension be eased at an early date for dialogue and negotiation and that an atmosphere for dialogue be created. And our people and the world's peace-loving people hope that all our peace proposals will be realized without delay.

Under conditions in which the tripartite talks have not been realized, North-South parliamentary talks have not been held, and the Military Armistice Commission is not performing its function well, our proposal for talks between those in military authority is the most reasonable and realistic way to prevent war, ease tension, and create a favorable atmosphere for dialogue.

The United States and the South Korean ruling quarters should not run counter to the tenor of the times while seeking the road of confrontation and war, but should respond to our proposal for talks between those in military authority for the relaxation of tension and peace. The United States should give up its maneuvers for aggression against our country and permanent division, stop aggravating the situation, and withdraw from South Korea without delay, taking along its troops and all military equipment, including nuclear weapons.

The South Korean authorities should discard the antinational stand of trying to perpetuate the division of our country in collusion with foreign forces, stop their antidemocratic fascist and violent politics of suppressing the South Korean people, youths, and students while abusing us, and step down from power. The South Korean people should more staunchly fight to end the colonial and fascist rule of the U.S. imperialists, establish a genuine people's government, and achieve the independence and democratization of South Korean society and the reunification of the country.

All Korean compatriots in the North and South and abroad will check and frustrate the maneuvers of the splittists at home and abroad to fabricate two Koreas and certainly accomplish the long-cherished historic desire for national reunification in firm unity under the banner of national reunification. [applause]

Thanks to the correct foreign policy and active external activities of our party and the government of the republic, the bonds of friendship and unity with all progressive forces in the world have been further consolidated and international solidarity with our revolution has been even further strengthened. Today, our people have close comrades-in-arms and friends wherever they go in the world, and our people's struggle for socialist construction and national reunification enjoys active support and encouragement from the world's people.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I express deep thanks to the peoples of the fraternal socialist countries and nonaligned countries and the peoples of all countries in the world for actively supporting and encouraging our people's revolutionary cause, and express the firm belief that they will also extend firm solidarity to our people's just struggle in the future. [applause]

An acute problem arising in the international political field is the prevention of a new global war, a thermonuclear war, and the defense of world peace and security. Because of the daily aggravating maneuvers of the imperialists for aggression and war, the international situation is becoming extremely tense and the danger of a new world war, a thermonuclear war, is looming heavily over the earth. Preventing war and defending peace are a solemn task of the times and a unanimous desire of mankind.

Peace does not come of itself, but can be obtained and defended only through the struggle against imperialism. By resolutely struggling against imperialism, the world's peace-loving people should effect a new advance in easing the strained situation and removing the sources of aggression and war everywhere in the world this year, the Year of International Peace.

Today, the danger of nuclear war is greatest in Korea. There is no place in the world like South Korea, where various kinds of nuclear weapons are densely deployed. Therefore, if a nuclear war breaks out on the Korean peninsula, it will easily expand into a global thermonuclear war. Those who treasure peace should pay attention to the grave situation prevailing on the Korean peninsula and actively join in the struggle to remove the danger of war in our country. Our people should powerfully stage a nationwide struggle to turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free and peace zone.

In the future, our party and the government of the republic will also develop unity and friendly and cooperative relations with the socialist, nonaligned, and other progressive countries of the world, upholding the banner of independence, friendship, and peace, and will resolutely struggle to oppose war and defend peace in firm unity with the world's peace-loving people. [applause]

The world revolutionary people's common cause of opposing aggression, interference, domination, and subjugation by the imperialists and of building a new independent and peaceful world will certainly win victory. [applause]

Comrades: The DPRK is the true fatherland of all Korean people. The source of our people's happiness and a firm guarantee for victory in the revolutioin lie in strengthening and developing the government of the republic. All people should more solidly consolidate our revolutionary government and strengthen the might of the Republic into an invincible one by thoroughly embodying the chuche idea in all fields of state activities.

The chuche idea is the most correct leading guideline of the revolution and construction and the firm and immovable guiding idea of the government of the republic. We should more firmly arm oursleves with the chuche idea, enhance the unity and cohesion of our revolutionary ranks based on the chuche idea in a comprehensive way, and thoroughly implement our party's lines and policies -- the embodiment of the chuche idea -- thus successfully remodel all of society on the chuche idea.

All workers should more firmly consolidate the revolutionary bases in the northern half of the republic politically, economically, and militarily by powerfully carrying out the three revolutions -- ideological, technological, and cultural -- and effect constant upsurges in production and construction by upholding the party's militant slogan calling for vigorously accelerating the march of the eighties in the same way the Nampo lockgate was built.

With national pride in and confidence from living in the chuche socialist fatherland and carrying out the revolution under the leadership of our party, all people should ardently love the fatherland and devote everything to the struggle for its endless prosperity. Our revolutionary cause is just and the future of our people is bright. [applause]

The just revolutionary cause of our people powerfully fighting under the wise leadership of the party Central Committee led by the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song is ever-victorious and invincible. [applause]

Let us all powerfully fight to attain greater victory in socialist construction and expedite the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland in firm unity around the party and the leader while upholding the banner of the chuche idea. [applause]

Long live the great leader of our party and people Comrade Kim Il-song! [applause and shouts]

Long live the glorious WPK, the organizer and encourager of all victories of the Korean people! [applause and shouts]

PYONGYANG-MOSCOW RAILROAD SERVICE TO START

OW110634 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 2300 GMT 10 Sep 86

[Text] According to correspondent Sonoda in Pyongyang, a source concerned with railway administration in North Korea, the DPRK, has disclosed that North Korea and the Soviet Union wil open an international railway service -- two runs a week -- between Pyongyang and Moscow next month.

It is North Korea's basic diplomatic policy to maintain equidistance between China and the Soviet Union. However, it has recently stepped up its relations with the Soviet Union, particularly in the military field. For example, it has authorized the Soviet Air Force to fly through North Korean airspace. On the other hand, diplomatic discord has been noted in relations with China as seen in China's participation in the Seoul Asian Games.

The start of the international train service between Pyongyang and Moscow can be seen as an indication of North Korea's leaning toward the Soviet Union.

According to the same source, this international train service will not pass through Chinese territory. The train leaving Pyongyang will run along the Sea of Japan and enter Soviet territory at Khasan, a Soviet border town. It will then run through Khabarovsk and reach Moscow via the Trans-Siberial Railway. There will be two runs a week, one departing from North Korea and the other from the Soviet Union. Each run will take 8 days.

According to the source, increasing personnel interchanges, including student exchanges, have led to the decision to begin passenger train services between Pyongyang and Moscow at this time. The source added that the decision has been made at the request of North Korea.

LATE REPORT: SPOKESMAN TO MAC ON UNC REMAINS

SK111132 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1111 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Kaesong September 11 (KCNA) -- The spokesman for our side to the Military Armistice Commission issued the following statement today:

At the 479th secretaries meeting of the Military Armistice Commission held on August 19, 1986 at Panmunjom the United Nations Command side requested us to disinter and deliver through the MAC the remains of its personnel who died during the last Korean War in the areas of the northern half of the republic.

At the meeting our side made it clear that remains, if discovered, would be delivered through the MAC, but disintering remains for their delivery did not fall within the purview of the function of the MAC. This position of ours is based on the Armistice Agreement and the agreements and understandings reached between both sides.

Both sides of the MAC conducted the work of disintering and delivering remains according to the "understanding of administrative details for the delivery and reception of bodies of military personnel of both sides" which was agreed upon immediately after the war.

In October 1954 both sides admitted the completion of disinterment and delivery of bodies, and agreed upon the termination of the understanding on October 30, 1954. And both sides dissolved the "Graves Registration Committee" which dealt with the work and the disinterment groups which were organised extensively. Both sides, taking into consideration the fact that remains might be found in the future, agreed to leave intact only paragraph 20 of the "understanding on administrative details for the delivery and reception of bodies of military personnel of both sides" which reads: "In the event that either side discovers in its territory bodies of military personnel belonging to the other side after the termination of this understanding, the delivery and reception of such bodies shall be arranged through the secretaries of both sides of the Military Armistice Commission".

Accordingly, the MAC can arrange the delivery and reception of remains, when discovered, to suit its function. But the question of disintering remains for their delivery cannot be solved in the MAC as the Armistice Agreement has no provision for it.

Furthermore, it is not easy work to search for and disinter in the changed geographical environment of today remains of military personnel who died more than 30 years ago all over the Korean peninsula. Nevertheless, the UNC side of the MAC brought up at the secretaries meeting the question whose solution is beyond the capability of the MAC and which is outside the purview of its function.

We make it clear once again that the question of searching for and disintering all remains of the UNC soldiers who died in the areas of the northern half of the republic during the Korean war for their delivery and reception can hardly be solved within the framework of the MAC and is a matter to be solved between pertinent organs concerned.

In the [passage indistinct] proceeding from the humanitarian position, expressed on many occasions our intention to conduct negotiation with the U.S. side to settle the problem of remains at the request of the organization of veterans and of our compatriots, etc. in the U.S. This time our side conveyed to the organ concerned the maps showing the locations of prisoners of war camps during the war time and the lists of "unaccounted-for" prisoners of war, which were received from the UNC side at the secretaries meeting of the MAC.

The organ concerned has shown its intention to settle the issue from humanitarian point of view after reviewing them though they lack the utility value since we have the knowledge of them all. [sentence as received]

The delay of settlement of the issue of remains is attributable to the U.S. side which insists on dealing with the issue only according to its own intention instead of seriously approaching our humanitarian stand. In other words, the question of searching for and disintering remains for their delivery and reception has not been solved because the U.S. side insists on solving within the framework of the MAC the issue outside the purview of the function of the MAC. Whether the question of remains can be solved smoothly or not entirely depends on the U.S. side.

STUDENTS BURN BUSES; BONZES LAUNCH SIT-IN

[Text] Seoul, Sep 11 (AFP) -- Students set two police buses ablaze here Thursday after security forces thwarted their attempts to storm offices of the ruling political party, witnesses said. The students, totaling about 100, hurled petrol bombs at the vehicles being used by police guarding two offices of the Democratic Justice Party of President Chon Tu-hwan, they said. After being repulsed by the guards, the students stoned the buildings and threw petrol bombs, setting one bus outside each of the offices ablaze, the witnesses said.

Protests by anti-government students appear to be heating up with the small dissident groups among the capital's students being bent on opposing the Asian Games scheduled to open here in nine days, observers said.

Meanwhile, more than 100 bonzes launched a protest sit-in at the downtown Chogye Temple demanding the immediate release of five fellow Buddhist monks currently in police custody after allegedly leading an anti-government demonstration Monday. The unrest among the Buddhist clergy surfaced Sunday when about 2,000 monks rallied at the Hae-in-sa temple south of here and demanded that the government ensure "the autonomy of the Buddhist religion" and stop interfering in temple affairs. It was the first time that Buddhist clergy had made such demands.

NO SING-YONG, NKDP DISCUSS FUJIO REMARKS

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 11 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Prime Minister No Sin-yong said Wednesday that the Korean Government does not consider the irresponsible remarks made by former Japanese Education Minister Masayuki Fujio to be merely a momentary reaction. "Fujio's remarks ran counter to Emperor Hirohito's expression of regret over past Korean-Japanese relations when President Chon Tu-hwan visited Tokyo in 1984," he said. "I do not think Fujio's remarks merely posed a temporary problem," he said.

Fujio recently alleged that Japan's 1910 annexation of Korea, which led to 35 years of colonial rule, was based on a formal agreement between the two countries. The remarks triggered a diplomatic row between Seoul and Tokyo and eventually led to the dismissal of Fujio by the Japanese Government.

In a meeting with three ranking officials of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), the prime minister said that the government resolved the diplomatic dispute after much consideration. The Korean Government withdrew its decision to postpone the scheduled foreign ministers' conference in Tokyo on Wednesday after Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone fired Fujio Monday night.

No said that although the diplomatic row stemming from Fujio's remarks has been partially settled, the controversy surrounding those remarks has not yet been resolved. It has not restored the damaged pride of the Korean people, he said.

The NKDP officials -- Secretary General Yu Chae-yon, Floor Leader Kim Tong-yong and Chief Policymaker Yi Taek-hui -- expressed indignation over Fujio's remarks and conveyed their party's opposition to Nakasone's scheduled visit to Seoul.

On the domestic political scene, No said he will instruct the concerned authorities to ensure that Kim Sang-hyon, an opposition politician, be interrogated in a hospital. The NKDP leaders had demanded that Kim, who is staging a hunger strike to protest the government's decision not to allow him to visit the United States, be interrogated in a hospital, not a police station for his alleged connection with a gang leader. Kim allegedly received money from the leader of a gang that killed four members of another gang in a Seoul bar last month. Kim was preparing to leave for the United States on a trip last week when the police stopped him and informed him that he was wanted for interrogation.

NKDP'S YI MIN-U WILL NOT MEET NO TAE-U

[Text] New Korea Democratic Party president Yi Min-u said clearly yesterday that he had no intention to meet ruling Democratic Justice Party chairman No Tae-u for the time being.

Flatly denying the report of his intention to meet No later this week, he maintained, "The ruling party should keep its promise of the live TV relay of public hearings (to be sponsored by the special parliamentary committee on constitutional revision)." "Unless the promise is kept, I will not meet chairman No," Yi said. Last week, DJP chairman No aired his positive intention to have talks with Yi for the normalization of the crippled special House panel.

Meeting reporters at his office in the NKDP headquarters, NKDP president Yi alleged, "The people's doubt about the DJP's will to rewrite the Constitution is getting stronger because the ruling party does not care to keep its promise."

DJP, GOVERNMENT AGREE ON FISCAL YEAR 1987 BUDGET

SK060220 Seoul YONHAP in English 0207 GMT 6 Sep 86

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 6 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government and the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) Friday agreed to set the national budget for fiscal year 1987 at 15.65 trillion won (17.78 billion U.S. dollars: one dollar is worth about 880 won) in the general account. The proposed budget represents an increase of more than 13 percent from this year's budget.

In a top-level policy meeting, the government and the DJP also decided to earmark more than 1.86 trillion won for public welfare projects. The DJP had originally demanded that 2.3 trillion won be set aside for public welfare. DJP chairman No Tae-u said that Korea can now meet the growing national expectations for welfare, due to the stabilization of the nation's economic growth. Korea's budget for the next fiscal year should effectively support government policies promoting the development of farming and fishing communities, as well as public welfare, he said.

A DJP official said after the meeting that the government and the ruling party will finalize the size of the national budget by late next week, following further consultations.

PASASON HAILS SUCCESS OF NONALIGNED SUMMIT

BK100617 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 9 Sep 86

[PASASON Editorial: "Hail the Success of the Nonaligned Summit Conference" -- date not given]

[Text] The Eighth Summit conference of the Nonaligned Movement, which was held in Harare, capital of Zimbabwe, closed on Sunday morning, 7 September. The conference was attended by leaders of more than 100 countries and national liberation movements from throughout the world, including our Lao delegation led by LPDR President Souphanouvong. The conference was held at the time when the 25th founding anniversary of the Nonaligned Movement was being celebrated. It is true that delegates attending this conference were from different continents with different political systems and of different colors and races, but at this Eigth Summit Conference they showed their unanimity in the struggle against imperialism and together played significant roles in building and promoting peace and progress.

It has once again been proved through the success of this conference that the various nonaligned countries pursue a policy of struggling against imperialism, colonialism, racism, and Zionism and of supporting each nation's rights to self-determination. Once again, this summit conference decided to keep the Cambodian seat vacant throughout the session. The conference adopted an Harare appeal to Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, and Ronald Reagan, President of the United States, expressing grave concern over the intensified arms race. The appeal notes: There has never been a time in history when mankind has approached mutual destruction as today. This was why turning the struggle for peace and against nuclear war into a basic task for the present era was considered an issue for discussion at the conference. The Harare conference also called on the U.S. imperialists and other nuclear powers to hold negotiations and exchange views in order to end their arms race and adopt concrete measures to ban arms testing.

The political statement of the Nonaligned Movement also noted the resolute determination of the movement to create favorable conditions for peaceful coexistence and for cooperation in all spheres. The conference also welcomed the previously proposed plan of the Soviet Union to eliminate nuclear weapons from the world within this century and noted that this plan conforms with the aspiration of various developing countries. The conference highly appraised the Soviet decision to unilaterally suspend the testing of all types of nuclear weapons and called on the United States to follow suit. Most delegates at the conference denounced the United States, Britain, and other Western superpowers for worsening the already tens international situation and for aggravating the economic situation of developing countries. The conference also criticized the U.S.-South Africa policy of constructive engagement as support and encouragement for the South African authorities to invade and attack nonaligned countries. The conference proposed that South Africa unconditionally withdraw its from Angola and that it grant independence to Namibia. At the same time, the conference expressed determination to oppose the U.S. and South African efforts to link the problem of Namibia's independence with the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola.

The nonaligned nations called on the UN Security Council to urgently pass a resolution to take sanctions against South Africa.

The political statement of the nonaligned summit conference also says: Lasting peace in the Middle East can be realized only when Israeli troops are withdrawn from the occupied territories of Arab countries in accordance with the aspiration of the people of various Arab countries, for example the Arab-Palestinian people, who want to exercise their rights to self-determination themselves to establish an independent state. The conference also denounced the U.S. acts against Libya as acts of its policy of state terrorism. The conference denounced U.S. assistance to the Contras counterrevolutionaries who hope to overthrow the legitimate government of the Nicaraguan people.

The Conference's economic statement noted that arms reduction is directly related to development work and that the arms race has bad results for various developing countries. The conference also called on Western countries to appropriately establish relations with various developing countries in accordance with the principles of equality.

The Lao people wholeheartedly hail and fully support the aforesaid glorious and historic success of the Nonaligned Movement. As a full member of the Nonaligned Movement, the LPDR has done its best in contributing to the said success as reiterated in the speech by LPDR President Souphanouvong, head of the Lao delegation to the Nonaligned Summit Conference. Once again, the Lao people would like to express their resolute determination to smash all divisive schemes of the imperialists in order to contribute to fruitfully translating into reality the final political and economic statements of the summit conference serving the rights and interests of the Nonaligned Movement with a view to raising the status and role of the Nonaligned Movement in all respects, setting up a broad front of struggle in light of the major problems of the era, for example the problem of world peace and stability, eliminating nuclear weapons to the benefit of national independence and economic development, and particularly demanding the urgent establishment of a new international economic order for the just interests of the various developing countries throughout the world.

PREM URGES PEACEFUL USE OF SRV RESOURCES

BK101015 Bangkok BANGKOK WORLD in English 10 Sep 86 p 32

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon told outgoing Vietnamese ambassador Tran Quang Co this morning that Vietnam should use its human resources in nation-building rather than making war.

Gen Prem also urged rival factions in the Kampuchean conflict to meet face to face to solve differences for the benefit of regional peace.

The Prime Minister made these points as the Vietnamese envoy made his farewell courtesy call at the end of a four-year term in Thailand, Government Spokesman Michai Wirawaithaya told reporters.

According to Mr Michai, the outgoing ambassador said Vietnam also wished to use its human resources in development but this, he added, depended on how both sides could achieve peace.

The ambassador said he was optimistic that with help from Thailand the Kampuchean problem might be eased and the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops made possible.

Gen Prem stressed that Thailand was determined to see peace in the region and Vietnam using its resources in nation-building.

The ambassador said relations between the two countries had been good during his stay here and he hoped that they might improve.

Gen Prem noted that the Vietnamese people were diligent and Vietnam would enjoy progress if this were put to positive use.

[Text] Receiving SRV Ambassador Tran Quang Co, who called on him September 9 to bid farewell upon completion of his assignment in Thailand, Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila asked the ambassador to convey to SRV Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach that problems of this region should be solved peacefully and that Thailand sincerely wants to be a friend of Vietnam. He said the economic problems facing Thailand and Vietnam will not improve without mutual assistance.

Sitthi said he stressed that, providing Vietnam is sincere about friendship, Thailand could help in the economic areas, or the two countries could enter joint cooperation schemes in trade and fishing. He also praised Vietnam's message on the anniversary of bilateral relations as showing a more friendly attitude on Vietnam's part.

HELICOPTER CRASHES; CHAWALIT, WANCHAI UNHURT

[Text] Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut and acting Army Chief-of-Staff Gen Wanchai Ruangtrakun narrowly escaped death when their Bell helicopter developed engine trouble while airborne and crashed from tree-top level yesterday, an informed military source said this morning.

The incident, in which no one was injured, occurred while Gen Chawalit was on an inspection trip to Ban Kruat District of Buriram Province.

Meanwhile, Commander of the Special Warfare Centre Lt-Gen Sunthon Khongsomphong said that prior to yesterday's incident, a Sikorsky helicopter which Gen Chawalit and top army generals were on board also developed hydraulic trouble while at an altitude of about 500 metres in the Northeast on Tuesday.

Fortunately, the pilot managed to make a safe emergency landing, he said.

A committee has been set up to investigate both incidents, Lt-Gen Sunthon said.

He added that Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon has been informed of the two incidents and has suggested that Gen Chawalit use a newer helicopter. However, Lt-Gen Sunthon said, Gen Chawalit preferred regular Army helicopters.

An informed source said that, in the second incident at Ban Kruat, when the Bell helicopter took off with Gen Chawalit and other top ranking army officers on board and climbed to about 50 metres, the main rotor malfunctioned.

The pilot immediately descended to tree-top level but the rotor blades hit a tree. The helicopter lost balance because of the impact and crashed to the ground, the source said.

Nobody was injured but the helicopter was considerably damaged, the source said.

The source said Gen Chawalit and others walked away from the crippled machine and then took another helicopter with the Second Army Region Commander Lt-Gen Phisit Hemabut on board to continue their inspection trip.

He added that several hundreds of people and government officials witnessed the incident.

The wreck of the crashed helicopter was taken to the Air Force Repair Centre for an inspection. Gen Sunthon said that an initial investigation showed an engine malfunction had been the cause.

At a cordial reception of Vice-Chairman [as received] Nguyen Huu Tho before his departure, Prime Minister Mugabe thanked him for his attendance and contributions to the success of the summit. Interviewed on Nonaligned Summit

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept 10 -- "The Non-Aligned Movement [NAM] has brought into play its dynamic and positive role in the struggle for peace and international security, against the arms race, especially the nuclear arms race on the earth and in the outer space," said Vice-President Nguyen Huu Tho in an interview with VNA recently. Vice-President of the State Council Nguyen Huu Tho was leading the Vietnamese delegation at the 8th Summit of the Non-Aligned Movement held in Harare (Zimbabwe) from Sept 1-7.

Asked about his assessment of the substantial results of the summit, Vice-President Nguyen Huu Tho said:

"At this summit, a number of countries still clamoured for the anachronistic doctrine on the so-called 'standing between the two blocs' and 'opposing the two superpowers' with a view to side-tracking the movement from its anti-imperialist goal. On the other hand, some countries sought to capitalize on the differences within the movement to sow discord, confrontation and tension to obstruct the summit from focussing on major and imperative issues of the time. Those efforts, however, met with utter failure.

"The summit acclaimed and vigorously supported the Soviet Union's peace initiative of January 15, 1986 and demanded that the United States respond to the Soviet initiatives and follow the Soviet example in applying moratorium on all nuclear explosions. It also demanded that the U.S. show goodwill attitude toward the coming Soviet-U.S. summit so as to reach agreements on a long-term halt of all nuclear tests.

"The summit strongly supported the heroic struggle of Nicaragua, Libya, El Salvador, Namibia and the other front-line countries in Africa, and the fight of the Palestinian and other Arab peoples against Zionism...it condemned the imperialists' policy of economic domination which has exacerbated the economy of the developing countries."

On the summit's attitude towards the Southeast Asian issue, Nguyen Huu Tho said: "The resolution on Southeast Asia adopted at the 7th Summit of the Movement in New Delhi in 1983 was registered in the summit's draft political statement by the host country. A number of countries, however, were still trying to foment troubles, attempting to alter the statement and make it a resolution on the Kampuchean issue as they had done at the United Nations. This move, in essence, was an attempt to reverse the Kampuchean situation and obstruct the trend for dialogue now prevailing in this region with the aim of finding a peaceful solution to the Southeast Asian issue. Those trouble-making attempts, however, ended with failure."

Speaking about his impressions about the host country and its capital city, the vice president said:

"Under the leadership of the ZANU Patriotic Front and the Zimbabwe Government, the Zimbabwe people have carried out a long struggle for national liberation. Promoted by the high fighting spirit against imperialism and the apartheid regime in South Africa, they have closely sided with other African countries, especially the neighbouring front-line countries, vigorously supported various liberation movements and taken an active part in the common struggle for peace, national independence and social progress. For these reasons, Zimbabwe has been playing an important role in Africa."

USSR ENVOY PRESENTS CREDENTIALS TO TRUONG CHINH

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept 10 -- The new ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Soviet Union to Vietnam, Dmitriy Ivanovich Kachin, presented his credentials to President of the State Council Truong Chinh here today.

In a cordial talk following the presentation ceremony, President Truong Chinh and Ambassador Dmitriy Kachin expressed their joy at the constant development of the relations between the Communist Party of Vietnam and the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and between the two countries on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationism, which are solidified by the Vietnam-USSR Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation. They emphasized that the identity of views of the two countries on their fundamental interests constitutes the firm base for the development of all bilateral relations.

The Soviet ambassador affirmed that the Soviet Union will continue to support and assist the Vietnamese people in socialist construction and national defence, and fully supports Vietnam's positive and constructive foreign policy aimed at making Southeast Asia a zone of peace and stability.

President Truong Chinh affirmed that the solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union have been a cornerstone in the foreign policy of the Vietnamese party and state and, at the same time, the unswerving sentiment of the Vietnamese people. He underlined the importance of the close coordination of the two countries, both lying in Asia and the Pacific, in the interests of peace and socialism in the region.

The Vietnamese president stressed: "The Vietnamese people fully support the efforts of the Soviet Union in its tireless struggle to put an end to all nuclear testing. Those efforts were once again demonstrated in the proposals elaborated in Comrade M.S. Gorbachev's recent interview with the Czechoslovak newspaper RUDE PRAVO. They are new and important contributions of the Soviet Union to checking and gradually eliminating the danger of a nuclear holocaust, preserving peace and security, and promoting equitable and mutually beneficial cooperation in Asia, the Pacific and elsewhere in the world."

Also present on the occasion were Nguyen Co Thach minister for foreign affairs, and Nguyen Viet Dung, head of the office of the National Assembly and the State Council.

HANOI-VIENTIANE COOPERATION CONTINUES TO DEVELOP

[Text] Following the total liberation of Laos in 1975, especially since the signing of the Lao-Vietnam Tready of Friendship and Cooperation in 1977, the cooperation and mutual assistance between the two capitals of Vientiane and Hanoi have developed ever more extensively, thereby contributing greatly to building and improving the welfare of the people in the two capitals and strengthening the special friendship and the all-round cooperation between the two countries.

During the period 1979-85, Hanoi helped Vientiane restore many old machinery plants and enterprises and build many new industrial establishments. During the next 5 years, 1986-90, Hanoi and Vientiane will continue to develop more vigorously their cooperation and mutual assistance, thus contributing to tightening the special solidarity, fraternal friendship, and all-round cooperation between the two countries.

HO CHI MINH CITY TO CUT POPULATION GROWTH RATE

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept. 10 -- Efforts are being made in Ho Chi Minh City to reduce its present population growth rate from 1.7 percent to 1.2 percent in the 1986-1990 period.

The city has a population of some four million, and people of child-bearing age account for more than 50 percent. Before 1984, the city was in a situation of population explosion. Since 1985, drastic measures have been taken by the city authorities at all levels to carry out the population policy. Some 2,000 family planning advisory bureaus operating at wards, villages, public offices and factories have made encouraging achievements in reducing the city's birth rate. Besides, film shows, picturebooks, posters and exhibitions about family planning have attracted hundreds of thousands of young people's interest in the problem.

AQUINO DISCUSSES U.S. VISIT, FATE OF MARCOS

[Text] Manila, Sept 11 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino Thursday urged her cabinet members and countrymen to set aside their differences and pray for the success of her coming U.S. visit. In a last news conference before her scheduled departure Monday, she said she wanted to establish a "good personal friendship" with President Ronald Reagan, but would tell him to let the Philippines handle its insurgency problem.

Sticking to past positions, she said she was keeping her options open on the fate of U.S. military bases near Manila after their lease ends in 1991, and indefinitely ruled out the return of her deposed predecessor, Ferdinand Marcos, from exile in Hawaii. "I appeal to my countrymen to pray for the success of our visit, and I renew my call for peace and unity," she said in a prepared opening statement. "I am confident that in my absence our people who supported our successful crusade for liberty and democracy will continue to commit themselves in working for the greater interest of our country," she added.

Asked why she had to make the appeal, Mrs. Aquino said "I would like to concentrate all of my efforts in my meetings" with officials and businessmen. "So I would like to be free from worrying about ... maybe some personal differences among possibly my ministers and even among the people." Rumors of a possible power struggle or coup during the visit persist here. Marcos loyalists attempted a putsch while Mr. Aquino was on a provincial visit in July, but it collapsed after failing to muster popular support.

Mrs. Aquino said she wished she knew where the rumors came from adding that "I see from the crowds, I hear from them also that they are still very much behind me." The 53-year-old widow said she was now more confident in office seven months after the military-led popular revolt that installed her in power, but refused to rate her performance, saying she was leaving it to the people.

Public squabbles between rightist Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile -- who led the military mutiny against Mr. Marcos -- and other members of the government have lent the government an image of discord and instability. Cabinet members were unusually tight-lipped Wednesday after a meeting in which Mrs. Aquino was believed to have imposed discipline, but she admitted she could not completely stop the "intramurals" as "we are only human."

Mrs. Aquino refused to comment on U.S. press reports quoting unnamed Reagan administration officials as saying that she was too soft on communist rebels, with whom she is trying to strike a ceasefire prior to a peaceful settlement. But she added that "if this is asked of me by President Reagan himself, then I will very politely say that this is a Filipino problem, and we Filipinos would know better how to solve this problem." Washington is Manila's main source of military and economic aid.

But she reiterated later that she may adopt a U.S.-backed policy of using armed might against the rebels "if the peace talks collapse: and look into possible regional ceasefires in place of the current national-level efforts. Asked how important their meeting would be in convincing Mr. Reagan of her strength, she said: "I don't think I even have to explain myself ... more important will be the establishing of a good personal friendship between President Reagan and myself."

Mrs. Aquino said she would seek a higher U.S. quota for Philippine sugar -- a strategic industry currently disabled -- and easier terms for the repayment of the 26 billion dollar foreign debt she inherited from the 20-year Marcos regime.

On the fate of Mr. Marcos, Mrs. Aquino stuck to her stand that it was not yet time for the former strongman to return to the Philippines, and that she would personally tell him "when it is time for him to come back." "At the present time, it will not be to the interest of the Filipino people that Mr. Marcos come back because we have so many problems now, and the less we have of factionalism and division among our people, the less difficult it will be to solve our problems." As she spoke, some streets here were festooned with posters from Marcos loyalists bearing birthday greetings for Mr. Marcos, who was 69 Thursday.

ENRILE: 'I WILL NOT LEAD ANOTHER REVOLT'

HK101355 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 10 Sep 86 pp 1, 7

[By Melchor Parole]

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said yesterday there will be no counter-revolution similar to that staged last Feb. 24 where he led a military revolt that toppled the Marcos regime.

"I will not lead another revolt because I'm not a professional revolutionist," Enrile told a forum at the induction of officers of the Publishers Association of the Philippines.

Asked for reaction on reports that the so-called Marcos loyalists were pinning their hopes on him, Enrile replied: "I'm flattered that so many people have hope in me."

On report that Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel called upon the people to start organizing to counter the military's strength, Enrile said, "I respect Minister Pimentel's opinion."

The defense chief said President Aquino invited him to be part of the presidential entourage to the US, but that he declined.

"I'm glad the President spared me. After all, I have done my part in giving a briefing to the presidential party," Enrile said.

He assured that there is no ill will between him and Mrs. Aquino.

On concerns that the military might be used for political ends, Enrile said the Military will be banned from politics as long as he is defense minister.

ENRILE COMMENTS ON CEASE-FIRE, CRITICISM

HK101455 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 10 Sep 86 p 28

[By Joel D. Lacsamana]

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday said the Armed Forces has had enough of being "pushed around" and declared that if the National Democratic Front (NDF) does not want an immediate ceasefire, "there will be no ceasefire."

Addressing the Publishers Association of the Philippines, Inc. (PAPI) at the Playboy Club of the Silahis Hotel, Enrile reiterated that the Ministry of National Defense and the Armed Forces are fully committed to the peace initiative of President Corazon Aquino.

He however took Antonio Zumel and Satur Ocampo, negotiators for the NDF, to task for flatly rejecting a government proposal for an immediate 30-day ceasefire during peace talks.

In a joint press statement last Monday, Zumel and Ocampo explained that the current operational policies and heavy concentration of troops of the Armed Forces are the main deterrent to the government's proposal for a mutual declaration of ceasefire.

During the open forum after his speech, Enrile was asked just how far the military was "pushed around" by the communist insurgents.

Enrile said: "We've been pushed and pushed. We've received casualties in the field. Now they say they don't want a ceasefire. Well, today, the chief of staff, General Fidel V. Ramos, and I have agreed that if the NDF says no ceasefire, we'll consider this whole situation as no ceasefire," he said.

Enrile also chose yesterday's forum to announce the decision of President Aquino to call the first meeting of the National Security Council [NSC] since its dissolution by former President Ferdinand Marcos in 1972.

"The NSC will be tasked with dealing with the security problems of the country. It will not be purely advisory in nature as it can make decisions regarding national security. Its powers will be pretty much the same as the ones it wielded prior to the declaration of martial law," Enrile said.

Asked what he meant the other day when he declared before an assembly of soldiers in Fort Bonifacio that "he is running out of patience," Enrile explained that he was alluding to certain people "who keep criticizing the military while ignoring the atrocities of the other side."

"Some of my colleagues have even given statements against me," he said. "I don't know why...I've not criticized or objected to any policy of the President...I've not criticized her leadership. They wanted a policy of reconciliation...to maintain a dialog with the insurgents...we agreed to all of these. But I only paint the situation as I analyze and see it...that it has serious implications and that we must have a coherent plan to face these implications," he said.

Enrile cited a certain local governor in the South whom he said had the temerity to blame the military after it figured in an ambuscade last week in San Vincente, Davao del Norte, resulting in the death of 30 rangers.

"What that governor did is not the work of a sane, responsible government official," Enrile said.

Asked if he felt President Aquino is in control of the country, Enrile merely commented: "Well, we're afloat."

Enrile, however, begged off from naming his critics in the Aquino Cabinet, saying, "I do not want to create any more problems for my President." He admitted, however, that some of the pronouncements of these Cabinet officials "make our jobs in the defense ministry more difficult."

Enrile laughed off a question seeking clarification of his statement Tuesday saying he could be like Rambo if he loses patience.

"We were talking of ourselves at the time and Rambo is Rambo..." he said. When pressed further to explain, Enrile declined and joked that he had not lost his patience "yet."

PIMENTEL ACCUSES CIA OF 'MEDDLING'

HK101447 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 10 Sep 86 p 25

[Text] Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel Jr. yesterday accused the US Central Intelligence Agency as meddling in Philippine affairs.

He also accused Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile of being an alarmist and an American "boy" who always follows the dictates and desires of the US.

In his talk with newsmen, Pimentel charged that Enrile's stand is similar to that taken by US Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

"If Mr. Enrile is really sincere in helping President Aquino in resolving the present political and economic problems in the country, I think the very best thing for him to do is toe the line and give peace a chance to rule a land," Pimentel said.

Enrile's public statements lately "do not really fit his position as defense minister and a Cabinet member of the present government," Pimentel said.

Pimentel also maintained his position that Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile should totally support the policies of President Corazon C. Aquino.

However, if Enrile as defense minister and a Cabinet member of the Aquino government could not in conscience accept some of the policies of President Aquino then "the best thing for Mr. Enrile to do is to submit his irrevocable resignation to the President," Pimentel said.

He allayed fears that while Mrs. Aquino is away something may terribly happen in the country.

Pimentel said, "A coup at this time will surely fail."

NPA HOUSE 'PINPOINTED' NEAR CAMP AGUINALDO

BK110331 Manila PNA in English 0316 GMT 11 Sep 86

["OANA/Pool" item]

[Text] Manila, Sept 11 (OANA/PNA) -- Military operatives pinpointed Wednesday a house some 50 meters from Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City, as a monitoring base of the communist New People's Army (NPA). The discovery followed the arrest of two rebel suspects and the killing of a soldier and the wounding of an army captain near the camp. One of the rebels fled after fatally shooting Corporal Vicente Landicho and seriously wounding Capt Cecilio Palada (not Panada as earlier reported) near the main gate of Camp Aguinaldo along Boni Serrano Avenue formerly Santolan Road. Palada sustained a gunshot wound in the head and is now fighting for his life at the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] medical center in Quezon City.

Col Pedro D. Juatchon, Camp Aguinaldo commander, identified the gunman as a certain Ely. The other suspect, now in the custody of the military, was identified as Reynaldo Andaya, a salesman and former contract worker in Saudi Arabia. Andaya is now undergoing tactical interrogated [as received] at the military intelligence unit.

According to Juatchon, he has received information that armed men suspected to be members of the armed partisan unit of the New People's Army (NPA) were inside a house on Camarilla Street, about 50 meters from Camp Aguinaldo's main gate. Acting on the lead, two teams composed of two officers and five enlistedmen were dispatched to the area, Juatchon said. Two soldiers first cased the area to observe the presence of the armed men. When the second team arrived, Juatchon said, the troopers barged into the house and surprised the two suspects who did not resist arrest.

AQUINO WANTS TO END INSURGENCY BY PEACEFUL MEANS

[By Ding Marcelo]

[Excerpts] President Aquino said yesterday that despite the rejection by the National Democratic Front [NDF] of the government's ceasefire proposal, she will continue to exhause all peaceful means to end the 17-year communist insurgency.

"Only when these means do not succeed can there be resort by the New Armed Forces of the Philippines [NAFP] to meet force with force," the President said.

The President's statement is a reiteration of a previous policy she enunciated last April 12, said Press Secretary Teodoro Benigno in his first briefing as presidential spokesman.

Benigno also announced that Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile assured the President that he is supporting her peace efforts during a telephone conversation between the two yesterday morning.

Minister Enrile had lately been critical of the peace talks between NDF and government emissaries and told a military audience last Monday morning that if the national leadership does not get tough on the insurgents, he might be forced to take on the insurgents alone. [passage omitted]

Meantime, the President told the country's provincial governors and municipal and city mayors that she is "very confident that when I come back I would still be President."

"Why am I confident? Because I know that my power came from the people.. and everywhere I have gone, the people are still supporting me," she told the local officials who took their pledge of allegiance to the Freedom Constitution at Malacanang yesterday.

She asked the officials to forget about politics and instead to direct their attention to their responsibilities, "to helping your communities by serving them without obvious expectations of electoral reward."

Meanwhile, officers and directors of the League of Governors and City Mayors of the Philippines headed by Pampanga Gov. Bren Guiao were inducted by the President yesterday.

NAFP MAKES LOYALTY STATEMENT TO GOVERNMENT

HK101439 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 10 Sep 86 pp 1, 14

[By Isidro M. Roman]

[Text] The New Armed Forces of the Philippines (NAFP) declared yesterday that it will always remain an integral part of the government and will follow civilian authority faithfully.

This consensus was arrived at during a day-long conference in Camp Aguinaldo presided by Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, NAFP chief of staff and attended by all the major service commanders, regional unified command chiefs, and commanders of support and separate units.

The conference focused on the role of the military in securing the people and their properties, assisting the development of the countryside, and maintaining the gains of the reconciliatory efforts of the government.

The participants said the NAFP has consistently supported a multi-disciplinary, integrated approach in addressing the problem of peace and order and insurgency, including human rights issues.

They said the NAFP has always recognized that the realization of a more favorable climate of public order must come on a balanced combination of political, economic, social, and military inputs.

They also cited the program of action of the NAFP since the installation of the new government which is based on national reconciliation, security of the people, and development from the grassroots.

Insurgency is not totally a military problem, the commanders said. The solution consists of a coordinated series of immediate, short-term, and long-range actions which integrate the political, economic, and military capability of the government and the private sector.

The conference in a statement of consensus said:

The NAFP remains, as it has always been, an integral part of the government regardless of what its detractors say. The AFP continues to support fully, to remain constantly under, and to respond faithfully, to the civilian authority.

The NAFP's constitutional and statutory role is the maintenance of the republic's stability and security. The NAFP realizes, as much as other agenices of the government, the need for unity is the most vital ingredient for the attainment of stability and security. Unity, however, must be translated and actualized in terms of identification of national objective and determination of priority.

The conference proposed:

1. Adoption of a national strategy, a concept of implementation operations, and a body of policies to support it.

2. Assignment of missions and tasks related thereto among the various agencies of the government.

3. Allocation of critical human, financial, and material resources, among the various agencies which will be applied to attain the agreed objective.

4. Integration of the efforts of all concerned on the national level (Cabinet and National Security Council), regional level (regional peace and order councils), provincial level (provincial peace and order councils), and the city/municipal level.

5. Winning the people's support for this strategy and concept by making them aware of the situation, exerting greater and well-coordinated efforts, and ensuring beter public safety.

LOCAL OFFICIALS PLEDGE SUPPORT FOR AQUINO

BK100933 Kuala Lumpur BERNAMA in English 0914 GMT 10 Sep 86

[Text] Manila, Sept 10 (OANA-BERNAMA) -- Filipino acting governors and mayors in the various cities and provinces had assured President Corazon Aquino of their vigilance during her trip to the United States beginning next week. They also pledged their willingness to sacrifice their lives for the country in a move taken to ensure the president's peace of mind during her trip to the United States next week.

In a dialogue with Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel Tuesday night, provincial, city and municipal governors and mayors passed a resolution assuring the president that they will lead their constituencies in supporting and defending the country "with our very lives against any untoward incident aimed at derailing the present order." The local officials made the assurance in the wake of persistent reports that certain quarters are out to destabilise the government during Aquino's absence. The resolution also congratulated the president "for her exemplary feat in giving peace a chance in Mindanao by personally talking with Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) leader Nur Misuari."

During the dialogue, Pimentel said, "I think it is important that all sectors of Philippine society understand that anyone who is thinking of destabilising the Aquino government will do so at great cost." "We want it clearly understood that the people of the Philippines are behind the government and they do not want anyone to shake the condition of freedom and justice which they have achieved during the February Revolution," he added.

MILITARY, NPA TO DISCUSS MINDANAO CEASE-FIRE ANEW

[By Proc Maslog]

[Text] Cagayan de Oro City -- Civilian and military authorities here have agreed to start another round of talks with top rebel leaders of the New People's Army to forge a formal ceasefire in Northern Mindanao.

Misamis Oriental Gov. Vicente Emano expressed his willingness to renegotiate with the NPAs after being assured by Brig. Gen. Mariano Adalem, RUC [Regional Unified Command] 10 chief, that the military authorities will cooperate fully with the peace efforts.

As this developed, a top ranking NPA leader said the rebels are still open to a peaceful solution of the insurgency problem despite recent clashes between government forces and the NPAs in the area.

George Matlos, chairman of the NPA north-central Mindanao regional party committee, wrote Gov. Emano reiterating the NPA stand in favor of a peaceful solution to the insurgency problem.

"We would like to give peace and President Aquino a chance," Matlos said.

Emano had earlier accused the military of sabotaging the peace efforts. However, during the dialogue, Adalem explained that the military is fully supporting the peace intitiatives of the civilian authorities. However, he said the ceasefire conditions should be clarified to avoid any misunderstanding.

"The door to a formal ceasefire is not yet closed. But first the conditions and groundwork for the start of formal peace talks should be fully discussed," Adalem said.

Adalem also said the military is agreeable to a limited ceasefire to allow negotiations for a formal ceaseire.

Emano welcomed the military support even as he lamented the efforts of some sectors to force a military solution to the insurgency problem.

"It is unfortunate that some sectors are not convinced of the need for a peaceful solution to the problem. Killing a hundred rebels now would not solve the problem as hundreds will join the movement later on," he warned.

"This would place our country in a similar situation as Vietnam where even the bombs and superior weaponry of the US failed to stop the tide of communism," Adalem added.

NDF SAYS MILITARY POLICIES DETERRENT TO TRUCE

HK091543 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 9 Sep 86 p 16

[Text] Antonio Zumel and Satur Ocampo, negotiators for the National Democratic Front of the Philippines (NDF) yesterday said the main deterrent to the government's proposal for a mutual declaration of ceasefire is the current operational policies of the Armed Forces of the Philippines [AFP].

In a joint press statement, Zumel and Ocampo said: "We hold that the current operational policies and heavy concentration of AFP troops against the New People's Army are the main sources of armed clashes."

They added that the Aquino government's proposal for a 3-day ceasefire, without prior definition of its mechanics and safeguards may prove useless or a "mere scrap of paper."

"The NDF takes the position that a ceasefire can only be effective and meaningful if it is situated with the comprehensive political settlement of the fundamental causes of the revolutionary armed struggle," Zumel and Ocampo said.

In restating its position, the NDF said it sought to clarify media reports that the NDF panel had agreed to consider the government proposal within two weeks.

They said the main agenda in the Sept. 6 meeting was to clear remaining objections of the government panel to the NDF panel, submitted Aug. 18, particularly on security and immunity guarantees during the negotiations.

The proposal was discussed by the government panel represented by Agriculture and Food Minister Ramon Mitra Jr. and Commission on Audit chairman Teofisto Guingona and NDF lawyers, Romeo Capulong and Arno Sanidad.

Zumel and Ocampo clarified that although the points of disagreement were partially resolved in the Sept. 6 meeting, the two panels agreed to defer final agreement on the security and immunity guarantees. This was in consideration of the request of Jose W. Diokno, who returned on that day from the United States, to await his written comments on the NDF proposal.

"Neither Ramon Mitra nor Teofisto Guingona Jr. had submitted written comments as we explicitly asked for," Ocampo and Zumel said.

They also asked the government to act decisively on the proposed security and immunity guarantees on which depended on the NDP representatives' capability to proceed with the talks, they said.

"We acknowledge the presentation of the government proposal for a 30-day ceasefire, but stressed that we may not yet reply to it," they added.

The two negotiators also denied earlier statements of Mitra which was picked up by the press.

MITRA URGES NDF NOT TO IMPOSE TRUCE CONDITIONS

HK101431 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 10 Sep 86 pp 1, 6

[By Emi Sd. Perez]

[Excerpt] Agriculture and Food Minister Ramon V. Mitra, Jr., yesterday enjoined the government and the National Democratic Front [NDF] "to stop the hand that could pull the trigger" even as he urged the NDF to not impose any ceasefire conditions.

Mitra, one of three government men negotiating with the NDF to end all hostilities between the government and the communist rebels, told newsmen that conditions for the ceasefire could be settled later on.

At the same time, Mitra said that the government still maintains its credibility despite criticisms from some quarters.

"The credibility of the (Aquino) government is still rock-solid," Mitra said apparently referring to the recent "verbal exchanges" between some Cabinet ministers over the President's soft approach on the insurgency.

Mitra admitted that the government took the initiative of asking for a ceasefire.

"The government is never afraid to come out in the open that we were the ones who asked for the ceasefire," he said.

Mitra declared that Enrile has the right to speak his mind.

Taking up the cudgels this time for the defense chief, Mitra revealed that although the NDF has spelled out some conditions for the peace talks, definitely, preventing Enrile from talking is not one of them.

Urging the lifting of any impositions by the rebel side, Mitra emphasized that the government has not violated any commitment it had made to assure successful negotiations to end hostilities.

According to Mitra, the NDF has asked for "lenient" safe conduct passes and these were granted generously by the government.

However, at this early stage, Mitra admitted that there are some miscommunications when Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos defined the safety passes as "good only for a limited period, at a specified place."

Mitra said that the gap was corrected eventually with the safe conduct passes incorporating the terms set by the government panel.

The passes, Mitra declared, do not limit the movements of the NDF panelists headed by Satur Ocampo, and are good for as long as necessary.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez said communism cannot be fought with guns and bullets but with massive, sweeping and drastic socio-economic reforms.

Sanchez, who spoke at a symposium at the National Defense College in Fort Bonifacio, Makati, also said that he felt sorry that "some quarters" in the government continue to spread the "red scare" particularly in the labor sector.

He said labor groups which exert efforts in improving the living and working conditions of their members only seek a better future for their families and should not be identified as "communists."

The minister, according to sources, was referring to high ranking officials in the military and the private business sector "who keep equating true unionism with communism."

MILITARY NOTES CONTINUED VIOLENCE IN SOUTH

[Text] Cagayan de Oro, Philippines, Sept 9 (AFP) -- Seven Moslem guerrillas were killed in fratricidal combat that flared up in the southern Philippines after the president forged a ceasefire with a Moslem rebel group, the military said here Tuesday. The fighting broke out Monday in Magig between members of a guerrilla faction led by Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) chief Nur Misuari and a splinter group led by the exiled Dimas Pundato, Colonel Raul Aquino said.

The army brigade commander said in this southern city that the two groups had fought a four-hour gunbattle near the town. The MNLF force lost five men while two guerrillas from the Pundato faction were killed, Col. Aquino said. He added that an unknown number of combatants had been wounded and taken to a nearby hospital.

The fighting occurred barely three days after president Corazon Aquino formalized a ceasefire with MNLF forces in the southern Philippines that had been in place since shortly after she came to power in February. During the talks, Mrs. Aquino and Mr. Misuari also agreed to enter into formal negotiations about ending the 14-year-old Moslem rebellion.

Mr. Pundato's reformist faction, along with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), another splinter group led by Hashim Salamat, had earlier expressed opposition to the talks, from which they were excluded. Brigadier General Pedro Balbanero, the deputy military commander of the southern islands, said in Zamboanga City earlier Tuesday that it was unclear whether the ceasefire covered areas where the Salamat and Pundato factions operated.

Thirteen people were killed in violence involving Moslem guerrillas in the center of the southern island of Midnanao over the weekend. Moslem guerrillas blew up a power pylon and hurled two grenades at a Roman Catholic church in Salvador in predominantly Moslem central Mindanao Sunday. Eleven people were killed and more than a hundred injured in the attack. Fifty Moslem guerrillas earlier clashed with government troops in the nearby town of Maysaysay and killed two militiamen, Brig. Gen. Balbanero said.

The military said the Salamat faction was responsible for the carnage in the church in Salvador Town and the toppling of the transmission line. The sabotage blacked out three provinces of western Mindanao. The general said the Salamat and Pundato factions operated mainly in central Mindanao, where the incidents took place. Both grops advocate Moslem autonomy.

Moslem guerrillas loyal to Mr. Misuari, considered by the military to be the strongest of the groups, are based in western Mindanao and on the smaller islands of Basilan, Sulu and Tawitawi, the general added. He said the ceasefire guidelines would most likely be established after the MNLF chief had completed his consultations with the five million-strong Moslem population of this predominantly Roman Catholic country.

Col. Aquino said 100 families, mostly Moslems, had fled Salvador to the neighboring towns for fear of Christian reprisals. "The prevailing sentiment among the Christian populace is anger towards Moslems," the officer said.

Mr. Misuari, whose faction advocates outright secession for the Moslem south, was in Basilan Tuesday for talks with MNLF commanders and Moslem residents, Brig. Gen. Balbanero said. The rebel leader, who had been living in exile in the Middle East since the mid-1970's, has been granted safe conduct by the government, which is agreeable to Moslem autonomy but opposses dismemberment of the republic. The MNLF launched a holy war against the now-overthrown regime of Ferdinand Marcos in 1972. The protracted campaign has claimed at least 60,000 lives and displaced hundreds of thousands of Moslems.

MUSLIMS 'WILL SUPPORT' AUTONOMOUS REGION

[Text] Manila, Sept 10 (BERNAMA) -- Muslim Filipinos in southwestern Mindanao will support an autonomous region that will serve the interest of all Filipinos in Mindanao and shall uphold the national sovereignty and territorial integrity of the republic, Muslim leaders here said.

Sali Wali, former chairman of the Muslim Autonomous Region 12, was Wednesday quoted as saying that for a long time as the democratic processes will be adopted by the Muslim National Liberation Front (MNLF) [name as received], there will be quarrel between the regular MNLF members and MNLF returnees. Wali, who heads the biggest contingents of MNLF returnees in Region 9, said while the government is extending all efforts to appease the Misuari group, the national leadership should also listen and pay attention to the sentiments and perceptions of non-MNLF members, both Christians and Muslims. After all, these groups comprise the majority of the Filipinos in Mindanao.

He said the moment the communists show sign of gaining control of Mindanao, his group and other groups of MNLF returnees will stand side-by-side with the military forces and fight to the last MNLF returnee.

Meanwhile, former Sulu Gov. Tupay Loong said reconciliation between the faction of Nur Misuari and the rebel returnees is possible as soon as Misuari joins the government as they did. Loong said that the Sulu, Tawi-Tawi and Basilan rebel returnees fully supported Misuari's move to achieve peace in Mindanao for as long as the returnees would participate in the new autonomous government. He however expressed concern for the rebel returnees role in the proposed new autonomous government. Whether the government will grant the creation of an internal security force of the new autonomous government has not been clarified.

Loong is appealing to President Corazon Aquino to lay down the guidelines and put it in black and white for the guidance of all concerned in Mindanao.

In the meantime Misuari is reported to have started his tour of the various Muslim provinces in Basilan, Zamboanga, Lanao and Cotabato to seek views of the Mindanao people before entering into peace negotiations with the Aquino government. Misuari and his advisors have been given a safe conduct pass by the military to accomplish his mission.

GOVERNMENT, MNLF TALKS LIKELY TO BE HELD ABROAD

[Excerpts] Zamboanga, Philippines, Sept 11 (AFP) -- A government emissary to Muslim rebels has said that planned peace talks with leaders of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) will likely be held outside the Philippines. Agapito Aquino, personal emissary and brother-in-law of President Corazon Aquino, told reporters in this southern city late Tuesday that MNLF chief Nur Misuari is "uncomfortable in the Philippines" and prefers to talk abroad. He did not mention any country. [passage omitted] He said Mr Misuari's trip to Muslim strongholds in Mindanao Island were delayed by "technical problems," adding that Mr Misuari could not move freely in the country and was still "ironing out his mobility requirements." CEBU REBELS DENY EXISTENCE OF 'TERROR PLOT'

HK051533 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 5 Sep 86 pp 1, 10

[By Jose Logarta]

[Text] Cebu City -- Spokesmen of the communist movement here yesterday denied military allegations that rebels were set to sow disorder in Metro Cebu through "a September terror plot."

The spokesmen said the movement supports Cebu Archbishop Ricardo Cardinal Vidal's call for peace.

Vidal was still in Manila and oculd not be reached for comment.

But Monsignor Archilles Dakay, media liaison officer told the INQUIRER he was unaware of any official message from the rebels to Vidal.

Dakay also said reports that the cardinal was getting pessimistic for lack of immediate response from the rebels, were inaccurate.

Roger Garcia, spokesman of the New People's Army operational command dismissed in a press statement the alarm sounded by PC-INP [Philippine Constabulary-Integrated National Police] Recom [Regional Command] 7 chief, Col. Edgardo M. Abenina as nothing "but a pack of lies" and "a product of a sick mind."

He said any outbreak of violence in the last two days would be the responsibility of the military. However, except for the fatal shooting of a suspected NPA man by military intelligence officials, no violent clashes between government forces and the rebels were reported since Tuesday.

The National Democratic Front [NDF]-Cebu, in a separate statement signed by spokesman Rafael Flores, said his organization shared Vidal's desire for peace.

He said the possible participation in local peace talks would not duplicate negotiations between the NDF national government emissaries but would complement them.

Flores, however, said "there are local conditions and immediate problems in the province that caused the heightening armed clashes between rebel forces and the New Armed Forces of the Philippines." He did not elaborate.

The New People's Army, through Garcia, also denied the arrival of rebel reinforcements from Negros and Bohol islands as alleged by the military.

CEBU COUNTERINSURGENCY TASK FORCE FORMED

HK081153 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 8 Sep 86 pp 1, 6

[By Abe Licayan]

[Text] Cebu City -- The military has organized a special combat unit, "Task Force Polaris", to crush the mounting rebel threat in Cebu with insurgents failing to answer invitations to local peace talks and the authorities, themselves, doubting the possibility of such a dialog.

"The rebels in Cebu don't have a personality," Col. Romulo Querubin, Regional Unified Command 7 chief said. The newly-formed trisectoral group tasked to negotiate with local dissidents for a ceasefire has difficulty determining whom to talk with, he added.

Querubin's view was shared by the members of the Cebu provincial board which has created its own committee to dialog with local rebels, despite the existence of a government-Church reconciliation committee, headed by Cebu Archbishop, Ricardo Cardinal Vidal.

Immediately after his election as chairman of the committee two weeks ago, Vidal invited Cebu rebels to local-level peace talks.

In the past, he had been in constant contact with some local insurgents. Until yesterday, however, the Cebu archbishop's office had not received any response, according to Msgr. Aguiles Dakay, who also claimed they "knew who the local dissident -- [as published] negotiators might be."

Task force Polaris will handle all counter insurgency operations in Cebu, Querubin said.

the Cebu rebels, reinforced by insurgents from Mindanao and other Visayan provinces, have encamped in areas around metropolitan Cebu the military said. All military and police units have have been placed under red alert.

Querubin refused to bare the Task Force's manpower and equipment strength. Col. Mariano Baccay, Region 7 PC-INP [Philippine Constabulary-Integrated National Police] deputy commander for operation, heads the task force.

Government forces here have killed at least five rebels, wounded 10 and captured 25 others since the intensification of counterinsurgency operations two weeks ago in retaliation for a spate of rebel attacks on both military and civilian targets during the past few months. NPA attacks killed more than 40 people, mostly soldiers and policemen.

Meanwhile, a Cabinet member and representatives from the military the local clergy and cause-oriented groups agreed that while the insurgency problem has escalated "peace is definitely within reach."

Political Affairs Minister Antonio Cuenco, Region 7 PC-INP commander, Col. Edgardo Abenina, Msgr. Dakay and Prof. Zenaida Uy, chairperson of the Cebu Bayan [New People's Alliance] discussed the insurgency situation in an interview program on people's TV 3 in Cebu Saturday night.

CORDILLERA REBELS WILLING TO TALK WITH AQUINO

HK051535 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 5 Sep 86 p 7

[Text] Baguio City -- Cordillera rebels are prepared to dialogue with President Aquino if army troopers engaged in counterinsurgency operations are withdrawn from the area, according to a communique from Fr. Conrado Balweg of the Cordillera People's Liberation Army [PLA] received by the CORDILLERA NEWS AGENCY (CNA).

Balweg said that after consultations with other CPLA commanders, it was decided that the peace talks would depend on changes in the disposition of military troops assigned in the Cordilleras.

According to CPLA commander "Ka Wanas," military operations are being conducted in Upper Kalinga. The rebel leader cited an incident last Aug. 8 when elements of the 41st Infantry Batallion fired at their group.

"Ka Wanas" said that they did not engage the group because of the on-going dialogues between the Aquino government and the CPLA. "Ka Wanas" represented the CPLA during the first round of talks held with the president's emissary, Butz Aquino June 15-16 in the Mountain Province.

Three Philippine Army batallions are operating in the Cordillera provinces of Mountain Province, Abra and Kalinga-Apayao.

In an interview with the CNA, Region 1 military commander Brig. Gen. Jesus de la Cruz said that troops assigned in the area are there to protect the people." He said that the military's position was that of "active defense."

In Abra, he said that while there appears to be peaceful co-existence between the government troops and Cordillera rebels, there are orders for soldiers to "maintain their detachments and wait for instruction."

In the Mountain Province, the general reported that soldiers are engaged in patrols during the day to villages to sanitize the area. Kalinga-Apayao falls under the command of Region 2, De la Cruz specified.

During a recent meeting with military commanders, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile reportedly expressed disapproval of the proposal to withdraw the troops from the Cordilleras. However, Enrile also said he would abide by the decision of higher authorities.

The second condition forwarded by the CPLA to President Aquino is that the talks be held in the Cordillera. Butz Aquino, the president's emissary, said that during his talks recently held with Nur Misuari of the Moro National Liberation Front, a similar condition was submitted for the peace talks to be held in Mindanao, their home front.

Observers say that Cory Aquino's visit to the Cordillera and Mindanao and the holding of successful peace talks with the CPLA and the MNLF can begin to instill peace in [the] troubled Philippines.

LATE REPORT: REPORT SAYS MARCOS TO ARRIVE 11 Sep

HK111335 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 11 Sep 86 pp 1, 6

[By correspondent Dana Batang]

[Text] Police said yesterday they received intelligence reports that deposed President Marcos will arrive tonight in Manila after six months of exile in the United States.

The confidential report, according to a ranking Manila police officer, did not say where and how the former president would come.

Under the plan, the police said, thousands of Marcos loyalists would welcome Marcos and his companions, among them former Armed Forces chief, Gen Fabian Ver.

The loyalists also planned to stage a rally today at the Quirino Grandstand in Rizal Park to protest against the Aquino Government and to celebrate Marcos' 69th birthday.

Manila Police Chief Brig Gen Alfredo S. Lim said he had recommended the denial for the rally's permit and suggested that the rally be held in Liwasang Bonifacio or Plaza Moriones instead.

Reports said the loyalists rally, their second this month, would be highlighted by the release of more than a thousand red, white and blue balloons. Then they would listen to a tape-recorded message of Marcos.

After the rally, the loyalists would go to the Bingwit Restaurant in Quezon City where they would map out strategies and prepare for Marcos' arrival, police said.

Police said they also received information that loyalists would sabotage power lines on Sept 17, creating brownouts throughout Metro Manila.

The brownouts would be the signal for loyalists to mass in front of "private and military establishments." Reports said the loyalists would seize government and privately-owned radio and television stations and would storm Malacanang Palace.

Other loyalists would mass at the gates of Camp Crame and Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City, where loyalist troops would provide them security and back up in case of attack from other Government forces.

Manila Police chief, Brig Gen Alfredo Lim, said the entire military and police forces were placed under red alert for the loyalist rally today.

Anti-riot squads would be deployed in the Rizal Park to prevent the loyalists from marching to the Palace.

Lim said previous loyalist rallies have been violent and the denial of a permit could avert possible violence.

NAKASONE ADDRESSES DIET ON TRADE, GATT, SDI, USSR

OW120623 Tokyo KYODO in English 0605 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 12 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone voiced renewed concern about Japan's huge current account surplus at the opening of Diet (parliament) debate Friday, calling the situation "serious." "Japan's current account surplus has been growing over the years to an unprecedented level," Nakasone said. "It is a serious situation from the viewpoint of harmonious development of the world economy." Japan registered a 55 billion dollar current account surplus in fiscal 1985, which ended in March, mainly due to a 61.6 billion dollar trade surplus. Nakasone said it is "essential" for Japan to change its economic structure to make it more compatible with the international community.

In this respect, he also said it is "vital" to ensure that Japan's economic growth continues, centered on expansion of domestic demand as requested by the United States and the European Community. The government will submit a large-scale supplementary budget to the current Diet session, which lasts until November 29, to boost the domestic economy, Nakasone added.

He also referred to crucial international trade talks to be held in Uruguay next week and said, "Japan will make its maximum efforts to make the negotiations successful." Trade ministers and other delegates from 92 member countries of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) will meet at the resort city of Punta del Este September 15-19 to discuss ways to achieve freer world trade. Japanese officials are worried that Japan may become a target of criticism by other countries in the negotiations because of Japan's huge trade surplus. Japan will try hard at the meeting to stop protectionism and create a new multilateral free trade system toward the 21st century, Nakasone said in a major policy speech at the 107th extraordinary Diet session.

It is the first full parliament session since the historic victory of Nakasone's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) in the July 6 national elections. The LDP has 308 members in the 512-seat House of Representatives. As a reward for the sweeping victory, the LDP has extended Nakasone's term as party president -- a job that carries with it the prime ministership -- by one year, until October next year.

Turning to international politics, Nakasone said he will continue working "strenuously" to ensure a "fruitful dialogue and negotiations" between the United States and Soviet Union. And he said it is "truly meaningful" for Japan and the Soviet Union to have agreed to promote political dialogue between Tokyo and Moscow, including exchanges of visits by Nakasone and party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev. Gorbachev is expected to come to Japan in January, becoming the first Kremlin leader to visit Japan. But Nakasone angered the Soviets by announcing Tuesday that Japan will take part in the research phase of U.S. President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), the so-called "star wars" project.

The Soviet Union regards the space-based antimissile plan as an attempt to expand the arms race into pace. "Japan's participation in the SDI research project will be beneficial to effective implementation of the Japan-U.S. security treaty arrangements," Nakasone told the Diet session. He expressed the hope that it will also raise Japan's technological standards.

On regional matters, Nakasone said he will try to expand cooperative relations with neighboring countries in Asia, including member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

He pledged to increase Japan's Official Development Assistance (ODA) to Third World countries.

Referring to controversial remarks by sacked Education Minister Masayuki Fujio on Japan's annexation of Korea in 1910 and the massacre of Chinese by the Japanese imperial army in the city of Nanjing in 1937-1938, the prime minister said, "It is really regrettable that there was recently an incident which it was feared might adversely affect Japan's relations with its neighboring countries in Asia." Nakasone sacked Fujio Monday as education minister after the veteran lower house member refused to comply the prime minister's request to resign voluntarily. A South Korean official called the incident the "most serious" since normalization of Seoul-Tokyo relations in 1965.

On other domestic issues, the prime minister called the government-proposed split and privatization of the money-losing Japanese National Railways (JNR) the "No 1 and most urgent" problem for his administration. The government plans to submit eight bills on reform of the national railroad system.

MARCHUK VIEWS GORBACHEV VISIT, SDI WITH NAKASONE

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 12 KYODO -- Visiting Soviet Vice Premier Guriy Marchuk hinted to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Friday that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev may visit Japan next January, a government official said. Marchuk, here since Sunday as a Foreign Ministry guest, paid a courtesy call on Nakasone at his official residence. In delivering Gorbachev's message Marchuk quoted the Soviet party general secretary as saying he cannot visit Japan by the year-end due to his tight schedule but he expects to visit next year.

On August 5, Japanese Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari told Soviet Ambassador to Tokyo Nikolay Solovyev that he expects Gorbachev to visit Japan this year or by the end of next January. Nakasone repeated Kuranari's request to Marchuk, who said he will convey Nakasone's wish to Gorbachev that the Soviet general secretary visit Tokyo in January. Marchuk said the Soviet leader expects constructive results in the expected Soviet-Japan summit meeting.

Marchuk, who is in charge of science and technology, warned Nakasone that Japan's decision to start talks with the U.S. on its participating in the research phase of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) will have a negative effect on Japan-Soviet relations. The Soviets have proposed the abolition of nuclear weapons by the year 2000 and this is the best policy, Marchuk was quoted as telling Nakasone.

Nakasone said Japan's participation in the SDI, the so-called "star-wars" antimissile space-based defense system, is consistent with its policy of seeking peace, as the system is defensive in nature and will lead to the abolition of nuclear weapons. He told Marchuk it is unnecessary for the Soviet Union to worry about Japanese participation in SDI, the official said. Nakasone also told Marchuk he had already confirmed with U.S. President Ronald Reagan five basic points regarding SDI, including the point that the SDI plan seeks no U.S. military superiority over the Soviet Union.

Marchuk said although Japan's SDI participation will hamper bilateral cooperation in scientific technology, the Soviets still believe there will be many possibilities for Japan-Soviet cooperation in such a field.

Marchuk said he welcomed the resumption of bilateral science and technology cooperation talks which will be held between September 16 and 19 in Tokyo. The talks have been suspended since 1982 in connection with Japan's sanctions against Moscow taken in relation to the situation in Poland.

Nakasone expressed the hope of the second Soviet-U.S. summit between Gorbachev and Reagan will be held as soon as possible, which he said would have a positive influence on his own expected meeting with Gorbachev. But Nakasone underscored the need to resolve an "important pending problem" with the Soviets -- alluding to Soviet-held islands off Hokkaido which Japan wants returned, the so-called "northern territories" -- before concluding a peace treaty to stabilize bilateral relations, the official said.

Wants Hi-Tech Exchanges

OW121301 Tokyo KYODO in English 1254 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 12 KYODO -- Soviet Vice Premier Guriy Marchuk said Friday the Soviet Union would like to expand exchange of high technology with Japan. Marchuk, in a wide-ranging interview with KYODO news service, also said Moscow is prepared to expand trade with Japan through joint venture business. Marchuk, who is concurrently chairman of the State Science and Technology Commission, is now on a visit to Japan at the invitation of the Foreign Ministry.

Marchuk said the Soviet Union is interested in cooperating with Japan to promote nuclear fusion research and develop a new type of nuclear power generation technology. The Soviet Union would like to exchange data with Japan on the long-term aftereffects of exposure to radiation, Marchuk said.

He said his country is also ready to consider allowing Japanese astronauts to fly in Soviet spacecraft. Marchuk said the Soviet Union does not want a one-sided flow of high-technology from Japan. What is important is a two-way flow, especially in basic research, he said.

He said the new thrust of economic development in the Soviet Union lies in such high-tech fields as electronics, computers, new materials, biotechnology. Economic ties with Japan should not be limited to trade; the two countries should step up exchange in high-tech fields too, he said.

In describing the kind of joint ventures the Soviet Union has in mind, Marchuk said the Soviets want those which can export their output to Japan. The Soviet Union will buy what it needs from Japan, instead of having them produced by Soviet-based joint ventures, he said.

NO COMMENT PLANNED ON SOVIET SDI WARNING

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 12 KYODO -- A Senior Foreign Ministry official said Friday Japan has no intention of making any further comment on a Soviet warning about Japan's participation in the research phase of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). The Soviet Union officially warned Japan Thursday that a Japanese decision to join the SDI project will have a negative effect on bilateral relations.

The official, who declined to be named, said a Japanese statement that it will begin talks with the U.S. on its participation in the SDI research has already been conveyed to Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Mikhail Kapitsa by Japanese Ambassador to Moscow Yasue Katori. Japan has no intention of making any further comment on the Soviet warning, the official added.

SCIENTISTS' GROUP 'WILL NOT COOPERATE' ON SDI

OW110523 Tokyo KYODO in English 0248 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 11 KYODO -- The Japan Scientists Association [JSA] blasted the government decision to take part in SDI research, saying it will not cooperate with any research connected with the U.S. space-based anti-missile program. Protesting the government decision Tuesday to participate in the SDI project, the JSA said in a statement Wednesday that participation in research would lead to the militarization of Japan's science and technology. The association charged that research in SDI will impede the development of science and technology in Japan on grounds of "security protection." "The JSA plans to unfold a campaign against extending any cooperation to SDI," the statement said.

NAKASONE WANTS 'HARMONY' IN TIES WITH ROK

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 11 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Thursday he will make efforts to mend the strong anti-Japan sentiments in South Korea resulting from the recent diplomatic friction caused by former Education Minister Masayuki Fujio's remarks. Speaking in a meeting by both lower house and upper house members of the Liberal-Democratic party (LDP), Nakasone also emphasized "harmony" in diplomatic policies.

Nakasone, concern with the fact that some LDP members opposed the dismissal of Fujio earlier this week for his controversial remarks, said bilateral relationships with neighboring Asian countries, especially with South Korea and China, have to be strengthened. Members opposing Fujio's discharge said making this kind of decision based on criticisms from other countries means giving up the nation's sovereignty.

REPORTAGE ON VISIT OF S. KOREAN FOREIGN MINISTER

Wants Trade Imbalance Corrected

OW111209 Tokyo KYODO in English 1117 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 11 KYODO -- Visiting South Korean Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su Thursday urged Japan to rectify the mounting trade imbalance in favor of Japan, according to government officials. The South Korean request was made at a meeting between Chao and International Trade and Industry Minister Hajime Tamura, they said. South Korea's trade deficit with Japan totaled 3.3 billion dollars between January and July, swelling from last year's overall deficit of 3 billion dollars.

Choe was quoted as saying "if South Korea's deficit with Japan grows at the current pace, this year's deficit will be over 6 billion dollars and equivalent to 7.2 percent of the South Korean Gross National Product (GNP) which is greater than its defense expenditures."

He warned that the problem will become a "political issue," as the South Korean people have keen interest in it.

In response to Choe's remarks, Tamura said South Korea had reportedly registered in the black in its current account balance this year for the first time on record. Tamura pointed out that the huge trade imbalance results from South Korea's industrial structure, in which most manufacturers of automobiles, electronics and other machinery for export depend on imports of parts and components from abroad. Tamura also said Japan will send a big mission to South Korea to help develop South Korea's components and parts industry next month.

No 'serious' Rift Over Island

[Text] Tokyo, Sept. 12 KYODO -- Senior government officials agreed Friday that a territorial dispute between Japan and South Korea over a small island in the Sea of Japan will not become a serious diplomatic row such as the one caused by remarks of sacked Education Minister Masayuki Fujio. The officials -- Deputy Prime Minister Shin Kanemaru and Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda -- discussed the problem in reference to sharp reactions by South Korean news media to Japan's territorial claim to Takeshima Island, called Tokto in Korea.

Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari repeated Japan's sovereignty over the rugged, uninhabited island in a meeting with his South Korean counterpart, Choe Kwang-su, in Tokyo wednesday. Kanemaru and Gotoda shared the view that the problem will not develop into a serious situation like the one instigated by Fujio's remarks that justified Japan's annexation of Korea in 1910, officials said.

[Text] Comrades and respected foreign guests:

Under circumstatnces in which the entire country is seething with elevated revolutionary passion, we celebrate the 38th anniversary of the founding of the DPRK, our glorious fatherland, entertaining feelings of great national pride and self-confidence.

Greeting the festive national holiday, entrusted by the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee, and on behalf of the WPK Central Committee and the government of the republic, I heartily congratulate all the people on devoting everything to the struggle to achieve the prosperity and development of the fatherland and victory in the revolution. At the same time, I extend warm greetings to the South Korean people, who are courageously struggling to achieve national sovereignty, democracy, and the fatherland's reunification in defiance of cruel oppression and persecution by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military and fascist elements; and to the 700,000 Koreans in Japan and all overseas compatriots, who are steadily struggling to achieve the prosperity and development of the people and the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification, taking pride in being among the people of the republic. I also heartily welcome foreign comrades and friends, who are present here to celebrate our national holiday.

Comrades, since its founding, the DPRK, under the wise leadership of the party and the leader, has made great progress in achieving the prosperity of the country and the cause of socialism and communism by overcoming mounting difficulties and trials. Thus, it has attained immortal achievements, which will shine forever in history. Vigorously organizing and mobilizing the masses of the people in accordance with our party's revolutionary line, the government of the republic has firmly safeguarded the independence of the country and the revolutionary gains. By successfully carrying out the socialist revolution and construction, it has turned our country, which was once backward compared to the world, into an independent socialist country possessing a most advanced socialist system, a firm self-reliant people's economy, brilliant national culture, and a powerful national defense capability.

The course followed by the republic is a glorious, worthwhile course shining with great change and great creation which has brought about a basic change in the position of our fatherland and the status of our people.

Today our republic exists during a period of new revolutionary upsurge. Vigorously accelerating the cause of imbuing society with chuche through the leadership of the party, the socialist system of our country has been further consolidated and developed with the passage of time, and the might of the republic has continuously grown and been strengthened in all sectors, including the political, economic, cultural, and military sectors. In the bosom of the republic, our people have been extensively provided with true freedom and rights as the masters of the country and society and enjoy a happy life, materially and culturally, to their hearts' content.

All the people in our country endlessly love and are resolutely safeguarding and defending the republic. They are devotedly struggling to build a paradise of socialism and communism in the fatherland.

During the long history of our people, there has never been a time when our fatherland was more prosperous or demonstrated its dignified appearance like it does today, in the era of the workers' party. All the epochal changes and great victories brought about and attained in our country under the banner of the republic are the result of the wise leadership of the WPK, led by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and the precious fruition of the chuche idea. Our people, advancing to uphold the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea under the wise leadership of the party and leader, will always be victorious, and our republic will be prosperous forever.

The government of the republic will further accelerate the work of imbuing society with the chuche idea by attaining greater victories in the revolutionary struggle and construction work by thoroughly materializing the chuche idea in all sectors of state activities and by steadily implementing the line of the three revolutions -- ideological, technological, and cultural.

Preventing the perpetual division of the people and achieving the fatherland's reunification is the most urgent task looming before the government of the republic and our people. To meet the desire of all the Korean people, the reunification of our country should be achieved based on the three-point principle -- independence, peaceful reunification, and grand national unity -- delineated in the historic 4 July joint North-South statement.

In accordance with the spirit of the 4 July joint North-South statement, the government of the republic will struggle positively to: dispel the sentiment of misunderstanding and mistrust between the North and South through dialogue and negotiations, end confrontation, and implement our rational proposal for peaceful reunification.

To resolve the basic question of peacefully achieving Korea's reunification, tripartite talks should be held between our republic, the United States, and South Korea. Only by replacing the Korean Armistice Agreement with a peace agreement by realizing tripartite talks, and only by adopting a declaration of nonaggression between the North and South can we ease tension in our country, prevent the danger of war, and provide conditions and circumstances for reunifying the fatherland peacefully.

The United States and the South Korean authorities should discard the anachronistic policy for two Koreas and respond to our proposals for holding tripartite talks and talks between persons in military authority.

By firmly uniting and joining efforts under the banner of the fatherland's reunification, all Korean compatriots in the North, South, and overseas should much more resolutely wage the pan-national struggle to expedite the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification.

Struggling to strengthen the international solidarity of our revolution is a firm stand assumed by the government of the republic. Upholding the banner of independence, friendship, and peace, the government of the republic and our people will further develop relations of friendship with the progressive countries of the world, including socialist and nonaligned countries, and will resolutely struggle to oppose war and protect peace by firmly uniting with all the peace-loving people of the world.

Availing myself of this significant occasion, celebrating the 38th anniversary of the founding of the republic, and wishing Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and people and the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il a long life, I propose a toast to the fatherland's reunification; to the endless prosperity of the republic; to the victory of socialism and communism; to the good health of our heroic working class, cooperative peasants, and working intellectuals, who are devotedly struggling to achieve the prosperity of the republic; to the good health of the officers and men of our courageous People's Army and the People's Security Forces, who are firmly defending the defense line of the fatherland to safeguard the security of the republic and the revolutionary gains; to the good health of the members of the Chongnyon delegation, which has visited the socialist fatherland to greet the significant holiday; to the good health of the diplomatic delegations of various foreign countries and friends, who are here with us to celebrate our national holiday; and to the good health of all comrades present here.

NODONG SINMUN Editorial

[NODONG SINMUN 9 September Editorial: "Let Us Vigorously Struggle To Achieve the Endless Prosperity of the Republic"]

[Text] Today the struggle to accelerate socialist construction is being waged vigorously in our country under the leadership of the party. Amid victorious progress of the revolution and construction, the might of the republic has been continuously consolidated and its authority has increased. Entertaining feelings of great national pride and self-confidence, our people greet this significant national holiday. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's founding of the DPRK 38 years ago on 9 September 1948 was a great event of historic significance in developing our revolution and our people's daily lives.

Our republic is a precious revolutionary achievement, which the Korean communists and people built under the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on the basis of smashing the Japanese imperialists' colonial rule and effecting various democratic reforms after establishing a people's government after liberation. With the establishment of the DPRK as the momentum, our people became the true masters of the country and society and a powerful and dignified people whom no one could slight.

With the founding of the republic as the momentum, our people came to possess a powerful weapon in carrying out revolution and construction and to proudly advance in the international arena, upholding the flag of an independent country. Our republic, which is endlessly prosperous today, and its international position are linked to the historic day on which the republic was founded. Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the DPRK has traversed the proud road shining with victory and honor. By vigorously accelerating revolution and construction under the leadership of the party and leader, the government of the republic has established a most advanced socialist system in this land and turned our country into a socialist country possessing a solid people's economy, brilliant national culture, and strong national defense capability.

During the grim fatherland liberation war, our republic firmly safeguarded the revolutionary gains from the U.S. imperialists' armed invasion by vigorously organizing and mobilizing all the people in the sacred struggle to defend the fatherland by becoming the banner of the freedom and independence of the fatherland.

Today our republic is in a period of great prosperity. The socialist system in our country has been further consolidated and developed with the passage of time, and the might of the republic has continuously grown and been strengthened in all sectors, including the political, economic, and cultural sectors. Our republic is the most powerful independent, self-reliant and self-defending socialist country.

Resolving all questions arising from revolutionary struggle and construction work, from the fatherland's reunification, and from external work in accordance with one's faith and view and through our people's independent effort is a firm and unalterable principle in the activities of the republic.

Because the government of the republic has advanced by upholding the banner of independence, our republic enjoys high authority today, and our people are dignified as an independent people. Our republic moves through the use of domestic resources, technology, and cadres. It possesses a powerful economy, which has developed in various ways and is equipped with sophisticated techniques, along with a victorious and invincible national defense capability to thoroughly smash any imperialist aggression whatsoever.

Under the superior socialist system of the republic, our people all freely participate in state and social life, exercising equal rights. They live and work happily, free from worries about food, clothes, and housing, about school education, and about medical care.

Our people take great pride and self-confidence in bringing about an epochal change in the revolution and construction under the banner of the republic and in enjoying a happy and worthwhile life in the bosom of the republic.

The strengthening and development of our republic and all victories and successes attained in revolution and construction under the banner of the republic are the products of the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Based on the chuche idea, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has clearly delineated all questions arising from strengthening the government of the republic and from increasing the function and role of this government in every stage of developing the revolution. He has thoroughly resolved these questions.

The ideas and theories on building a chuche-type state, set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, including the classic principle that the theory on the basic principle of building an independent country and communism is one that adds the three revolutions to the people's governments, has become a firm guideline for strengthening and developing our republic.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's theory on building the country has been brilliantly inherited and developed by our party. The leadership of the great party and the leader constitutes the basic source of the invincibility and bright future of our republic. Today we are assigned the weighty task of completing the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea by further strengthening the republic and by vigorously accelerating socialist construction under the banner of the republic.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: All the people should positively struggle to further strengthen and develop the republic. We should strengthen the might of the republic in various ways by much more firmly consolidating our revolutionary government and by thoroughly materializing the chuche idea in all sectors of state activities. We should consolidate the political and economic might of the republic in various ways by much more thoroughly materializing the chuche idea in all sectors of state activities.

The three revolution -- ideolgical, technological, and cultural -- are our party's general line for imbuing society with the chuche idle and building communism. We should vigorously carry out the three revolutions by further strengthening the government of the republic and by increasing its functions and role. In particular, we should struggle vigorously to implement the line of making the people's economy chuche-oriented, modern, and scientific -- the line set forth at the sixth party congress -- and to successfully achieve the magnificent 10-point goal for socialist economic construction.

Upholding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great plan for economic construction, all people throughout the country have risen as one in the struggle to implement this plan with a new faith and mettle. With the spirit and mettle of successfully building the West Sea lockgate over a short period of time, we should struggle steadily to accelerate the construction of important edifices, including tideland reclamation and construction of the Sunchon vinalon industrial complex, and to increase production. Thus, we should further strengthen the economic might of the country, change the appearance of the fatherland, and epochally improve the people's standard of living.

Our republic is what our people have won in blood and through a grim struggle under the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and is the source of our people's happiness and the prosperity of our posterity generation after generation. The anti-Japanese fighters and many patriots shed their blood and sacrificed their lives for today's advanced and superior socialist system and for the revolutionary government. Our people's true lives blossom in the bosom of our republic, and a happier future is linked solely to the republic.

We should consolidate and develop the socialist system without interruption and cement our revolutionary sovereign right more firmly, while always cherishing the value of the republic as faith. At the same time, we should strongly defend and safeguard the high honor and dignity of our republic.

Reunifying the divided fatherland is a supreme national task facing our republic's government and people. The DPRK is the one and only lawful government of Korea, established according to the collective will of the whole nation.

Since its foundation, our republic's government has made all sincere efforts possible for the nation and reunification. Our party and the republic's government have recently put forward many reasonable proposals, including founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], a confederal state including the whole country. However, because of the maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique, national reunification has not yet been achieved.

Unlike the northern half of the republic, in the other half of the country a fascist military dictatorial rule, among the most tyrannical and antipopular, which ruthlessly tramples underfoot human rights and human dignity, is being enforced.

The South Korean regime, which has been fabricated by the U.S. imperialists, is a scarecrow regime enjoying no real power, in addition to being a thoroughly subordinate and colonial puppet regime.

The U.S. imperialists and the puppet South Korean clique are running amok in scheming to perpetuate national division and provoke a new war. In particular, the wretches are persistently scheming to use the upcoming Asian Games and the 1988 Olympic Games to fabricate two Koreas.

The Pyongyang International Conference for Denuclearization and Peace on the Korean Peninsula has vigorously encouraged our people's struggle to turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace and for peace in, and peaceful reunification of, the country. With the support and encouragement of the world's revolutionary people, our people will check and frustrate the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists, who are bent on provoking a new war of aggression, a thermonuclear war, in Korea.

Achieving national reunification is the unanimous aspiration of our people, and national reunification should be achieved without fail for the uniform development of the people as well as for its future. All the Korean people will achieve the long-cherished desire for national reunification and national prosperity by crushing maneuvers of any sort hindering national reunification and by founding the DCRK.

The DPRK is an independent and peace-loving country. Our party and the republic's government will, as they have in the past, struggle positively to develop friendly and cooperative relations with peoples in all countries throughout the world, including those in the socialist and nonaligned countries; to vigorously launch the antiwar, antinuclear peace movement against the imperialists; and to defend peace and security in the world, under the banner of independence, friendship, and peace.

Our party is a great organizer and guide in the struggle to make the republic endlessly prosperous and flourishing. Upholding the party's leadership is the highest mission of the people's government. It is imperative to strengthen the party's leadership to strengthen the might of the republic and to achieve prosperity for it. We should thoroughly embody the party's leadership over all activities of the people's regime and over all fields of social life in accordance with the demands of the developing reality in which the party's organizational and ideological foundation and leadership system have been firmly established.

Our republic, which has been established by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, is now achieving efflorescence and development in all fields under the leadership of the party. Because of the socialist fatherland led by the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is brilliantly inheriting the cause of the respected and beloved leader, our people have become a most dignified and proud people.

All the people in the country should always strongly defend and safeguard the party and leader and loyally struggle on the single-track road indicated by the party, while cherishing in their hearts how the fate of our fatherland has been pioneered and its position has been changed. Bright prospects are being unfolded before our republic, and all our people are full of new hopes for and firm faith in their future. Our people, who are vigorously advancing under the leadership of the WPK for the prosperity and flourishing of the republic and for reunification of the fatherland, will always be victorious.

[NODONG SINMUN 11 September editorial: "The Historic Conference Which Has Greatly Contributed to Peace in Korea and the World"]

[Text] The Pyongyang international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula, which opened in Pyongyang, the capital of our country, on 6 September amid the great interest and expectation of the peace-loving peoples and broad political and social circles of the world, ended on 8 September after satisfactorily accomplishing its task.

Some 93 party, state, and government delegations of 80 countries from the five continents of the world and delegations and delegates of 32 international organizations and national organizations and many renowned personages struggling for peace and democracy participated in the conference. With the agenda "On Withdrawing Nuclear Weapons From South Korea and Turning the Korean Peninsula Into a Nuclear-Free, Peace Zone," the conference sincerely discussed the prevention of nuclear war and the defense of peace and unanimously adopted a declaration of the conference, a peace document reflecting the unanimous aspiration and demand of the participants in the conference and the peoples of the world.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, attaching great importance to the Pyongyang international conference, received individual personages participating in the conference, and delegations and heads of delegations from many countries. For the delegates, he arranged a grand banquet and, on the occasion, made a speech on the subject "Preventing war and defending peace are an urgent task facing mankind." The speech, which profoundly declared the principled idea that preventing nuclear war and defending peace on the Korean peninsula and in the world is a precious guiding principle to accelerate the world peoples' anti-imperialist, antiwar, antinuclear, and peace-loving cause.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's speech has been adopted as an official document by the Pyongyang international conference. Thus, the speech brilliantly embellished the conference. The conference decided to send letters to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the WPK Central Committee and president of the DPRK, and to the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee and secretary of the party Central Committee.

The success won by the Pyongyang international conference was very great. The conference was a peace-loving conference that provided a significant opportunity for strengthening the world peoples' struggle for nuclear-free, peace zones according to the urgent task of mankind and the urgent demand of the era to prevent a new world war, a thermonuclear war, and defend world peace. Thus, the conference was a meaningful event in the history of the antiwar and antinuclear movement of the world. The conference vigorously displayed the firm support and solidarity of the progressive and peace-loving peoples of the world with the Korean people's just struggle for peace on the Korean peninsula and peaceful reunification of the country, and clearly displayed the might of the growing unity, cooperation, and joint step of the different peoples of the world and the various circles with different ideas, political views, and religious beliefs on the anti-imperialist, antiwar, antinuclear, and peace-loving united front.

Through the conference, the will and determination of the progressive peoples of the world to prevent a thermonuclear war linked with the existence of mankind were strongly expressed. The international conference gave great support and encouragement to our people and the peace-loving peoples of the world struggling for peace. For the imperialist nuclear maniacs and warmongers, the conference dealt a serious blow and warning. The result of the conference, which contributed to maintaining peace and security in Korea and the world, will display even greater vitality in the future.

For paying deep attention to the grave situation on the Korean peninsula created by the U.S. imperialists and for wholeheartedly supporting our people's cause of peace and peaceful reunification and their struggle for denuclearization and peace through the Pyongyang International Conference for Denuclearization and Peace on the Korean Peninsula, the Korean people express deep gratitude to the delegations, delegates, and individual personages and to the parties, states, governments, organs, and organizations which sent them to the conference.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: To prevent a new world war, a thermonuclear war, and defend peace, the struggle to thwart the imperialists' arms race and their nuclear war maneuvers should be vigorously waged on a global scale.

Preventing a thermonuclear war and defending world peace are an urgent task facing the Korean people and all progressive peoples of the world and its peace-loving peoples. If the danger of a nuclear war created by the imperialists' war policy and by their nuclear arms buildup maneuvers is not eliminated, mankind will suffer irretrievable disasters and catastrophes. Nuclear war must be prevented by all means and peace must be preserved.

As has been noted by the declaration of the conference, preventing a new war on the Korean peninsula is a very important question linked with the cause of world peace. South Korea is one of the most dangerous nuclear war hotbeds in the world. Proceeding from the nature of the socialist system of our country, proceeding from the nature of the foreign policy of independence, friendship, and peace, and proceeding from the heavy responsibility for the Korean nation and from the sense of the noble mission for the cause of world peace, we have firmly maintained our fundamental policy to alleviate tension on the Korean peninsula and settle the Korean question on a peaceful way. We have put forth many most rational and constructive peace proposals and exerted sincere efforts for their implementation. The examples are the widely known proposals for tripartite talks, for talks of military authorities, and for the establishment of a nuclear-free, peace zone.

However, due to U.S. opposition, none of these peace initiatives have been realized. As a result, the situation on the Korean peninsula is being aggravated with each passing day, and is a very dangerous situation in which a nuclear war could break out at any moment. If a war breaks out on the Korean peninsula, it will instantly spread into a global thermonuclear war.

Under circumstances in which the U.S. troops continue to stay in South Korea and indulge in nuclear war maneuvers according to the U.S. policy on Korea and its world strategy, solid peace on the Korean peninsula and peaceful reunification of the country are unthinkable and world peace will be ceaselessly threatened. Thus, eliminating this casue of a nuclear war is an urgent task of the world and nuclear weapons and U.S. troops must be withdrawn from South Korea without delay.

Through the Pyongyang international conference, this fundamental demand has been clearly proclaimed once again. And dialogue should be held -- such as tripartite talks and talks between military authorities in order to prohibit the development, testing production, stockpiling, possession, deployment, proliferation, and use of nuclear weapons on the Korean peninsula, to disallow the presence of foreign military bases and troops there, to rescind the aggressive military treaty, to avoid the fabrication of military blocs such as the U.S.-Japan-South Korea triangular military alliance, to halt military exercises for a war of aggression such as "Team Spirit," and military buildup, to reduce the number of troops, to alleviate tension, and to provide favorable conditions for peace and peaceful reunification.

Unilateral hosting of the Olympic Games will aggravate the situation and deepen the division. Thus, the Olympic Games must be cohosted. If the joint struggle of our people and the progressive peoples of the world realize this demand, cause U.S. troops and nuclear weapons to be withdrawn from South Korea, and establish a nuclear-free, peace zone on the Korean peninsula, one of the most dangerous nuclear war hotbeds will be eliminated, the dark cloud of a nuclear war will vanish from the skies of Korea, the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea will be accelerated, and great progress will be made in preserving peace in Asia and the world.

The policy for the division of Korea and for two Koreas is a major cause of confrontation and war on the Korean peninsula. Only through the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea can solid and durable peace be achieved on the Korean peninsula. Establishing the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo is the most realistic and rational way to achieve this end.

We expect that the governments, political parties, progressive organizations of all world countries, and international organs and organizations, democratic personages, and all peoples will continue to extend firm support and solidarity with the Korean people's struggle to eliminate the danger of a nuclear war and achieve peace and peaceful reunification.

Not only must the danger of a nuclear war be eliminated from the Korean peninsula and peace be preserved there, but also the danger of a nuclear war must be eliminated and peace and security guaranteed on a global scale. The danger of a nuclear war exists in many areas of the world. Existence of the danger of a nuclear war anywhere threatens the whole world. Therefore, it is necessary that the peoples in all continents, all regions, and all countries unanimously turn·out in the task to prevent a nuclear war and preserve peace.

All peace-loving peoples of the world should form a broad united front and wage an anti-imperialist, anti-U.S., antiwar, antinuclear, and peace-loving campaign vigorously. By so doing, they should thwart the reckless nuclear arms buildup maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and other imperialists and their nuclear war provocation maneuvers, and should realize a complete liquidation of all nuclear weapons. Only then, can world peace be preserved on a firm base.

Establishing nuclear-free, peace zones and expanding them are an important way to realize nuclear arms reduction and prevent a nuclear war. To this end, it is important to turn Northeast Asia, Southeast Asia, the South Pacific, central Europe, northern Europe, the Balkan peninsula, the Mediterranean, the Middle East, Africa, the Indian Ocean, Latin America, and all other areas in the world into nuclear-free, peace zones. At the same time, turning space into a nuclear base and a stage for a nuclear war according to the U.S. star wars plan must be prevented.

With all sincerity, we will continue to actively support the world people's anti-imperialist, anti-U.S., antiwar, and antinuclear struggle for arms reduction and its important element, the struggle for the establishment of nuclear-free, peace zones. Let us intensify the antiwar, antinuclear, and peace-loving campaign. This is a militant slogan which contains the most urgent demand of our era. The governments, parties, and peoples of the countries of the world that cherish peace, progress, freedom, and justice should unanimously turn out in the struggle to prevent a thermonuclear war and rescue mankind to accomplish their mission for the era and history. No force can frustrate mankind's aspiration for peace. The peace-loving forces of the world are incomparably superior to the imperialist forces of war. The future lies in the people struggling for peace and progress.

SOUTH'S 'PUPPET' FOREIGN MINISTER'S REMARKS HIT

[NODONG SINMUN 6 September commentary: "How Can Spring Water Spurt from a Ditch?"]

[Text] On 2 September, a fellow called Choe Kwang-su, the new puppet South Korean minister of foreign affairs, held his first press conference since his appointment.

He babbled that he would carry out diplomacy by focusing on strengthening ties with the United States, Japan, and other traditional allies and on promoting an international environment for cross-recognition of the North and South and their simultaneous admission to the United Nations, and that he would persistently pursue an open-door policy toward the communist bloc in an effort to successfully hold the 1988 Olympic Games.

On assuming office as the so-called minister of foreign affairs, he babbled about strengthening ties with the United States, Japan, and other traditional allies. Needless to say, this babbling means that just like his predecessors, he will accelerate economic subjugation and the militarizaton of the economy by perpetuating the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. forces, by strengthening criminal collusion with the Japanese reactionaries, and by continuously inducing the U.S. and Japanese monopolist capital.

Simultaneous admission to the United Nations and cross-recognition, which this fellow advocated, cannot be overlooked either. It has been clearly exposed that simultaneous admission to the United Nations is a scheme to justify division through entering the United Nations by making ill use of the usual practice of recognizing independent countries which enter the United Nations, and that cross-recognition is a plot to fabricate two Koreas, making division an accomplished fact through this cross-recognition of North and South Korea by both the East and the West.

The South Korean puppets are talking about an open door policy toward the communist bloc and the North in an effort to hold the 1988 Olympic Games and the 1986 Asian Games at all costs under the protection of the U.S. and Japanese reactionaries. The real intent of this is to promote an international environment favorable to fabricating two Koreas through cross-contacts, cross-recognition, and admission into the United Nations.

The national division maneuvers of the South Korean puppets are a byproduct of the strategy of the U.S. imperialists toward Korea and the ambition of the Japanese reactionaries for militarist expansion. It is by no means coincidental that a Japanese magazine reported that the two-Korea policy is a drama that the South Korean puppets are staging as written and produced by the United States and as directed by Japan.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring, a double running dog of the United States and Japan, is not at all interested in the issue of reunificaton, which is related to the destiny of the nation. All the puppets want is to realize the prolonged stay in office of their DJP cohorts at all costs. Proceeding from this, they want the U.S. forces to prop them up with guns and bayonets and to block reunification by continuously staying in South Korea, and are viciously maneuvering so they can be recognized internationally.

After all, all the new puppet South Korean minister of Foreign Affairs did that day was grumble that he will dash along the road to promote and perpetuate division by colluding with foreign forces. Considering that a fellow who is supposed to carry out diplomacy babbled about division all along as soon as he was appointed, it is clear upon which road the South Korean puppets will embark. If the South Korean puppets, rejecting the solemn order of the times to save the nation from the danger of perpetual division and nuclear war, continue to pursue the road of confrontation and division, the South Korean people themselves will not forgive them.

REPORTAGE ON ROK-JAPAN FOREIGN MINISTER TALKS

'Deep Apology' From Nakasone

SK111237 Seoul YONHAP in English 1203 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 11 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Foreign Minister Choe Kwang-su Thursday urged Japanese leaders to make efforts not to repeat such absurd remarks as those of former Education Minister Masayuki Fujio to justify Japan's colonial rule over Korea. Choe made the request in meetings with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Shintaro Abe, chairman of the Liberal Democratic Party's Executive Council, and Masayoshi Ito, the party's top policy maker, explaining Korean people's feelings damaged by Fujio's statements.

In reply, Nakasone said he did his best to take measures acceptable to the Korean Government and people because he fully understood the Korean people's trauma caused by the incident. "I will further endeavor to solidify bilateral relations between Seoul and Tokyo hereafter," he said.

Nakasone also offered a deep apology to Korean President Chon Tu-hwan for having caused a great anxiety because of Fujio's remarks. He asked Choe to deliver his sincere apology to Chon.

In an interview with a Japanese monthly magazine, Fujio had alleged that imperial Japan's annexation of Korea in 1910 was based on a formal agreement between the two countries and that Korea shared responsibility for it, triggering a strong protest from Korea.

Emphasizing that the remarks hurt self-respect, pride and national consciousness of the Korean people, Choe thanked Nakasone and other government leaders for handling the diplomatic row promptly. Despite the diplomatic settlement on the matter, it will take quite a time for Korean people to be recovered from their traumas, Choe said.

Choe arrived here Wednesday for the foreign ministers' meeting with his Japanese counterpart Tadashi Kuranari.

No Japanese Claim on Island

SK111157 Seoul YONHAP in English 1129 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Seoul, Sept 11 (YONHAP) -- A Foreign Ministry official Thursday denied reports from Tokyo that Japan claimed sovereignty on the South Korean island of Tokto in the Korean-Japanese foreign ministers' meeting in Tokyo Wednesday. The spokesman said that there is no reason for the Tokto issue to be taken up in the foreign ministers' conference and that the report from Tokyo was not true. Another Foreign Ministry official said the ministry has not received any report from the Korean Embassy in Tokyo about the matter.

Meanwhile, South Korea's major political parties expressed indignation over the reported Japanese claim and urged that Japan should not repeat the unreasonable absurdity.

Rep. Sim Myong-po, spokesman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, said Japan's claim is as absurd as the remarks by fired Japanese Education Minister Masayuki Fujio.

"We sincerely wish Japan would refrain from making such an absurd claim, which will be subject to the scoff of the world," Sim said.

The main opposition New Korea Democratic Party said if Japan continues to be unreasonable, the government is urged to reconsider the bilateral relationship.

Japan's Claim on Island Explained

SK120125 Seoul YONHAP in English 0111 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] Seoul, Sept 12 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Ministry of Foreign Affairs said Thursday that Japan's recent claims to the Korean island of Tokto were made just for the record. Japan's diplomatic practice has been to explain its position on the issue of the island's ownership for the record, according to the Korean ministry.

Japanese Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari made a territorial claim to the island in a meeting with his Korean counterpart, Choe Kwang-su, on Wednesday in an opening session of the first annual Korean-Japanese foreign ministers' talks in Tokyo.

The Korean ministry also said that Japan made no new claims and had no intentions other than following diplomatic practice.

In response to the Japanese claims, Choe told Kuranari that Korea's territorial right to Tokto, which has been Korean territory throughout history, is established under international law, a ministry official said.

Tokto Island is located 90 kilometers southeast of Ullung-Do (island) off the east coast of Korea.

Relations With Japan Viewed

SK120143 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 12 Sep 86 p 6

[Text] Minister of Foreign Affairs Choe Kwang-su must now realize that he has to go a long way before he can resolve the major pending issues between Korea and Japan.

In his meeting with Japanese counterpart Tadashi Kuranari in Tokyo Wednesday, Choe offered proposals designed to reduce the growing trade imbalance and solve other problems existing between the two sides.

He, however, failed to receive any clear-cut answers from Kuranari on his suggestions.

Despite the unsatisfactory results, Choe might console himself by noting that he was successful in defending his diplomatic causes.

He received an apology from Kuranari for remarks by former Japanese Education Minister Masayuki Fujio concerning Japan's 1910 annexation of Korea.

The apology, along with the Japanese Government's dismissal of Fujio from his cabinet post Monday, could be considered as having helped mend the diplomatic rift caused by the remarks, at least on official levels.

In that sense, the two foreign ministers can be said to have contributed to clearing the ground for Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's visit to Seoul on Sept. 20-21.

Both foreign ministers expressed hope that Nakasone's visit to Seoul, timed with the opening of the 10th Asian Games, would be carried out smoothly without being hampered by the recent Fujio controversy.

Despite such efforts on official levels, however, it is not certain whether Nakasone's trip to Seoul will be genuinely welcomed by the Korean people, observers say.

They point out that during the foreign ministers' conference, the Japanese side once again presented a touchy issue that might trigger another controversy between the two countries.

Kuranari reminded Choe of Japan's traditional insistence on territorial rights over Tokto, a Korean islet off the east coast.

The observers admit that the Japanese Government has presented the Tokto issue annually. They say, however, that they cannot understand why the Japanese foreign minister picked out the issue at this time when the relations between the two countries are strained.

Although they failed to produce any substantial agreement on bilateral issues, Choe and Kuranari are said to have shared common views on international developments, especially with regard to the Soviet attempt to increase its influence in Asia and the Pacific.

Minister Choe urged the Japanese side to exercise maximum restraint in its relations with North Korea, while noting that destabilizing factors have been increasing in the Northeastern Asian region.

He expecially pointed out the intensifying military ties between the Soviet Union and North Korea, and the Soviet build-up of its Far Eastern naval forces.

Heeding Choe's caution, Kuranari pledged that there will be no change in Japan's relations with North Korea.

The Japanese side also reiterated its support for Seoul's efforts to improve relations with China, gain U.N. membership and resume the stalled inter-Korean dialogue.

Discussions of bilateral issues, however, fell far short of expectations.

As he declared about two weeks ago when he assumed the foreign minister's post, Choe urged Japan to take concrete steps to rectify the growing trade imbalance in disfavor of Seoul.

He noted that Korea suffered a deficit of about $3 billion in its trade with Japan in the first seven months of this year and that the volume is expected to reach $6 billion by this year's end.

Warning that the trade imbalance might develop into a political problem between the two sides, Choe requested that Japan lower its customs taxes and continue to award privileged status to Korean exports goods.

He also called on the Japanese side to help Korean products gain easier access to the Japanese market by improving the structure of marketing and circulation.

He aslo proposed that Korean construction companies be given opportunities to participate in the construction of a new international airport in Kansai.

To such Korean requests, Kuranari showed only a lukewarm response by saying that he would handle the issues with sincerity and in a cooperative manner.

No progress was made in the other outstanding issue of the legal status of Korean residents in Japan.

The two sides only repeated their previous positions concerning the Japanese fingerprinting regulations for alien residents.

Such bilateral issues are expected to be raised again when Nakasone meets with President Chon Tu-hwan during his forthcoming visit to Seoul.

The two leaders will try to hammer out differences and find clues toward resolving the issues, said the observers.

They predicted that Nakasone would try to make his visit an occasion to help heal the damaged feelings of the Korean people and to foster more friendly ties between the two countries.

PRC SAID TO REJECT DPRK PROPOSAL FOR HU-KIM TALKS

SK120148 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 12 Sep 86 p 1

[Text] Tokyo (YONHAP) -- Beijing has refused Pyongyang's bid for a meeting between China's party leader Hu Yaobang and North Korea's Kim Il-song. It also has rejected North Korea's invitation for a port call at Nampo Harbor on the western coast by a Chinese naval fleet, according to an informed Japanese source Thursday.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, the source said a Chinese party source had told him that the North Koreans proposed the high political meeting in Pyongyang. But he added, the Chinese rejected the offer because of North Korea's negative attitude on the inter-Korean dialogue, which China has urged the North Koreans to resume, and its military leaning toward the Soviet Union.

The source also said North Korea had asked Beijing to send a naval fleet to Nampo last July in order to balance the port call at Wonsan, an east coast harbor, by a Soviet fleet led by the aircraft carrier Minsk, but the Chinese refused the invitation, saying it would result in heightened tension on the Korean peninsula.

CAAC PLANE FLIES PRC ATHLETES NONSTOP TO SEOUL

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 12 KYODO -- Part of the Chinese athletic delegation arrived at Kimpo International Airport Friday in a specially-chartered direct flight to participate in the Seoul Asian Games (Asiad) starting September 20.

This was the first such flight arranged under normal circumstances between the two countries as no diplomatic relations between the two currently exist.

China's state-run airline, Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC), flew nonstop from Beijing carrying some 150 Chinese athletes and officials. China will send the remaining 370 athletes and officials in three separate nonstop flights on September 15, 18, and 27.

In May, 1983, Shen Tu, director general of the CAAC, flew into Seoul to discuss the return of a Chinese jet that was hijacked on a domestic flight from Manuchuria and landed at Chunchon, north of Seoul.

STUDENT PROTESTS AGAINST ASIAD CONTINUE

HK111402 Hong Kong AFP in English 1348 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Excerpt] Seoul, Sept 11 (AFP) -- Students hurled petrol bombs and stones at police here Thursday, burning two buses and injuring four policemen, in anti-government demonstrations and protests at the holding of the Asian Games here, eyewitnesses said. At Seoul's Buddhist-supported Dongkuk University, about 50 monks joined 600 students who hurled firebombs and stones at police for five hours. The police responded with teargas, sending clouds of acrid fumes into nearby downtown streets and hotels designated to house Asian journalists during the games.

Elsewhere in the capital, about 200 students attacked two offices of the Democratic Justice Party of president Chon Tu-hwan with clubs and Molotov cocktails, burning two police buses and injuring four policemen, eyewitnesses said. Police detained 12 students in clashes with the demonstrators.

Protests by anti-government students appear to be heating up with the small dissident groups among the capital's students bent on opposing the Asian Games, observers said. The protesters were opposing Seoul's hosting of the games, due to open here September 20, and denouncing the government as a "pro-American military dictatorship," witnesses said.

Newspapers Thursday also reported violent anti-government demonstrations at Seoul's four other universities and several provincial schools. There were no figures immediately available of injuries or arrests. Dissidents and student militants have denounced the games as a sports circus being staged at the expense of the poor to draw attention away from troublesome domestic issues. There has been a rash of anti-government demonstrations by students, and also by Buddhist monks in recent days, causing the security-concerned authorities to fear that the Asian Games might be marred by them. ROK TO AID LATIN AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT, JOINS IDB

[Text] Seoul, Sept 12 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government plans to cooperate closely with Chile, Colombia and Venezuela in promoting the economic development of those three latin American countries, government sources said Friday.

The sources said the government would encourage Korean firms to set up joint ventures in those countries and to participate in business emigration to the region. In addition, the government has decided to become a member of the Inter-american Development Bank (IDB), which promotes financial cooperation in the region.

The sources said the measures were taken in response to the three nations' request that Korea participate in the economic development of the Latin American countries.

The government said the conclusion of both a bilateral double taxation avoidance agreement and an investment guarantee agreement should precede participation by Korea in Latin American economic development projects. The sources said the three nations responded positively to Korea's suggestion and again asked Korea to hold working-level talks to discuss the matter in the future.

In addition, the government is considering sending experts in industrial planning to Chile, Colombia and Venezuela and to train officials in those three nations, in order to support economic development projects there.

Korea plans to participate in toursim, the production of capital goods and natural sources, and exploration there.

The government is also considering a plan to allow prospective business emigrants to latin american nations to take with them more than 100,000 U.S. dollars.

Moreover, the government may expand practical economic cooperation with the Latin American countries through the external economic cooperation fund, which will be set up next year. The fund will be used to support development in developing countries and to expedite the export of Korean-made commodities facilities.

The government also plans to encourage Korean businesses to send a market research mission to Latin America. A 24-member business mission comprising seven government officials and 17 business leaders traveled to the three Latin American countries from Aug 18 to Sept 5 to discuss bilateral trade matters and the establishment of joint ventures.

PRACHEACHON ON PROPOSAL TO REDUCE POL POT FORCES

[PRACHEACHON Commentary: "New But Threadbare" -- date not given]

[Text] During the recent travels of Sihanouk, figurehead ringleader of the Beijing-propped so-called CGDK, to a number of ASEAN countries where he hoped to canvass support for the Beijing-created so-called 8-point peace proposal, Sihanouk -- Beijing's mouthpiece -- quoted China's ruling party Chairman Hu Yaobang as saying that, should Vietnam agree to pull out of Cambodia, he would agree to reduce the number of the Khmer Rouge soldiers from 35,000 to only 15,000 equaling the number of Sihanouk's and Son Sann's men. Sihanouk added that he accepted the idea of having an international peace-keeping force in Cambodia and disarming the warring factions.

Sihanouk's remarks were orchestrated by China. This is the first time that China has talked about decreasing the number of Pol Pot's soldiers, which clearly indicates the weakness both of China and the reactionary Khmer group. It is most obvious that they cannot continue to sing their old song in the face of the victories scored by the Cambodian revolution and of the demand of world public opinion for the elimination of the genocidal Pol Pot gang. Moreover, these remarks show China's odious policy of continuing to shore up the genocidal Pot Pot gang and return them to power in the service of China's maneuver to sabotage the Cambodian revolution, subvert the revolutions of the three Indochinese countries, and expand its hold on Southeast Asia.

China's change of tune was made in the face of world public opinion's unanimous suppport for our correct position and good-willed attitude in seeking a solution to the Cambodian question as explained in the various statements of the 11th, 12th, and 13th Indochinese Foreign Ministers Conferences. For this reason, prior to the opening of the Eighth Summit of Nonaligned Countries in Harare and before the opening of the 41st UN General Assembly, China deemed it necessary to stage this farce to enable Sihanouk to feign even greater flexibility to win the support and sympathy of a large segment of world public opinion.

However, this new trick of the Chinese authorities and reactionary Khmer groups cannot fool anybody. The whole world is well aware of and condemns the unprecedented crimes of the Pol Pot gang against the Cambodian people and fatherland in the years the gang wielded power in Cambodia.

Recently, Australian Foreign Minister Bill Hayden called for the creation of an international tribunal to conduct trials for the gang's crimes. No one is ignorant of the trick of Pol Pot's retirement and the so-called 8-point peace proposal, which in reality are nothing but a ploy to bring the genocidal gang back to power to resume the massacre of the Cambodian people in the service of the hegemonist-expansionist policy of the Beijing authorities in Indochina and Southeast Asia. These tricks have been duly unmasked and exposed. China's trick of changing the remnant Polpotist soldiers' black shirts into paratroopers' uniforms to dupe international public opinion is also useless. On the contrary, it can only make world public opinion more aware of the true situation in Cambodia and more cognizant of the fact that the PRK Government is the sole authentic and legitimate government of the Cambodian people with the right to discuss, decide on, and adopt measures to resolve all questions concerning Cambodia.

So far, China in collusion with the United States and Thailand, has attempted to reverse the serious and bitter setbacks suffered by the three reactionary Khmer groups during the 1984-85 dry season. It has attempted to use all kinds of perfidious activities, tricks, and maneuvers including military, political, and diplomatic moves and psychological warfare maneuvers to undermine the Cambodian revolution's position of victory and maintaining the offensive and to gain an advantage for the so-called CGDK.

Our stand is correct and clear-cut. The Pol Pot gang, as a military and political force that has caused so much suffering and misery to so many Cambodian families and almost total destruction to Cambodia can in no way return there and can play no role whatsoever in the settlement of the Cambodian problem. The presence of the Vietnam volunteer army is at the request of our government and people. Vietnamese Army volunteers have been withdrawn and are continuing to be withdrawn from Cambodia every year in accordance with an agreement between the PRK and Vietnamese Governments in light of the security situated in Cambodia.

The all-round successes, sturdiness, and vigor of the PRK in the past 8 years have made the Cambodian situation irreversible, and this irreversibility has become an undeniable reality. All anti-PRK maneuvers against the rebirth of the Cambodian people and all subversive tricks to split the militant solidarity of Cambodia and Vietnam [words indistinct] of public opinion and cannot escape failure. As for Sihanouk, he should know by now that he is doing himself no good by continuing to associate himself with the Pol Pot gang and to be the gang's shield and smokescreen.

'HEAVY FIGHTING' REPORTED NEAR PHNOM MALAI

BK111720 Hong Kong AFP in English 1714 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Bangkok, Sep 11 (AFP) -- Seven Vietnamese soldiers were reported killed and many wounded in a clash with Khmer Rouge resistance guerrillas near the Thai-Cambodian border, a source at the border said Thursday.

Heavy fighting erupted between guerrillas of the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge and an unspecified number of Vietnamese troops at mid-day Wednesday near the Phnom Malai Mountain, about five kilometres (3.2 miles) inside Cambodia near its common border with Thailand, the source said, quoting a Khmer Rouge report.

He said Vietnamese troops of the 59th Infantry Battalion stationed two kilometres (1.2 miles) south of Phnom Malai Mountain were on a mop-up operation against Cambodian resistance bases when they were attacked by Khmer Rouge guerrillas who were defending a nearby base. He said one guerrilla was killed while two others who were wounded in the fighting were safely evacuated to a field hospital.

The source said the fighting was made more difficult as heavy rains during the past week had caused flash-floods which had inundated many areas in Cambodia's western sector cutting several supply lines and hampering logistics for both the resistance and their Vietnamese adversaries.

The source said during the height of the fighting, a Vietnamese fire-base in Phum Tumnakchek, about 30 kilometres (18 miles) inside Cambodia, had fired several artillery and mortar shells and "Stalin Organ" rockets into Thai territory at Khao Saraphi Mountain destroying a house in a border village. Thai gunners did not return fire, he said.

Some 50,000 guerrillas of the U.N.-recognised tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK) are fighting an estimated 140,000 Vietnamese troops supporting the Hanoi-installed Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh. The CGDK groups the Khmer Rouge and two non-communist resistance factions. Vietnam has repeatedly said that it would withdraw all its troops from Cambodia by 1990, provided that the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge was eliminated as a fighting force.

PHICHAI ON U.S. LINKING COPYRIGHT, FARM ACT

BK111250 BANGKOK WORLD in English 11 Sep 86 p 32

[Text] The United States is seeking Thailand's support for amendments to copyright laws in exchange for revisions to the Farm Act, Deputy Prime Minister Phichai Rattakun said this morning.

Businessmen are opposed to the amendments and it will be impossible to amend all the laws, senior officials say.

In a separate interview, Foreign Minister ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi Sawetsila said he had also heard of the exchange proposal.

"We may be able to accept the U.S.'s proposal on certain issues but not all of them," ACM Sitthi said.

Mr Phichai said high-ranking U.S. officials were pushing for the exchange saying this could bring about a solution to Thailand's present sugar problem.

The exchange would require Thailand's support for amendments to laws concerning copyright, patents and intellectual properties.

Mr Phichai said he had turned down the offer and reminded U.S. officials that it was unnecessary for the U.S. "to help us in terms of funds."

"What we want is simply that the U.S. stop reacting against us with malice," Phichai added.

The Government is now doing its best to solve the sugar problem through talks with the private sector and U.S. authorities, he added.

Industry Minister Pramuan Saphawasu handed over a note to U.S. Ambassador William Brown expressing the Government's concern over the effect on prices of U.S. sugar sales on the world market, he said.

Sugar exporters earlier said U.S. cheap sales of 150,000 tons of sugar to China had brought down world prices. They expected another 250,000 tons of U.S. sugar to be dumped on the market this year.

ACM Sitthi said Thailand and 13 other non-subsiding [as published], farm-producing countries would raise the matter at the GATT (General Agreement on Tariff and Trade) meeting in Uruguay on September 15.

The 14 countries would call on the European Community and the U.S. to pay serious attention to the problem, he added.

Meanwhile, opposition parties shortly before midday submitted an urgent motion for a debate on U.S. dumping of sugar in China

The debate, resuming this afternoon, heard the foreign and industry ministers speak of hitherto action on the issue.

Opposition parties called on the Government to lodge a protest with the U.S. Government if there is no positive reaction from Washington.

PARLIAMENT WANTS PROTESTS ON SUGAR SALES

BK120059 Bangkok THE NATION in English 12 Sep 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] The House of Representatives yesterday demanded that the government strongly protest the recent subsidized U.S. sugar sale to China and adopt measures to support local sugarcane planters.

The 347-member House voted 188-0 for the opposition's motion calling for the government action after a heated debate on the looming sugar crisis. Opposition leaders took turns in hitting out at what they called the government's failure to put sufficient pressure on Washington and to come up with a reliable package of measures to ease the adverse consequences arising therefrom.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Chuan Likphai yesterday sent a letter to his American counterpart through the U.S. Embassy here, calling his attention to the sentiments here towards the U.S. decision to pass and implement the rice and sugar provisions of the Farm Act.

He also sought the American speaker's good offices to facilitate a possible move by the U.S. Administration to abrogate, amend or water down the Farm Act after the November congressional election in the United States.

The urgent motion submitted by opposition leaders yesterday called on the government to lodge a strong complaint protesting U.S. action, negotiate with debtors of sugarcane planters to ease interest payment terms, and overhaul the law on sugarcane and sugar, and related ministerial regulations and orders in force since 1984.

MPs said during the debate they felt a sense of betrayal on the part of the United States. They said the 145,850-ton sale had gravely damaged the economic interests of Thailand, a close ally which had shed blood to help the United States in Korea, Laos and Vietnam.

They said the government should pressure Washington to halt any further release of the planned 250,000 tons of sugar from the stock of the Commodity Credit Corp of the United States into the world market, and ask the U.S. to pay US$153 million in compensation for the market-dumping.

The subsidied sale of about 150,000 tons of raw sugar to China at 4.75 cents per pound compared to the world price of nearly nine cents caused a sharp drop in the world market price which went down by about two cents in less than a week.

Prachakorn Thai leader Samak Suntharawet sarcastically urged the Foreign Ministry to review "how mercifully the U.S. has treated Thailand." The United States set a quota to import only about 20,000 tons of Thai sugar compared to about 400,000 tons granted to Brazil and 200,000 tons for the Philippines.

The opposition leader suggested that the government should seek to barter Thai sugar for fertilizer from the Soviet Union, which is importing up to about 500,000 tons of raw sugar annually.

"Why not negotiate with the Soviet Union given the fact that our sugarcane planters use a lot of fertilizer which is imported from that country," he said.

Community Action leader Bunchu Rotchanasathian criticized the government for adopting "easy options" and said he doubted whether the local sugarcane planters would be able to survive the looming crisis.

"What has the government done?" While a minister hit out at the United States, another appealed for help from that country," said Bunchu, a top former banker and ex-deputy prime minister in charge of economic affairs.

Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila told the House session that the ministry is trying to avert the impact of the sugar dumping onto the world market on the domestic sugar industry.

"We have put across our call to the U.S. administration through its embassy here and we will broach the issue during the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) meeting in Uruguay on September 15. During my trip to the United States, I will also hold talks with American congressmen on the issue," he said.

Sitthi Answers Motion

BK110948 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila this morning answered an urgent motion by opposition MP's at the House of Representatives' meeting concerning the sugar price cut by the United States. He said:

[Begin Sitthi recording] We must distinguish between the U.S. Congress which is willing to help us, and the pressures from U.S. farmers, sugar mills, and rice mills. Based on that fact, we are taking steps accordingly.

First, we will wait for the result of next week's meeting in Pattaya. Minister Chirayu will attend the seminar in Pattaya on 15 September. We have designated him coordinator of the seminar of the private sector, the Parliament, and other agencies. In order to cope with such a problem, we must work as a team.

We made a long-distance telephone call asking whether it would be possible for the United States not to dump another 250,000 tons; the United States still could not tell us. There is nothing certain at the moment. Anyway, I have asked the United States to be careful about pricing -- it should not cut prices to a very low level. Before selling its products, the United States should first study the formula and sell its products at prices close to the world market prices, instead of dumping its products at very low prices and causing other nations trouble.

Second, the U.S. should give us warning when it plans such an action so we can also plan for ourselves.

Third, I asked the United States to consider our hardships, as we are friends, and to think of the losses caused us. Also, we may ask the United States to compensate us by providing us with an additional quota, although I realize this is improbable as the U.S. cannot use the quota of other countries for Thailand.

As for the next steps that we are going to take, I would like to tell you that, as I am going to attend the UN General Assembly, I will stop in Washington and seek an opportunity to explain the problem to the U.S. Government and the Congress. I only hope that the problem will be solved to some degree. We have many other countries joining with us in this effort, including Japan which is lobbying to include the problem of agriculture on the agenda of the coming GATT session.

Well, we hope that as a result of our efforts we will be able to convince the United States to adjust its approach so as to cause minimal effect on a country like Thailand. As for the second step, we wholeheartedly wish the U.S. would abolish its subsidizing method as this is not the practice of any free trade system. The United States is a big country; it should not use its money power to push us around. We have been doing what it wanted, anyway. [end recording]

JOURNALIST VIEWS SOVIET 'LOOK EAST' POLICY

[Article by Pratchayathawi Tawethikun entitled: "Changes in Soviet Foreign Policy could be a Mirage"]

[Excerpt] [passage omitted] This year's visit by Zaytsev received even greater interest because of the new "Look East" policy enunciated by Soviet Boss Mikhail Gorbachev in July. The olive branch was extended particularly to China in the form of more trade and economic cooperation and the promise to withdraw some troops from Afghanistan and along the border. On his visit to Thailand, Zaytsev was quoted as saying that he came here as Gorbachev's special envoy with "verbal messages" in regard to the "Look East" policy. Simultaneously, Mikhail Kapitsa was dispatched to Australia, New Zealand and Japan, ostensibly to explain further what the "Look East" policy really meant.

But important as Zaytsev's visit might have been this time, both he and the Thai officials kept their lips tight about the results. The Foreign Ministry's spokesman acknowledged only that there remained "some obstacles" in Thai-Soviet relations. That was not very useful and in no way contributed to a better understanding. However, sensing the difficulty arising out of the US protectionist policy, the BANGKOK POST later learned that Zaytsev did not fail to fish in troubled waters. He promised to expand Soviet trade with Thailand by buying practically every item which Thailand is having problems with the United States.

From whatever evidence that is available, one may have to conclude that it was Zaytsev who came out of the visit with flying colours. No doubt, the Soviet Union has been portrayed in a much more favourable light. The visit was followed by the news that Vietnam is now desiring to solve the Kampuchean problem, and after that, may even want to join ASEAN. On the other front things are also looking up. Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila announced two days later that good prospects now exist for the normalisation of relations between Thailand and Laos.

Of course the leadership change in the Soviet Union usually produces much speculation about new opportunities for a breakthrough towards peace. Because of its immense power, the hope is as natural as it is necessary. The Soviets themselves have never failed to exploit the opportunities. There has been a persistent pattern of behaviour in this regard. One recalls that when Khrushchev took over, he promptly began the process of de-Stalinisation and proclaimed "peaceful co-existence" with the West. But what followed was that his Cuban policy brought the world to the brink of a nuclear war with the United States.

However, optimism was renewed when Brezhnev took over from Khrushchev. His focus of attention was on "detente". Summits with the American presidents were supposed to bring genuine relaxation of tensions. Henry Kissinger worked very hard to implement the linkage approach, meaning that progress in one area can lead to progress in another area and vice versa. But while detente was at its height, Angola and Ethiopia fell to Soviet-sponsored Cuban troops. Soviet military bases were established in South Yemen, there was a Communist coup in Afghanistan followed by an invasion by the Soviet Army. Soviet political and military support for the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea not only continues unabated but also intensifies. All this has been buttressed by the Soviet Union's relentless military buildup, begun long before that of the Reagan administration.

This ominous and discouraging background must weigh heavily as one ponders Gorbachev's "Look East" policy. The question is obviously how sincere and serious the Soviet leader is for peace. Gorbachev, it is said, appears to be more flexible and conciliatory than his predecessors. He also has as an important asset an attrative wife in addition to wearing nice clothes and being jovial. But this may not be enough. Why then should this change of appearance improve the prospects of peace? How could a man who spends all his life wishing the destruction of capitalism suddenly emerge as a closet liberal?

In the final analysis, of course, no one knows for sure. But as far as Thailand is concerned, it must conduct its foreign policy towards the Soviet Union without any illusions. Experience has shown, from the time of Gromyko up to now, that the Soviets are oblivious to the process of give-and-take which is inherent in any negotiation. Presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan have understood all too well this Soviet trait. If we are to profit from the present situation, it will require a common policy and a specific programme by all our friends, plus the willingness of all those who are interested in peace, to subordinate short-term advantages to a long-term conception of the future.

More on Soviet Overtures

BK111102 Bangkok THE NATION in English 7 Sep 86 p 10

[Article by Kawi Chongkitthawon: "Soviet Overture Needs New Orchestration"]

[Text] It is not difficult to gauge the Soviet strategic thinking pattern on countries like Thailand and the rest of Southeast Asian countries. This visit of Anatoliy Zaytsev, head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's newly established Southeast Asia Department, once again demonstrated just that.

Like in the previous year, Zaytsev's discussions with the Senior Foreign Ministry officials here, which this time lasted altogether more than eight hours, were zeroed in on similar issues and identical questions concerning the situation in Southeast Asia.

Since Zaytsev was the most senior official from Moscow to visit Thailand after the now much talked about Vladivostok speech, he naturally spent a lot of time expounding on the Soviet's new policy on the Asia-Pacific region as outlined by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in July.

Despite the cordial exchanges of views between officials from both sides, the talks did not produce any positive results as foreign policy eyesores still exist.

The very first thing Zaytsev did was to reiterate Moscow's invitation to Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila to visit the USSR. After more than a year Sitthi still remains uncommital. Sitthi's reluctance can serve as a barometer of the true stace of the Thai-USSR relations. It shows the stagnation in the bilateral ties, which means a step backward. Indeed, the effect of stagnation will continue to be felt until the day Sitthi decides to go to Moscow.

During Zaytsev's talks with both Asa Sarasin, permanent secretary for foreign affairs and Nit Phibunsongkhram, director general of International Organization Department, he expressed his government's clear desire to intensify comprehensive bilateral ties in all areas, political, economic, cultural and science and technology. But Thai officials in turn have made it clear that this could only take place, however, when the overall political climate between the two countries improves.

Observers including Soviet diplomats here were optimistic that next month's trade exhibition, one of the biggest Soviet trade fairs ever to be held outside the Soviet Union, will signal the strengthening of economic cooperation between Bangkok and Moscow, and would subsequently improve other ties as well.

The Foreign Ministry, however, does not entertain this kind of wishful thinking for the further development of relations would depend on Soviet's attitude on matters relating to Thailand's security interest. Namely, the threat posed by the Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea. Moscow is the main supporter of Hanoi, providing up to US$800 million worth of military hardware annually.

The Soviet maintain that they are obligated to assist their Vietnamese ally and will continue to do so, but Moscow also insists that it is not directly involved in the Kampuchean problem and does not exercise any influence over the Vietnamese on this matter. Such argument did not last very long along the corridors of the Saranrom Palace.

The Kampuchean quagmire aside, among other issues related to peace and stability in the region discussed at length were the All-Asian Forum and the nuclear free zone in the South Pacific.

Although Thailand has kept a close watch on the development of the All-Asian Forum, it has been reserved in divulging its position on the proposal, which was made by Gorbachev as early as February 1985 during the visit to Moscow by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India.

Officials here thought the proposal was reminiscent of the Brezhnev Doctrine, and the effort to organize a Helsinki style conference for Asian countries on peace and security was also irrelevant because there were some differences between Southeast and Europe. For one thing, Asia is not divided into hostile military alliances like Europe. The Thais were mute at the Soviet suggestion that a forum be formed to exchange views on Asian security, if not at the official level at least in seminars and conferences of Asian intellectuals. The All-Asian Forum has been raised by senior Soviet officials during their visits to the ASEAN region. Most of the ASEAN countries were indifferent but the support came from the Indochinese countries.

While a country like Japan thought it was a propaganda exercise, Singapore rejected the proposal outright by saying it could not be realized in any way.

Against all odds, ironically, Thailand and the Soviet Union share one common view in that both countries support the South Pacific nuclear free zone. The treaty was signed by the 13-nation South Pacific Forum last year.

The Soviet supports the treaty because it is in line with the basic Soviet position on the subject of nuclear free zones. Moscow also views that the treaty should carry guarantees that all signatory countries must be free of nuclear weapons including a ban on foreign warships and aircraft from using port and airport facilities in the regions.

The idea of nuclear free zones has been accorded top priority by Moscow because there is already a considerable sentiment in favour of the establishment of nuclear free zones in various regions including Southeast Asia, Nordic and Baltic regions, according to a senior Thai Foreign Ministry official.

Zaytsev did touch upon the nuclear free zones in Southeast Asia as proposed by Indonesia during the 19th ASEAN foreign ministerial meeting in Manila in June. But the Thais limited the discussion to the ASEAN concept of ZOPFAN (Zone of Peace, Freedom, and Neutralilty) without going into much detail.

As the Foreign Ministry official puts it, whenever possible Moscow will encourage individual states and regional groups of states to reject the deployment and production of Western nuclear weapons and create nuclear free zones.

Like in the previous visit, Zaytsev continued to portray the new Soviet leader and the overall Kremlin leadership as realistic and optimistic. From the discussion, however, Thai officials see the whole exercise as the Soviet's attempt to pillory the Thais as the Asian harbinger of US's interest.

If the Soviets want a genuine normal state-to-state relations including economic and cultural intercourse with Thailand and the rest of ASEAN, it is hopeful the next visit by Soviet officials here must provide winds of change in Moscow's assessment of this region. Such change would certainly help to advance the cause of peace and improve the region's stability.

At the same time, Romania has expressed interest in cooperation with Thailand in industrial development, fertilizer production, and oil exploration.

CHAWALIT TELLS REPORTERS: 'NO MORE COUPS'

BK120051 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 12 Sep 86 p 1, 3

[Text] Army Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut last night pledged his full support for the parliamentary system and said a "coup is impossible as long as I am here".

Addressing a dinner gathering organised by the Foreign Correspondents Club of Thailand, Gen Chawalit appealed for "patience and confidence" in democracy and said he believes the parliamentary system "will be better and better".

Before the July 27 general election, he said, many people, including political leaders, told him they felt the elections were useless and meaningless.

They asked what could be done so that the elections would not take place.

Gen Chawalit said there were two ways -- a coup d'etat or that Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon resign, creating a power vacuum.

"I told them we can't go back. We have to go on. Even if the elections are for nothing.

"It (the parliamentary system) will have meaning in the future," he said. Gen Chawalit said the leaders of the country must develop confidence.

"But as long as I am here -- no more coups," he said.

Gen Chawalit, however, warned of the "internal threat and conditions" which are still conducive to the growth of communism. The conditions that would compel people to return to the jungle still existed, he said, and communism does not arise from economic hardship.

The general did not believe in the words of Mao Tse Tung, who said that if the people are hungry "they make good communists" but if their stomachs are full "they make bad communists."

He illustrated his point by saying that India is full of hunger but is not communist while many Europeans have enough to eat but are still communist.

"Our country can have a 10 percent growth rate every year and can still turn communist," he said.

Gen Chawalit said the communist problem will occur "if the distribution of wealth is unfair."

Asked if, as a senator, he would vote for an elected prime minister in a proposed constitutional amendment, Gen Chawalit said:

"Yes, the prime minister must come from an elected member of parliament, but we should wait for a while, for the right moment, for the situation to get better."

Gen Chawalit said that how long the country must wait for an elected prime minister depended on "realities" of the situation.

Asked whether he wants to become prime minister after he resigns in two years, Gen Chawalit said: "I have said this a long time ago. What I have said is not connected with the present situation.

"I don't have any thoughts of being prime minister at all. I can now say that I have no thoughts of being prime minister."

Asked whether the September 9 coup suspects should be given an anmesty, Gen Chawalit said: "The main problem for Thailand now is unity. Therefore, whatever has to be done to create unity is what we must do."

Gen Chawalit said that the suspects "have a right to be given amnesty" but this is a matter for the judicial system and has nothing to do with the Army.

'SOURCE' CITED ON MIA REMAINS HANDOVER

[Text] Hanoi, Sept 11 (AFP) -- Vietnam may hand over the remains of a number of U.S. servicemen listed as missing in action (MIA) during the Vietnam War to the United States Wednesday, an official Vietnamese source said here Thursday. Hanoi had proposed to Washington that September 17 be fixed as the date for turning over the remains of an undisclosed number of U.S. troops to the United States, the source said. "We are waiting for the Americans to respond," the source said.

Vietnam handed over to the United States the remains of 21 MIA's during the last such handover in April. According to Pentagon figures, some 1,770 U.S. servicemen have not been accounted for in Vietnam, and a total of 2,400 U.S. servicemen are listed as missing in action in all of Indochina. Vietnam has handed over the remains of 150 U.S. troops to the United States since the two countries opened talks on the MIA issue in 1982.

COMMUNIQUE REPORTS ON DAMAGE FROM TYPHOON

["Text" of 11 September communique on typhoon damage from Central Flood and Typhoon Control Committee]

[Text] Typhoon No 5 was building on 16 August 1986. After nearly 2 weeks of motion in the Eastern Sea, it twice approached our country's coast, now raging into a storm, now subsiding into a depression. After causing damage on Taiwan and in the Philippines, on 31 August 1986, the typhoon advanced toward our country's coast for the third time. On 3 September 1986, typhoon No 5 entered the Eastern Sea. On 4 September, the winds in the eye of the storm reached force 11 and 12. It moved in a westerly northwest direction at more than 20 kms per hour.

Early in the morning of 6 September, from 0100 to 0300, the typhoon began to strike the mainland. Winds in Haiphong, Thai Binh, and Ha Nam Ninh reached force 11 with gusts to force 12. Then, it moved deep into the mainland and subsided.

Before and after the typhoon hit, rain fell in the Bac Bo Delta provinces, averaging between 150 to 250mm. Upon report of the third return of the typhoon, on 3 September the Council of Ministers' Standing Committee, the Central Flood and Typhoon Control Committee, and the leaders of the party committees and administrations in Thai Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, Quang Ninh, Haiphong, and Ha Son Binh Provinces issued close guidance for preventing and controlling typhoon damage.

However, due to the violence of the typhoon during the night from 0100 to 0300, on 6 September, heavy damage occurred, especially in Thai Binh and Ha Nam Ninh Provinces. The storm damged 25 districts and towns in the five provinces mentioned earlier. The hardest hit areas are Tien Hai and Kien Xuong Districts of Thai Binh Province and Xuan Thuy and Nam Ninh Districts of Ha Nam Ninh Province.

In Thai Binh and Ha Nam Ninh Provinces, nearly 400 people were killed, more than 2,500 people injured, and over 30 people are missing. The typhoon has caused heavy damge to the people's property and houses. Many public utility projects, stations, farms, factories, schools, hospitals, and warehouses of cooperatives and the state have collapsed. Nearly 650,000 houses of the people have collapsed or were heavily damaged. Hundreds of thousand of people are homeless. Nearly 1,000 classrooms and more than 1,000 hospital rooms have been destroyed. Nearly 200 ships, boats, and barges have sunk. More than 2,000 high-voltage electric poles and many high-voltage transformer stations have collapsed. Telephone and radio networks of dozens of districts have been paralyzed.

While the damage to crops was not considerable, millions of fruit and timber trees were knocked down. The sytem of sea dikes from Quang Ninh to Ha Nam Ninh Provinces has been destroyed in many places.

Under the leadership and guidance of the party Central Committee and the government, and with the assistance of many sectors and localities, the cadres and people of the storm damaged areas are helping one another and are striving to overcome Typhoon No. 5 aftermath.

SOVIET DISCONTENT WITH KIRIBATI FISHING NOTED

[Text] The Soviet Union says it is not satisfied with the commercial results of its fishing agreement with Kiribati. The Soviet Embassy in the Australian capital, Canberra, said that Russia would reduce the number of vessels fishing in Kiribati and wanted to cut back on the license fee paid. A third secretary of the Soviet Embassy, Mr (Vladimir Volkov), said there was a big gap between what the Soviet Union was offering and what Kiribati wanted under a new fishing agreement. The present agreement is worth about $1.5 million [currency not specified]. However, Mr (Volkov) said that the Soviet Union wanted to continue its fishing activities in the South Pacific. He said the Soviet Union had no military interests in the South Pacific and rejected American claims that Moscow was likely to develop Kiribati or other island states for strategic purposes.

HAWKE, LABOR PARTY DEBATE URANIUM ISSUE

[Text] The federal executive of the Australian Labor Party has warned the Hawke government that action such as its decision to breach party policy by lifting the ban on uranium export to France should not be repeated. The executive meeting in Sydney rejected a move from the party's left wing to return the government's uranium decision. A Radio Australia reporter, (Graham Wall), has the story:

[Begin (Wall) recording] After several hours of debate on the uranium issue, the executive adopted a motion calling for closer consultation between the government and party officers on such contentious isues. I understand the motion does not rebuke or reprimand the prime mininster, but does include a warning that such a course should not be repeated. The debate narrowed down to two motions. The left's call for a reversal of the decision was defeated as expected and the consultation proposal worked out between the right and center left factions was adopted 16 votes to 12 with the prime minister's support. But I am told that after the vote there was a bitter exchange between Mr Hawke and senior left-wing member, Mr Gerry Hand. The executive then moved on to discuss preselection threats to federal ministers, in particular, Senator John Button. The Victorian left executive had decided to replace Senator Button at the top of the Senate ticket in that state with Metal Workers Union leader, Mr John Halfpenny. The executive is expected to make it clear today that Senator Button must be number one on the ticket, otherwise it will act. The party's public office selection committee in Victoria controlled by the left meets later this month to determine the Senate ticket. [end recording]

MOKHTAR SAYS PRC COUNTERPART READY TO HOLD MEETING

BK111059 Jakarta International Service in English 0800 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian has gladly welcomed a plan to meet Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja in New York in October this year to discuss the Kampuchean problem. Speaking to reporters upon arrival from the nonaligned summit in Harare last week, Minister Mokhtar disclosed that he had received a message to this extent from the Chinese foreign minister.

Minister Mokhtar recently expressed agreement to the request of the president of Kampuchean Democratic Coalition Government, Sihanouk, to meet with the Chinese leader to discuss the Kampuchean problem. He said the meeting will be held in coincidence with the beginning of the UN General Assembly in New York in October 1986. The minister added that, while in Harare, officials of the ASEAN members who are also members of the Nonaligned Movement, had made contacts with those of the Indochinese group, particularly Vietnam, to discuss the problem.

GOLKAR CHIEF VIEWS ELECTION PROSPECTS

BK111145 Jakarta TEMPO in Indonesian 6 Sep 86 pp 17, 18

[Interview with Functional Group Chairman Sudharmono by TEMPO correspondent A. Luqman aboard Pelita Air Service plane on flight from Surabaya to Jakarta -- date not given]

[Text] [Luqman] Do you think that Goikar [Functional Group] will be able to hit its target in the coming general elections?

[Sudharmono] Golkar wants to capture 70 percent of the votes, but the people will decide whether or not Golkar will be able to hit this target. It will require hard work. You see, it is hard to win the hearts of 7 out of 10 people. If we can reach the target, we will be happy. If we surpass it, we will be happier. However, we should not be overconfident.

[Luqman] Are you optimistic that Golkar will surpass its target?

[Sudharmono] We will try to attain the 70-percent majority first, but if we persuade 7 people to join us and it turns out that 10 want to, why should we reject them? Of course we cannot tell them: "No, no, you cannot join us," because it would be undemocratic, wouldn't it?

[Luqman] If Golkar succeeds in capturing almost 100 percent of the vote, where do you think the additional votes will come from?

[Sudharmono] Well, from anywhere. We expect to obtain votes from the new voters, namely the younger generation that was not qualified to vote during the elections. There are a lot of these people, and our 70-percent majority is expected to come partly from them.

[Luqman] If Golkar does surpass its target, do you think that additional votes will come from the internal split between the Nahdlatul Ulama and the United Development Party [PPN]?

[Sudharmono] We do not base our projecton of election results on the weaknesses of other contenders but rather on our own ability and strength.

[Luqman] Well, if Golkar wins by too large a margin, don't you think it is dangerous?

[Sudharmono] Dangerous? Why? You think Golkar will become a monolithic group? In what way is it monolithic? Even right now, such a monolithic situation already exists. In Southeast Sulawesi, Golkar is in total control along with the Indonesian Armed Forces, and development programs are proceeding smoothly. Such a situation also exists in East Nusatenggara and West Nusatenggara.

[Luqman] Do you thing that the situation in Southeast Sulawesi can be used as a national model?

[Sudharmono] Let me put it this way. If the people want it that way, that's all to the good, meaning: That is what the people really want through the democratic process. The PPP and the Indonesian National Party will, of course, continue to exist, but they will have to work harder -- and not just for another 5 years.

That is why I always stress that defending our position is harder than capturing it. Looking at the present political map, I can say that Golkar is in total control of the eastern part of Indonesia, namely from South Sulawesi eastward, or at least 90 percent of the population. Golkar faces an uphill task in Japa and Aceh. It is possible that it may not attain its target in the Metropolitan Jakarta, West Sumatera, South Sumatera, and South Kalimantan.

[Luqman] Will Aceh be a testing ground for Golkar this time?

[Sudharmono] Yes, that is right.

[Luqman] What percentage do you expect to get in Aceh?

[Sudharmono] Our target is 50 percent, 20 percent lower than our national target. We have raised the target by 14 percentage points from our current 36 percent. According to our Aceh regional executive committee, we have to work really hard without abandoning fair and democratic means.

[Luqman] Why is it difficult for the banyan tree [Golkar election symbol] to grow in the courtyard of Mecca [Aceh province]?

[Sudharmono] Perhaps Golkar cadres do not explain sufficiently what Golkar is doing. That is the only reason, I think.

[Luqman] Will the situation improve following the goodwill [preceding work in English] shown by Daud Beureueh [former leader of Aceh's Muslim rebel group]?

[Sudharmono] Perhaps. I don't know, but off course this is favorable.

[Luqman] What other areas does Golkar view as hard testing grounds?

[Sudharmono] Metropolitan Jakarta. Now, we have 46 percent of the total vote. We expect to win 60 percent of the votes in th upcoming general elections. Oh, the Jakarta Regional Executive Council [of Golkar] has said that the target may not be attained.

[Luqman] Who is Golkar's candidate to challenge Naro [PPP general chairman] in Jakarta?

[Sudharmono] We will know later on. The time has not yet come to announce the name. The names of Golkar candidates have not been officially announced. But, the mass media has released the names of those not proposed as candidates, including those of four members of the Parliamentary Functional Group Faction hailing from Riau. Indeed, Golkar's Riau Regional Executive Council did not recommend these names. The central executive council needed the recommendation.

[Luqman] Is this closely related to the Riau case [in which the four did not support a Golkar nominee for the Riau governorship]?

[Sudharmono] Perhaps. Performance, dedication, and loyalty are requirements for candidates.

[Luqman] In what factor did they fail?

[Sudharmono] Loyalty.

[Luqman] What are the reasons for the decision not to renominate persons like Rusli Desa and Sawidago Wounde?

[Sudharmono] It was impossible to renominate all the 267 members of the Parliamentary Functional Group Faction. It is impossible. Even if we viewed them as perfect, we would not renominate all. We need fresh faces and dynamism. We must give chances to the young ones.

[Luqman] Was this the reason of the decision not to renominate Rusli, who had served for a long time?

[Sudharmono] I don't want to disclose the names. In this organization, members will not necessarily become members of parliament. There are many more other opportunities outside parliament.

[Luqman] Does Golkar have obligation to help its former members of parliament?

[Sudharmono] Yes, morally. We will defend those who are unfairly treated. For example, the businessman Akil was forced to close down his business after retiring from parliament. We helped him. We will not abandon our members. However, we will reprimand those making mistakes.

[Luqman] Do you think that the nomination of sons of officials should be treated in the same way as that of others?

[Sudharmono] Yes, of course. We have mechanisms and systems that do not discriminate against anyone. Tantyo [Sundharmono's son] was included in the list of candiates. He was not nominated. Why? Because there were many other candidates.

[Luqman] But, some members of the Parliamentary Armed Forces Faction will be accepted by the Parliamentary Functional Group Faction without going through the normal mechanism. Do you have any comment?

[Sudharmono] They have been and are Golkar members. There is no reason for us not to use their services. They serve well in the Parliamentary Armed Forces Faction. Thus, there will be continuity. They are retirees of the Indonesian Armed Forces [ABRI] who support Golkar.

[Luqman] To what extent is ABRI's support expected in the upcoming general elections?

[Sudharmono] ABRI has sociopolitical functions in addition to its responsibility for security. ABRI cannot vote, but it has aspirations. Thus, ABRI is striving to achieve its aspirations through democratic, political channels. For this purpose, ABRI must look for friends. It has forces comprising of the wives of soldiers and ABRI veterans. They serve as a political channel for ABRI. Thus, the Association of ABRI Veterans, for example, has said that it is channeling its political aspirations through Golkar. So has Dharma Pertiwi [association of the wives of the veterans], though not openly. Indeed, as the largest political force, Golkar is usually what various circles pin their aspirations on. For example, the chairman of the East Java chapter of the Indonesian Development Youth Movement [AMPI], Sukoco Said, said at an AMPI flag-hoisting ceremony in Surabaya: "We would like to request Golkar representatives in the People's Consultative Assembly [MPR] to reelect Mr Suharto as chief executive."

[Luqman] Various organizations have expressed support for the reelection of Suharto as president. Why hasn't Golkar done so?

[Sudharmono] The work must be systematic and programmatic. Golkar makes decisions through a plenary executive meeting. I am an individual, only the general chairman. However, we will make our stand known at an appropriate time. When? Before the general elections. We must have concepts, particularly a concept to be presented to the MPR. As the MPR represents the people, we must have a concept on development for the people to trust. The development program must be good. In addition, its executor must also be the best. We must tell the people about this.

SUPREME COURT ORDERS RETRIAL IN AQUINO MURDER CASE

[By Roberto Coloma]

[Text] Manila, Sept 12 (AFP) -- The Philippines Supreme Court unanimously decided Friday to order the immediate retrial of 26 people acquitted of the 1983 assassination of President Corazon Aquino's husband. Lawyers of the accused said they would immediately appeal the decision, widely expected here after a special probe commission concluded that the original trial was rigged by then president Ferdinand Marcos deposed in February.

The 11-member tribunal said in a resolution signed by Chief Justice Claudio Teehankee that the new trial "should be conducted with deliberate dispatch and with careful regard for the requirement of due process so that the truth may be finally known and justice done to all." Opposition leader Benigno Aquino's August 21, 1983 shooting at Manila airport as he returned from self-imposed U.S. exile sparked a crisis which let to the downfall of Mr Marcos and swept the slain politician's widow to power. Mrs Aquino holds Mr Marcos directly responsible for the murder.

The Supreme Court order nullified the acquittal in December of former Armed Forces chief General Fabian Ver -- who fled with Mr Marcos to Hawaii during the February uprising -- 24 other soldiers and a businessman charged with involvement in a plot to murder Mr Aquino. Lawyer Rodolfo Jimenez, counsel for most of the accused soldiers, told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE when told of the order: "I would like to read the decision first. If it's true, then definitely I will file a motion for reconsideration." The 26 accused were also charged with the murder of Rolando Galman, a reputed gangster slain at the airport and immediately named by the Marcos government as Mr Aquino's communist assassin.

The Supreme Court's ruling was in response to two petitions for a retrial filed by Mr Galman's family and a group of prominent Filipinos even before the acquittal was handed down by a lower court after a stormy 10-month trial. The resolution did not categorically state the venue of the new trial but National Ombudsman Raul Gonzales, who is expected to lead the prosecution, earlier said the same court which rendered the acquittal would handle the case. Mr Gonzales and all the judges were appointed by Mrs Aquino as part of a sweeping revamp of the judiciary following the revolt led by Gen. Ver's rivals, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces chief General Fidel Ramos. The two declared Mrs Aquino the cheated winner of the election that month in which the assassination figured prominently as a campaign issue.

The ruling commended the three members of the special panel which concluded that Mr Marcos pressured the trial court into rendering an acquittal, and the prosecution into withholding vital evidence against the accused. Chief Justice Teehankee, an Aquino appointee, called for an impartial trial.

"With this court's judgment today declaring the nullity of the questioned judgment of acquittal and directing a new trial, there must be a rejection of the temptation of becoming instruments of injustice as vigorously as we rejected becoming its victims," the resolution he wrote said. "The end of one form of injustice should not become simply the beginning of another.

"This simply means that the respondents accused must now face trial for the crimes charged against them before an impartial court with an unbiased prosecutor with all due process," it added. "The people will assuredly have a way of knowing when justice has prevailed as well as when it has failed." No comment was immediately available from the Presidential Palace as well as prosecutors involved in the original trial. After she became president, Mrs Aquino repeatedly said she would like to know the full story behind the assassination but vowed never to interfere in judicial proceedings.

In his separate concurring opinion, Associate Justice Hugo Guiterrez said: "It is not enough for the future proceedings to be fair. They should be above any suspicion of partiality, bias, rancor, or vindictiveness. It would be unfortunate if, in the conduct of further proceedings in this case, erroneous impressions may arise that a prosecutor or judge has prejudged the guilt or innocence of any accused. Having just declared a mistrial, we should not again declare the retrial as another mistrial, ad infinitum," said the justice, who was among five members of the Marcos Supreme Court retained by Mrs Aquino.

POLICE, MILITARY READY FOR LOYALIST RALLY

[Text] Some 1,200 police and soldiers from the National Capital Regional Command, or Capcom, were stationed at different institutes around Manila in connection with the planned rally to be staged by supporters of former President Marcos. Colonel Edgar de la Torre, Western Police District deputy chief, said policemen were stationed in front of the U.S. Embassy, along Mendiola Bridge leading to Malacanang, and around Quirino Grandstand. At the same time, some 500 Marcos supporters began amassing at 1300 this afternoon at Liwasang Bonifacio in front of the post office building to celebrate the 69th birthday of the ousted president.

10,000 Mark Marcos' Birthday

[Text] Some 10,000 Marcos loyalists yesterday [11 Sep] braved heavy rains to celebrate the 69th birth anniversary of former president Marcos at the Liwasang Bonifacio. Despite a 20-minute heavy downpour, the Marcos followers stayed in the rally shouting "Marcos, Marcos pa rin [still]," referring to the deposed president as their legal president. The loyalists came from different parts of Metro Manila and marched toward Liwasang Bonifacio as early as 1 pm yesterday. Most of them wore Marcos-Tolentino T-shirts and waved white and blue banners. Former members of parliament Salvador Britanico and Gerardo Espina, model Annie Ferrer, and other prominent Marcos loyalist leaders took turns in lambasting the Aquino government. They accused her government of being communist-infiltrated and her presidency as illegal and unconstitutional.

Celebration Peaceful

[Text] Manila, Sep 11 (AFP) -- Red, white and blue balloons and streamers decked a central square here Thursday as thousands of diehard supporters of Ferdinand Marcos gathered in a festive celebration of the deposed strongman's 69th birthday.

Crowds estimated by independent observers at 5,000 converged in front of the central post office and chanted "Marcos still," exploded firecrackers and raised placards and streamers which read "happy birthday Marcos" in a noisy rally.

The participants wore mostly red clothing and toted red, white and blue balloons symbolizing the campaign colors of the exiled former strongman who had ruled the country for 20 years. Mr. Marcos, who turned 69 Thursday, is living in exile in Hawaii following a popular revolt which toppled him and installed his election rival Corazon Aquino to the presidency last February. President Aquino Wednesday revoked a 1980 decree proclaiming Mr. Marcos' September 11 a special holiday. [sentence as received]

There were no police in the square, but riot police and troops guarded nearby Rizal Park here suspected Marcos supporters killed an Aquino supporter in July. Earlier Thursday, thousands of posters showing a smiling picture of Mr. Marcos during his early years as the country's leader appeared all over the capital. The poster bore a message addressed to "our President," telling him that "Your love for the Filipinos have kept us going during these dark days when others seek to delude us."

There had been public apprehension that Marcos diehards, who staged a failed coup in July, would foment trouble on their leader's birthday, but pro-Marcos lawyer Nemi de Pedro said Thursday's activities would "stress on spiritual values." "We will pray for Marcos and his immediate return to power," the lawyer told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. Other posters at the rally read "Unite Against Communism," echoing Mr. Marcos' oft-repeated allegations that communists have infiltrated the Aquino government.

Mrs. Aquino opposes the immediate return of Mr. Marcos here, fearing that he would foment instability here. The government also wants him to stay put as it undertakes the recovery of billions of dollars in wealth which he allegedly accumulated while he was in power. Mrs. Aquino has sacked a fugitive military Colonel Balbino Diego who was the intelligence and legal affairs chief of Mr. Marcos's feared Presidential Security command, the Presidential Palace said Thursday.

ADVISER CITES DANGER OF N-WEAPONS AT U.S. BASES

HK111503 Manila THE MANILA JOURNAL in English 11 Sep 86 pp 1, 9

[By Vicente M. Tanedo]

[Text] A ranking foreign ministry adviser yesterday warned that a nuclear accident in any of the US military bases in the country can wipe out thousands of Filipinos and endanger the lives of President Aquino and other high officials as well as paralyze government operations.

Ambassador Narciso Reyes, chairman of the Foreign Relations Council, told a Foreign Service Institute [FSI] seminar yesterday that a similar accident in the US would spare President Reagan and his Cabinet because they are better protected.

"There are no provisions for the safety of our President, in this case," Reyes said. "In the US they have shelters that can withstand an atomic blast."

Reyes was apparently referring to the risks posed by nuclear power notwithstanding manner of the use as seen in the heavy toll resulting from the Chernobyl nuclear plant accident in the Soviet Union last April 26.

US authorities on Clark Airbase and Subic Naval Base, however, have refused to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear facilities in those military bases for security reasons.

In connection with this, Reyes recalled how New Zealand after refusing US nuclear armed naval vessels to dock at her ports had been divested of the US protective umbrella in the region.

Reyes, commenting on the inclusion of the bases in President Aquino's agenda during her state visit to the US next week, said "the Americans are about to apply screws on our gentle President."

"That would be the moment of truth for our dear President," he added.

On whether the bases agreement should be extended beyond 1991, the expiration date, Reyes suggested that commissions should be set up to ascertain the national consensus on the need to continue with the bases from the standpoint of security, economics and the risks of their continuance as judged by scientific minds.

Offhand, Reyes said that "the question of security should not be used as an excuse for perpetuating inequalities in RP-US relations."

For instance, he said, the US only started paying the Philippines for the use of the bases in 1974 and the amount paid is inadequate.

The so-called economic support fund of $500 million spread over a period of five years is subject to the supervision of the USAID although this amount is disbursed for the building of local schoolhouses, markets and feeder roads, he said.

He said that this is a form of interference in domestic affairs.

"The country is gradually slipping into a situation like those of the Eastern European countries and Vietnam vis-a-vis the Soviet Union," he claimed.

The fact that the government cannot entirely rely on the US in desperate need was cited by Reyes who recalled how former President Marcos and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile went to Clark Airbase in 1974 to ask the base commander for some ammunition which the Marcos government badly needed in its campaign against the communist rebels.

The request was turned down forcing Marcos to ask Thailand and Singapore. Later, the former President angrily demanded for the abrogation of military agreements with the US. This, however, was later forgotten when Marcos cooled off.

The FSI, headed by Ambassador Armando Fernandez, also heard Ambassador Luis Salcedo Moreno. Also present were Ambassadors Romeo Arguelles and Rora Navarro Tolentino.

MITRA DECLARES ENRILE 'INDISPENSABLE'

HK110938 Manila THE MANILA TIMES in English 10 Sep 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra, Jr. one of the negotiators for the government in its current peace talks with the communist rebels, said yesterday Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile is indispensable to the Aquino administration.

Mitra also declared that he would, if the time comes, fight side by side with Enrile in fighting for the country.

Mitra issued the statements in a briefing with newsmen, in an apparent move to soothe Enrile, who has been angry since last week with some cabinet members who have criticized him for publicly commenting on peace talk proposals.

Mitra said he tried to talk with Enrile, but was unable to do so. But he said he talks with Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, military chief of staff, who "cautioned us not to be harsh on Enrile."

Ramos' word of caution was an apparent bid to stop some Cabinet members from "roasting" Enrile in a Cabinet meeting set for today.

Mitra also called on the rebel negotiators, Antonio Zumel and Satur Ocampo, to stop imposing demands and instead discuss actual ceasefire terms.

Peace talks are set to be resumed soon between the government and the rebels.

ENRILE SAYS NPA MANILA PLOT COULD BE STARTING

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said yesterday [11 Sep] the Camp Aguinaldo killing could be the start of the communist party NPA plot to sow violence and terror in Metro Manila. However he said the public should not be alarmed because the military can cope with the situation and has taken positive steps to ensure the security of the people. The defense minister said the incident should also open the eyes of the people on the seriousness of the communist insurgency problem. Meanwhile military authorities said charges will be filed against Reynaldo Andaya, one of the two NPA suspects who was not able to escape during the Camp Aguinaldo shooting. His companion, identified only as Ely, is still at large and the object of an all-out hunt by the military.

MILF LEADER URGES REJECTION OF CEASE-FIRE

[By Cecil Morella]

[Excerpts] Manila, Sept 11 (AFP) -- Senior Philippine army colonels strongly criticised the government of President Corazon Aquino Thursday, as she called on her cabinet and countrymen to unite behind her in advance of a U.S. visit next week. [passage omitted]

Meanwhile, in Zamboanga City, it was disclosed that the chief of a breakaway Moslem faction has urged his guerrillas to reject any ceasefire agreement in the southern Philippines, scene of a 14-year separatist rebellion.

In an August 30 letter, exiled Moslem leader Hashim Salamat said any ceasefire deal between Mrs. Aquino and Moro National Liberation Front chairman Nur Misuari would be a "tantamount surrender and betrayal of the principle of Jihad (holy war)." He urged his fighters in the Moro Islamic Liberation Front -- which broke away from Mr. Misuari's group -- to "continue our guerrilla warfare and activities" in Mindanao and other southern islands. The letter was read to reporters by one of Mr Salamat's top lieutenants.

Seven Moslem rebels have been killed since intra-Moslem combat flared in central Mindanao on Monday, three days after Mrs. Aquino and Mr. Misuari met on nearby Jolo Island. Mrs. Aquino, who favors autonomy for the Moslem minority in this largely Roman Catholic nation, met the pro-secession Mr. Misuari in a bid to end the Moslem uprising that has claimed at least 60,000 lives.

MNLF READOPTS STAND ON SELF-DETERMINATION

HK111449 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 11 Sep 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] Cotabato City -- The Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) has reverted to its original position of gaining a free and indepedent Mindanao under the theory of self-determination, a Muslim rebel official said.

MNLF-Uttarah Kutawato Revolutionary Committee (UKRC) Chairman Mulimin Sema said the MNLF's stand, as readopted during the Bangsa Moro Congress in Maimbung, Sulu, last week, stressed the continuation of a struggle that the Bangsa Moro people in Mindanao had started since time immemorial.

Sema said it had never been a question of secession or anything of that likeness for the MNLF insofar as Mindanao is concerned.

The Bangsa Moro people, Sema said, had always been independent. "We had a form of government, the barangays, first established in Maimbung, Sulu, and the Sultanate even before the Spaniards came," Sema said.

The Bangsa Moro people have had relations with foreigners, particularly the Chinese, Indians and their Asian neighbors who did trade and commerce with them, he added.

MISUARI 'PRESSURED' TO FORGE ACCORD WITH AQUINO

HK111459 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 11 Sep 86 p 21

[By Joel D. Lacsamana]

[Text] Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) chief Nur Misuari was pressured into entering a ceasefire agreement with President Corazon C. Aquino last week, a senior military officer disclosed to BUSINESS DAY.

The military officer, who requested anonymity claimed that at least five countries, including Libya, exerted pressure on the MNLF and its military arm, the Bangsa Moro Army.

The other governments are Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, and Pakistan, the officer who is a veteran of the 14-year secessionist war in Mindanao claimed adding that most of these countries withdrew their support for the local Moro secessionist movement.

"The truce is the only way which can make Misuari acceptable to his fellow Muslims and provide him a graceful exit in abandoning his secessionist-inspired armed struggle," the officer said.

The officer's disclosure confirmed a BUSINESS DAY report last week when during the Bangsa Moro congress held in Maimbong, Jolo, the Libyan envoy who had come to attend the proceedings on behalf of Libyan strongman, Muammar Qadhdhafi, told Misuari point-blank that his government would not approve of any resolution passed by the congress calling for an "independent Mindanao state."

The officer's disclosure came five days after President Aquino flew to Jolo, Sulu, and met with Misuari who had returned to the Philippines after at least 10 years of exile in the Middle East.

After the meeting, both parties agreed on a "continued cessation of hostilities" until such time when formal talks for a permanent ceasefire is finalized.

The officer claimed that Misuari is fast losing support from his patrons "due to new political and economic developments which have evolved recently."

One of these developments, he said, is that Libya -- Misuari's financial patron -- is preparing for "war" against the United States, prompting it to slow down and inevitably cut off financial support to the MNLF.

Still another development is the fact the Indonesia and Malaysia are currently both cultivating the goodwill of the newly-installed Aquino government.

An estimated 200,000 Filipino-Muslims are now in Indonesia's northern islands. The Indonesian government wants them repatriated to the Philippines due to the myriad of labor, racial and other socio-economic problems which their presence poses to Indonesia.

These Filipino-Muslims fled to Malaysia during the height of the MNLF rebellion in the 1970's and have not returned since.

Malaysia, on the other hand, is trying to gain the goodwill of the Aquino government simply because of an age-old problem: the Philippines's claim on Sabah.

This issue has long been a sore sport in Malaysia-Philippines relations and the Malaysian government wants to solve this problem once and for all, the military officer said.

The officer said the true gauge of whether Misuari will honor his truce with Mrs. Aquino or not will come after his tour of the entire Mindanao island. During his tour he will test the political temper of his followers and those of other Moro factions in the region and their reactions to the truce. He is scheduled to embark on this tour within this week.

At the same time, the officer assailed what he called the "politicking" of the President's brother-in-law, Agapito "Butz" Aquino, in making a big show over the preparations for the talks with Misuari.

The officer claimed that Butz Aquino knew "early and well enough" that Misuari had no other choice and had already made up his mind to enter into a truce with the Aquino government.

"Because the (Butz) does not have any position in the government, he is obviously aiming for a springboard for an electoral post in the future," the office said.

[Text] Muslim Affairs Minister (Muari) called on leaders of the MNLF and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front [MILF] to end their feud on representation to the Bangsa Moro organization in the southern Philippines. More from Jojo Ismael:

[Begin Ismael Recording] (Muari) said the reported clash between the MNLF and MILF in Barangay (Dimagalim) at Lanao del Sur could pose as an obstacle to the ongoing search for peace in Mindanao. (Muari), a former MNLF commander, added that Aquino-Misuari meeting in Jolo is a demonstration of the government's sincerity to give justice to the Bangsa Moro in the southern Philippines. Hashim Salamat, leader of the MILF, and Dimas Pundato, leader of the reformist MNLF faction, were said to be in Mindanao, hoping to meet with Nur Misuari and to clarify their differences about Moro revolution. Mrs Aquino made these disclosures at a predeparture press conference at Kalayaan Hall in Malacanang. She did not give a time frame within which to work for peaceful negotiations with the National Democratic Front, the umbrella organization of the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm, the NPA. But, she said, should the ongoing peace talks with the communist rebels fail, the government would resort to a military solution for the insurgency problem. At the same press meeting, President Aquino also appealed to the Filipino people for peace and unity while she is away on an official working visit to the United States. The chief executive also said executive Secretary Joker Arroyo will be the caretaker during her absence.

Military Kept Informed of Talks

HK111149 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in Tagalog 1000 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] President Corazon Aquino said there is no truth to the report that the military is kept out of the ongoing government negotiations with the rebels. According to the president, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos are kept informed of the matter.

Meanwhile, Regional Unified Command 4 commander Brigadier General Orlando Antonio called on local officials of Cavite to help and support the government's effort to defeat communism. Antonio made the appeal during a peace and order council meeting in Trece Martires, Cavite. He said that Cavite remains a potential target of the subversives because it is surrounded by provinces where the New People's Army are very active. According to the regional commander, military efforts to resolve the insurgency problem will not succeed without the people's cooperation. He also thanked Cavitenos for their all-out support to prevent subversive infiltration into the province.

NDF OFFICER ALLEGES AFP 'SABOTAGE' OF CEASE-FIRE

HK111509 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 11 Sep 86 p 2

[Text] Davao City -- An officer of the communist insurgents in Eastern Mindanao has alleged that the Armed Forces is now implementing a plan to "sabotage" a national cease-fire between the rebel forces and the Government.

Quoting "confidential sources" within the military, Ka [Comrade] Chito of the National Democratic Front [NDF] said that in anticipation of a possible national cease-fire agreement, orders have been given to deploy military forces of not less than platoon size to occupy key and strategic areas in the countryside such as seats of population, important economic enterprises and strategic terrain.

This way, Chito said, the military could claim that it occupies a broad area of the country and that the New People's Army and the NDF forces are limited to small pockets of resistance.

A high military official in Davao del Norte, who refused to be identified, denied the existence of such a plan.

Describing this as a dangerous trend, Chito explained in a talk with journalists that military forces and detachment scattered inside guerrilla areas could be launching points to violate the cease-fire agreement.

Continued military patrols in the cease-fire area in Davao del Norte, Chito said, are already an implementation of this order.

He observed that the Mountain Rangers of the Philippine Army operating in Davao del Norte are new forces recently imported from Surigao del Sur.

The rebels claim that "practically all of Davao del Norte is a red area." Ka Lily, a member of the NDF preparatory committee, said that in most places in the province, the NPA gets wide support and sympathy from the population.

The NPA area covers the entire province, Lily said except for pockets under the control of some military detachments where people cannot openly show their support for the movement.

The military is aware, Lily said, of how strongly the residents of Davao del Norte have been supporting the revolutionary movement.

NACIONALISTA PARTY UNDERGOING POWER STRUGGLE

HK090519 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 6 Sep 86 pp 1, 7

[By Carlos Hidalgo]

[Text] As the scheduled general elections draw near, associates of two prominent political leaders -- former MP Arturo Tolentino and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile -- have locked horns in their bid for supremacy in the post-Marcos Nacionalista Party [NP].

The leadership struggle intensified yesterday as officers of an NP faction filed a petition with the Commission on Elections [Comelec] for an injunction to prevent Rafael Palmares, the party's known president and Renato Cayetano, secretary general, from further exercising the authority of their posts in the organization.

The petitioners, claiming to be the "genuine officers" of the NP, said they wanted to rebuild the traditional political party which had undergone a period of decline during the Marcos regime with numerous political stalwarts bolting from its fold.

They said they would soon invite "genuine Nacionalistas, "including Tolentino and former Speaker Jose Laurel Jr., to a "grand homecoming." [quotation marks as published]

The meeting, they said, will pave the way for the holding of a national convention where the leaders of the organization will be elected.

Petitioner Gerino Tolentino, younger brother of the Marcos loyalist leader, said Palmares and Cayetano misrepresented themselves as having authority to reorganize the NP.

He said Cayetano, known to be a close associate of Enrile, is actually a member of the Kilusang Bagong Lipunan while Palmares is the NP vice president for the Visayas.

Tolentino said NP officers were supposed to be chosen by the National Directorate, the party's supreme council of leaders.

The petitioners also charged that Palmares and Cayetano have been "illegally admitting new members to the party and have required old members of the NP to affiliate anew."

The petitioners were Tolentino, Manila chairman; Vic Rabaya, assistant secretary general on planning and organization and concurrent provincial chairman for Quezon; Alfonso Roy Jr., provincial chairman of Tarlac; and Casimiro Madarang Jr., provincial chairman of Cebu.

Cayetano dismissed the petitioners' charges as "nothing but a nuisance suit."

"The allegations are baseless and the motive is suspect," Cayetano said. "But we welcome it nevertheless as it would unmask the personalities behind the suit and lay to rest all questions about the NP."

Rabaya said the NP was left without a leader with the death of party president Jose J. Roy early this year.

Romeo Jalosjos then resigned as secretary general and named Cayetano, said to be a non-NP, to his post.

With the assumption into office of Cayetano, Palmares was named party president.

"Jalosjos cannot just give to anyone his post as if it were his personal property," Rabaya remarked.

In filing their petitions, the NP officers said the Comelec was the proper body to intervene in the conflict. They said the poll body has a file of official roster of NP officers.

But Comelec Chairman Roman Felipe expressed doubts whether his office would interfere in a political party's internal affairs.

While noting that the NP leadership controversy surfaced as early as the breaking up of the KBL with the ouster of former president Marcos, Felipe said the issue offered a clear instance that supported his proposal to have political parties registered as corporations with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

He said he would ask Palamares and Cayetano to immediately respond to the charges of the petitioners before acting on the issue.

Supports Enrile, Discusses Elections

HK111505 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 11 Sep 86 p 8

[Text] The Nacionalista Party (NP) flayed the Aquino government yesterday for toying with the idea of holding the national and local elections separately if the new Constitution is ratified by the people in the coming plebiscite.

It also supported the stand of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile against insurgency and communism. Since it is not a one-man job, the NP urged the Aquino Cabinet to declare publicly a collective stand and formulate a national policy on the matter.

Former member of parliament Renato Cayetano, NP acting secretary general, said he was informed that Malacanang has decided to hold the national elections immediately after the plebiscite and move the local polls to November next year.

He said the administration's move will only result in further political and economic instability and unduly prolong the tenure of unpopular and incompetent officers-in-charge in various provinces, cities, and municipalities.

The Commission on Elections (Comelec) had proposed two separate elections for national and local officials to simplify complicated problems that may arise if these are synchronized.

Chairman Ramon H. Felipe Jr. said it would be tedious and confusing if the two elections are held at the same time because of the number of positions to be contested.

He said the ballot would be unusually long because there will be 24 senators, 165 congressmen, 74 provincial governors and the vice governors, 60 city mayors and their vice mayors, 1,523 municipal mayors and their vice mayors, and some 10,000 sanggunian members, to be elected.

Earlier Cayetano inducted into the NP some 1,100 ward leaders in Manila, led by former Manila councilor Antonio S. Evangelista who was host of the mass induction. There were only 800 originally scheduled for induction, but more people joined in later.

KBL CALLS FOR ELECTIONS AFTER PLEBISCITE

HK110651 Dagupan City DZDL Radio in Tagalog 0445 GMT 11 Sep 86

[Text] The Kilusang Bagong Lipunan [KBL] yesterday urged that national and local elections be called soon after the plebiscite on the Constitution is held. According to the KBL, such a move would do away with the present political and economic uncertainty and stabilize the situation in the countryside.

Among the KBL members who proposed this were former Governor Isidro Rodriguez, Ali Dimaporo, Vic Magsaysay, former Mayor Honorato Perez, Everisto Singson, and former Deputy Prime Minister Jose Rono. They said the installation of a genuinely mandated administration will prevent the country's collapse through political anarchy and national disorder.

The measure is expected to strengthen security at the airport. The airport authority and the Pafsecom will also begin enforcing a "no ID, no entry" policy. Earlier identification cards issued by former airport managers Luis Tabuena and Romeo Santos will be invalidated. Pafsecom and the MIA will also issue stickers for vehicles entering the MIA compound.

CANADA TO GRANT AID FOR NEGROS, IMMUNIZATION

[Text] The Philippines and Canada yesterday [10 Sep] signed two agreements that would grant 16 million Canadian dollars in aid to the Negros rehabilitation and development fund and the Philippine immunization program. The agreements were signed by President Aquino and Canadian Ambassador to the Philippines Russel Davidson at Malacanang. Details from Art Pabellon:

[Begin recording] President Corazon Aquino and Russel Davidson, Canadian ambassador to the Philippines, signed two aid agreements yesterday involving a total of 16 million Canadian dollars. The first grant, amounting to 11 million Canadian dollars, is for the Negros rehabilitation and development fund, a nongovernmental program through the Canadian International Development Agency. Funds will be used to assist the poor of Negros, particularly the sugar planters and their families, by providing them with access to land, technology, agricultural inputs, education, and other key productive resources. Four types of projects in Negros Occidental have been given priority, namely: agricultural diversification, agri-business, agro-forestry and microenterprise projects.

Under the second agreement, the Canadian Government will provide a 5 million Canadian dollar grant for the Philippine immunization program. The Canadian International Development Agency will supply five types of Canadian vaccines for measles, poliomyelitis, DPT [diptheria-pertussis-typhoid], BCG [antituberculosis toxin], and tetanus toxoid in support of the Philippine Government's expanded immunization program, the objective of which will be to help the Philippine achieve its goal of universal child immunization by the year 1990.

Commenting on the Canadian aid, the president said, "I continue to be very confident that in spite of all our problems, with your help and with God's help, we Filipinos will not only be able to survive but will probably help make this country of ours the great country it should be."

NAKASONE MAKES POLICY SPEECH AT DIET SESSION

OW121101 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 0603 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's policy speech at the 107th extraordinary Diet session — live]

[Text] On the opening of the 107th Diet Session, I would like to state some of my views and seek the understanding and cooperation of my fellow citizens.

In the previous 106th Diet Session held immediately after the recent national elections, I was nominated to the office of prime minister for the third time. I am resolved to devote myself to the conduct of administration heart and soul and with a fresh mind.

Since I assumed the office of prime minister, I have pursued bold reforms for the building of a state with resilient culture and welfare and for transition to an international state, calling for an overhaul of postwar politics.

In the recent elections, I emphasized to our people that we need to carry out these reforms at all costs in order to firmly pave the way to the 21st century. The reforms include administrative, fiscal, tax, and educational reforms and reforms for a transition to new economic and social systems appropriate to an aging society. They also include the building of Japan into an international state that powerfully promotes peace and disarmament in the world, is open to the world, and positively contributes to world prosperity. [applause]

Furthermore, as a means to carry out these policies, I have stressed the need to establish politics that can easily be understood by the people, and politics with foresight on new trends and aspirations of the people and ability to respond with timely initiatives. We must build a new Japan full of energy and vigor through a generational change in all sectors and strata of the country.

My appeals have had overwhelming support, for which I am deeply moved. [applause]

At the same time, I feel myself sobered by the heavy responsibility bestowed on me. Considering this mandate of the people, the will of heaven, I am resolved to answer the expectations of our people by steadily implementing my campaign pledges with all modesty and sincerity. [applause]

With this in mind, I requested the convocation of this extraordinary session to positively tackle the reform of the Japan National Railways [JNR], which is an urgent task; the administrative and fiscal reforms including a review of the health insurance system for the aged; and the promotion of economic measures, including programs to stimulate domestic demand, in order to fulfill my campaign pledges.

On the House of Representatives seat reapportionment issue, the 104th Diet Session acted on it by revising the public office election law, thus correcting the long-standing problem. I would like to express my profound respect for the efforts made by the legislature in this respect. However, the revision of the law was a provisional measure to meet the immediate requirement for correcting what was considered an unconstitutional apportionment.

The resolution of the House of Representatives plenary session calls for a prompt and more thoroughgoing resolution based on the 1985 national census as soon as the confirmed figures of population distribution are made available. It is earnestly expected that the resolution will be promptly implemented. The government will do its utmost for this end.

Also, in order to secure our people's unchanging faith in the administration's political management, I will continue to strive for clean politics and administrative discipline. [jeers, applause]

Based on these basic views, I would like to state my policies concerning a variety of issues facing us.

The government, defining administrative reform as one of the administration's most important tasks, has been promoting the implemention of recommendations by the ad hoc administrative research council and the ad hoc administrative reform promotion council. The government has given the greatest possible respect to the recommendations.

Because of the understanding and cooperation of our people, the administrative reform programs have made steady headway and are now in their most crucial phase. In particular, reform of the JNR, which is now in a state of crisis, is the greatest and most urgent immediate task. [applause]

In order to rebuild the railways so they can truly answer the expectations of the people, the government will do everything in its power to carry out the reform, the basic feature of which is the JNR's partition and privatization on 1 April next year. [applause]

We submitted to the 104th Diet Session nine bills, including the Japan State-run Railways Reform Bill. Of these bills, the Special Measures bill for fiscal 1986 was passed, enabling us to take the first step toward the reform. We will reintroduce the rest of the eight bills to this session and work for their speedy passage.

Meanwhile, in implementing JNR reform programs, we will take all possible measures to ensure employment and reemployment of JNR employees in order to avoid subjecting them and their families to any apprehension. At the same time, we will see to it that JNR's long-term debts are dealt with properly.

On the final recommendations received in June this year of the ad hoc administrative reform promotion council concerning the future direction of administrative and fiscal reforms, we, under the basic line of giving them maximum respect, recently adopted the decision on the seventh work force reduction. We will take further measures to implement the council's recommendations successively.

The council's final recommendations contained reference to the creation of an advisory council for further promoting administrative reform. We will study specific details related to the proposed council and come up with a program.

Furthermore, we will endeavor to augment the real strength and independence of local public organizations. At the same time, the government will see to it that the administrative reform of local public organizations is carried out independently and in a comprehensive manner as required by the outline for local administrative reform; it will take steps to positively accelerate the process.

The government will continue to vigorously work for fiscal reform. The government has set rigid standards for fiscal 1987 budget requests. In future budget compilations, systems related to various policies will be thoroughly rectified, priorities will be strictly determined, and efforts will be made to further reduce spending. The road of fiscal reform is a hard one.

In various advanced countries, people have been working hard to reduce and rationalize spending and follow healthy financial practices in order to cope with excessive fiscal deficits and increasing international payments, while not increasing the people's burden or inviting inflation and price increases. I cannot but frankly note that under even harder fiscal circumstances than other countries, Japan is also pressed to take serious measures not to leave heavy burdens on future generations.

On the tax system, the Tax System Research Council has now been working energetically to establish a desireable tax system free of ambiguities and based on such fundamental ideals as fairness, justice, simplicity, choice, and vitality.

In April, a midterm report was worked out concerning reduction and rationalization of income taxes, such as lessening the burden on salaried workers in the middle-income bracket and special measures for housewives, and rectification of taxes of juridical personnel. An overall examination of the tax system is now under way, and we expect to receive this autumn unified, comprehensive guidelines outlining measures to create sources of revenue. Drastic tax system reform is an urgent national task. It is one of the most important public commitments. With the understanding and cooperation of the people, the government is firmly determined to work for establishment of a rational new tax sytem in preparation for the 21st century. [applause]

On educational reform, the ad hoc council on education submitted its second report in April. The report showed how education should basically be in preparation for the 21st century. At the same time, it showed a fundamental position for reorganization of the eductional system centered on a shift to the position of regarding learning as one's lifework. It thus made concrete recommendations covering a broad area. I am convinced that realization of educational reform is a great political task.

Since the government received the first report last year, it has taken concrete steps to reform college entrance exams. These concrete steps include removing evils -- such as attaching excessive importance to schools for careers and heavy competition in entrance exams through overemphasis of the deviation value [hensachi], and improving the joint first examination. As for the current second report, the government will respect it and work to gradually implement what has been recommended in it from a comprehensive viewpoint. On the bullying issue in particular, the government will take substantial steps to have schools, families, and local communities join hands in resolving it. At the same time, it will pay much attention to discipline and moral education, which teaches basic manners in human life, and work for their further promotion.

This is an era of worldwide changes, and all countries accordingly have great interesting educational reform. With this in mind, our country proposed at the Tokyo Summit that a meeting of educational experts be held, participated in by countries affiliated with the OECD and the summit member nations. Fortunately, with the consent of the various countries, the meeting will be held in Kyoto in January next year, and I am happy to report here that preparations are now under way for its convocation.

The Tokyo Summit, which was held in May this year, confirmed that participants would increase cooperation and coordination to resolve various problems currently facing the world. I believe that this was really significant in consolidating the bright future of the world, not only for the participants in the summit but also for developing nations. I would like to again extend my thanks to the people for their cooperation in opening the meeting.

I keenly feel that through the Tokyo Summit the position of our country in the international community has considerably increased not only in the economic but also in the political field. From a worldwide viewpoint, Japan must now actively and voluntarily push ahead with its internationalization and to positively contribute to the international community by extending cooperation to developing nations, making efforts for world peace and disarmament, consolidating the free trade system, and joining international cooperation in frontier science and technology.

East-West relations are directly related to the peace and security of the world. In particular, on relations between the United States and the USSR, foreign ministerial talks are expected soon to pave the way for the second U.S.-USSR summit. However, I am convinced that dialogue and negotiations based on reason are indispensable to the establishment of stable East-West relations. On the basis of my convictions, I will make further cooperative efforts to ensure that fruitful dialogue and negotiations will be carried out between the United States and the USSR. In particular, hoping that practical results in U.S.-USSR negotiations on arms control and disarmament will be achieved by the end of this year at the latest and what preparations will begin to substantially reduce nuclear weapons, we will support the diplomatic efforts of the United States on this issue as well as call on the USSR to participate in the negotiations with a serious and constructive approach.

Taking into account the fact that a serious situation still exists in the international arena, our country will steadily carry out the policy to ensure mutual security. As part of this policy, we will promote the Japan-U.S. security system in a smooth and effective way, and at the same time we will make efforts to maintain a high-quality defense force within the limits of self-defense and in coordination with other policy matters. Naturally, there will be no changes whatsoever in our policy of being dedicated to purely defensive capabilities under the peace-oriented constitution, of imposing no military threat on other nations, and of adhering to the nonnuclear principles and civilian control.

As mentioned earlier, it is one of our nation's international obligations to cooperate in the promotion of prosperity and stability of developing countries. Many developing countries are faced with various difficulties, such as accumulated debts. For the purpose of economic and social development, as well as improvement of the people's livelihood of the countries concerned, our country will strive to steadily expand official development aid under the targets set in the third intermediate program while carefully providing genunely fair and effective cooperation.

Next, I will state my views on our relations with other countries. In our relations with the United States, we will make efforts to further promote the close relations between the two countries through such measures as maintenance and development of unshakable friendly and cooperative relations based on the Japan-U.S. security system; the promotion of smooth trade and economic relations; and cooperation in maintaning and strengthening the international free trade system. In parallel with its efforts on negotiations on arms control and disarmament, the United States is engaged in research on an advanced, nonnuclear defense system. Under the basic idea of ultimate elimination of nuclear arms, the United States is currently undertaking the SDI research program.

In my opinion, this program conforms to the position of our nation as a nation dedicated to peace. [applause]

Furthermore, we feel that our country's participation in the SDI research program will contribute to the smooth operation of the Japan-U.S. security system and that it may possibly have the effect of upgrading our nation's technology in related fields. In this connection, we have recently decided to consult with the U.S. Government on concrete measures to ensure our nation's smooth participation in this program. [applause]

Moreover, we have, in recent years, promoted our relations with Asian and Pacific nations both to a greater extent and in greater depth. However, in studying past history, in learning lessons from history, and in considering that the starting point of our Asian diplomacy is to promote friendship and cooperation, our nation will strive to develop cooperative relations based on true mutual understanding with these countries, including the ASEAN countries.

It is regrettable indeed that an incident occurred recently that could have adversely affected the nation's relations with neighboring Asian countries. The fundamental point of our nation's diplomacy is to maintain and strengthen friendly relations with these countries. With this in mind, greater efforts will be made to promote good-neighborly, friendly, and cooperative relations with the ROK. Continued efforts will also be made to promote prolonged, stable, and mutually cooperative relations with China. Furthermore, efforts will be made to achieve closer ties with Europe and strengthen the tripartite cooperation between Japan, the United States, and Europe, which share the same sense of values.

In our relations with the USSR, the nation's unshakable fundamental policy is to settle the northern territories issue, conclude a peace treaty, and establish stable, extensive and mutually reliable relations. The first regular foreign ministerial consultations between Japan and the USSR in the past 8 years were held in Tokyo last January, and negotiations were reopened on the peace treaty, including the territorial issue. Then, the consultations continued in Moscow last May, and consultations have become an established practice. Moreover, an accord has been reached on strengthening political dialogue, including the exchange of visits by myself and General Secretary Gorbachev. I regard all these developments as truly meaningful. Negotiations are now under way with the USSR on General Secretary Gorbachev's visit at an early date. When the general secretary visits Japan, we will make persistent efforts to establish friendly relations based on genuine understanding between Japan and the USSR in accordance with the fundamental principles mentioned earlier.

Considering the U.S. fiscal deficits, the imbalance in current accounts among countries, the continuing serious unemployment situation in Western Europe, heightened protectionist trends against the backdrop of these factors, and other things, the world economy continues to face a number of problems. In addition, the international monetary situation and oil price trends have an uncertain future.

To cope with this situation, it is necessary -- as was confirmed at the recent Tokyo Summit -- to further strengthen policy cooperation among countries for the purpose of attaining sustained economic growth without inflation and stabilizing exchange rates.

Japan, which accounts for 10 percent of the world economy, needs to further accelerate these policy cooperation trends and actively endeavor toward forming harmonious economic relations with other countries.

In recent years, Japan's current account surplus has been moving upward and has reached an unprecedented level. However, the continuation of such a substantial imbalance with other countries is a serious problem from the viewpoints of both our national economic management and harmonious development of the world economy. To remedy this in the days ahead, it has become an urgent task to put Japan's economic activity in harmony with that of the international community.

Because of this, the government last May worked out the general principle for promotion of economic structural readjustments and adopted such policies as domestic demand expansion; conversion of the industrial structure into an internationally harmonious one; improvement of market accessibility; promotion of imports; stabilization of international monetary values at an appropriate level; and promotion of international cooperation.

To promote this general principle more forcefully, last month I established a government-LDP headquarters for promotion of economic structural adjustment headed by me. I intend to continue striving actively to materialize an internationally harmonious economic structure.

Next week, a GATT ministerial meeting is scheduled with a view to starting a new round of talks. To check protectionism and build a multilateral free trade system in preparation for the 21st century, Japan intends to do everything in its power to help make the talks a success.

While the framework of the world economy is undergoing changes as exemplified by the revision of the strong dollar, as far as our national economy is concerned, prices remain very stabilized and, although business is basically firm, growth has slowed down and a feeling of stagnation is spreading in enterprises' evaluation of the business situation, particularly in the manufacturing industry.

To cope with this economic situation facing us today -- and the future does not warrant optimism -- the government will strive for appropriate and flexible operation of its economic and monetary policies while paying careful attention to trends in the yen exchange rate and its impact on the domestic economy. Notably, to insure sustained expansion of economic activity centering on domestic demand is an urgent task in forming harmonious economic relations with other countries and further improving national life.

To this end, the government plans to join hands with local public organizations and government-affiliated agencies under the basic policy of holding fast to the line of administrative and fiscal reforms in working out comprehensive economic measures at the earliest possible date, measures which include supplementary public works investment and measures for small and medium businesses. Specifically, the government plans to continue striving to promote public works projects, carry out additional disaster relief work, and supplement the necessary public work expenses through the utilization of contract authorization and fiscal investment and loans as well as supplementary requisitions for independent local projects.

To promote housing investment, the government also plans to expand the loan system of the Housing Loan Corporation.

With a view to making better use of private sector vitality for urban redevelopment and maintenance of public establishments, the government plans to further accelerate deregulation and increase incentives. To strive for effective utilization of the vitality of the private sector, the government plans to listen to the views of all circles.

Along with the decline in crude oil prices, the strong yen has brought great benefits to our national economy and life through commodity price stabilization and other effects. To promote individual consumption, it is important to pass on to consumers the marginal profits accrued from the yen appreciation and other phenomena. The government intends to continue taking supervisory, monitoring, and other appropriate measures.

Small and medium businesses are faced with the harsh climate of the yen appreciation in the midst of internationalization of the industrial structure. To help them actively cope with these changes, the government has heretofore taken carefully tailored measures, including special low-interest loans incidental to the yen's appreciation and credit assistance. In view of the further appreciation of the yen, the government intends to strive to expand these measures and work out comprehensive support measures for small and medium businesses located in areas where the business situation has notably deteriorated in order to help activate the local economies.

The government also intends to expand the employment adjustment subsidy system in order to help stabilize employment.

To strive for fulfillment of the above-stated policies, the government will submit the 1986 supplementary budget and related bills to the current Diet session. The government will also strive further to work out agricultural, forestry, and fisheries measures centering on improved productivity and carry out measures to reduce ships of North Pacific fishermen.

In our country, the population of the aged people is sharply increasing. In a society of real longevity, which will come about at the beginning of the 21st century, we should maintain the vitality of our economic society and allow people to spend their long lives with a sense of security and meaningfulness. In this context, it is an important task for the state administration to turn the present economic and social system into one fit for an era in which man's life span will be eighty years.

To this end, the government intends to implement policies in a comprehensive and positive way on the basis of the Outline of Measures for the Aging Society approved in June. Concurrently, aged people's pursuit of knowledge and other activities, such as their participation in social programs, will be promoted so that all can display individual ability and creativity throughout their lives. At the same time, efforts will be made to allow working people to enjoy sufficient leisure time by shortening working hours. In addition, measures will be taken to establish a social security system that is fair and effective in both benefits and obligations, to realize healthy and decent lifetime employment, maintain peaceful and comfortable residential housing, enliven mutual-aid functions in local communites, and promote exchanges between generations.

With an eye to establishing the aging people's health and medical service system, which is suitable for the longevity society, an amendment bill aimed at rectifying the present health system for the aged from a broad viewpoint, will be presented again to the current Diet for its prompt passage. Concerning cancer, we have implemented various policies to conquer cancer in a comprehensive way and on a priority basis incompliance with the Overall 10-Year Anticancer Program. We have attained some results in this field, such as discovery of (?homo) gastric and liver cancer genes. In the future, we will do our best to shed light on cancer's real nature. We will also make all-out efforts to conquer fatal diseases.

On this occasion, the Cambodian people, the DK National Army, and the CGDK would like to once again express their profound thanks to the Chinese Government and people who in all circumstances have always stood by the side of the Cambodian people in their struggle for national liberation. We are convinced that with the support of China, the ASEAN countries, and the world community, the Cambodian people's just struggle will certainly win.

SRV DIVISION COMMAND IN KOMPONG THOM ATTACKED

BK150123 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 14 Sep 86

[From the "Report From Various Battlefields" feature]

[Excerpt] Kompong Thom Battlefield: On 9 September, our National Army in cooperation with the local people and fraternal Cambodian soldiers launched a two-pronged commando raid against the command headquarters of the Vietnamese enemy's 7701st Division in Kompong Thom Town. The first prong attacked the headquarters of the Division while the second prong attacked its general staff command. After 30 minutes of fighting, we killed 6 Vietnamese enemies, including a division chief of staff; wounded 13 others; and destroyed 5 AK's, 3 B-40's, 2 RPD's, a jeep, a C-46 field radio, 4 large barracks, and some war materiel.

Siem Reap Battlefield: On 9 September, our National Army fired three 107-mm rockets into the Siem Reap Town's market, killing or wounding a number of Vietnamese soldiers and destroying some war materiel. The shelling caused great panic among the Vietnamese enemies in Siem Reap Town. [passage omitted]

In addition to the increase in the numbers of aged people, moves for internationalization and rapid progress in technological innovation and information media are expected to produce great changes in situations surrounding people and national land with the approach of the 21st century. While coping with these changes of the times in a precise manner, we should make Japan a pleasant and vigorous place to live, leaving it the same way for the next generation. This is our responsibilty.

To this end, we should first develop native towns which residents can be proud of and love because of their unique characteristics. We should develop our natonal land into one that can withstand earthquakes and calamities. Public safety should be well-established in this land. It should be full of flowers and greenery. It should be peaceful and full of historic fragrance. Moreover, we should work to develop our national land in a symmetrical way. We should raise the quality of our national land so it can serve as a forum for cultural, scientific, and economic exchanges, open to the world.

At the same time, we should work to develop information, communications, and highway traffic systems. Through urban redevelopment programs, we should redress large city areas such as Tokyo and Osaka. We should take these measures by bringing the vitality of the private sector into full play.

In this effort, it is particularly important to correctly handle the land issue, including stabilizaton of land prices in large urban areas.

To deal with these tasks, the government plans to formulate the Fourth Overall National Development Plan to provide a guideline for the consolidation of our national land in preparation for the 21st century.

The 21st century is just around the corner. The number of children who will come of age in the 21st century has already reached over 8 million. It is the utmost task and earnest desire of our generation to work to build a vigorous and better Japan — in which these children will grow up and enjoy a hearty life as Japanese — and turn it over to these future grownups. [applause]

The greatest change in our nation's postwar history is the change in our role in the international community. For Japan to survive as an influential member of the international community in the true sense of the word, it is necessary for Japan to make a serious review of its past stand as a somwhat one-sided beneficiary of the peace and prosperity of the world; to take up its corresponding share of responsibilities; and to make positive contributions to the internatonal community. We should build Japan into a nation sharing responsibility for peace and prosperity in the world by changing it from a Japan existing in the world into a Japan existing with the world and further into a Japan contributing to the world. Herein lies the genuine realization of an international nation, Japan. [applause]

For this purpose, we ourselves should first have a correct understanding of Japan and then pass on this correct understanding to the world. Moreover, Japan's development in recent years has aroused the attention of the world, and various countries are eagerly awaiting a cultural message from Japan. To meet their expectations, the government is now working to establish a research center on Japanese culture based on the international viewpoint.

With the U.S.-USSR summit talks as a start, signs of new efforts for ensuring peace have emerged in international politics.

In the world economy, efforts have been made to find a new system aimed at further development through policy coordination among various countries. In science and technology, there has been a change with efforts to turn out larger and greater quantities of products now shifting to efforts to turn out products in greater varieties, to provide more information, and to promote harmony with mankind. Both the world and Japan are at a historical turning point, and mankind is ready to begin a new era of civilization. [applause]

Japan should not take the untrodden course of meeting the needs of an information-oriented and aging society as well as turning Japan into an international state. I am convinced that we must revitalize our concepts and prospects and work out a new blueprint under grand concepts for Japanese society to greet the 21st century. We must do our utmost to turn this blueprint into reality.

For this purpose, it is necessary for Japan as a whole to promote rejuvenation filled with both energy and wisdom in economy, society, and politics. [applause] This is also why politicians have taken the lead in promoting the generational shift through the recent national elections.

The government will steadily implement the policies to meet this historical challenge. Let us do our best so that future historians will talk about present-day Japan not merely as the age of peace and prosperity but also as the age of national wisdom and energy devoted to creating a better Japan to greet the 21st century. [applause]

In this connection, I once again ask for the understanding and cooperation of my fellow citizens.

OW131143 Tokyo KYODO in English 1016 GMT 13 Sep 86

[Text] Tokyo, Sept 13 KYODO -- Japan and the Soviet Union will hold the first scientific and technological cooperation commission meeting in seven years at the Foreign Ministry Tueday. The three-day session will be the follow-up to a week-long visit to Japan by Soviet Vice Premier Guriy Marchuk which ended Saturday. It is aimed at expanding Soviet-Japanese relations from atomic energy and agriculture to science and technology.

Marchuk said cultural and scientific relations between the two countries would lead to expansion to cover bilateral political ties. Japan is prepared to offer scientific and technological cooperation to the Soviet Union to a certain extent in the light of an anticipated visit to Japan by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. The commission designed to promote bilateral scientific and technological cooperation has been suspended as part of Japan's sanctions against the Soviet Union over the situation in Poland.

As a result of the past two rounds of talks, Japan has played host to a series of scientific seminars on such subjects as plasma, high-speed atomic reactors and extermination of insects. In an agreement with Marchuk, Japan will hold similar functions on biotechnology and the peaceful use of space.

Japan hopes the scientific relationship with Moscow will help in its call for the return of four Soviet-held islands of Hokkaido.

KIMPO AIRPORT BOMBING KILLS 5; NORTH BLAMED

Police Director's Statement

SK141310 Seoul MUNHWA Television Service in Korean 1210 GMT 14 Sep 86

[Announcement by Kang min-chang, director of the ROK National Police Headquarters -- live]

[Text] At around 1512, an explosive, whose type has not been determined, exploded between entrance gates 5 and 6 outside the international flight service building, killing 5, including Yu Chu-hwan, 41, an electrician of the airport management corporation; seriously injuring 13; and slightly injuring 6. The injured were hospitalized at the kimpo central medical clinic and the Hangang Songsim hospital, and are receiving medical treatment there.

Shortly after the incident, the police authorities established an investigation headquarters at the Seoul Metropolitan Police Station. They are continuing a thorough investigation to ferret out the culprits. Since the explosion took place outside the airport building, routine work, including entries and departures, was not hindered at all.

Because the method of the blast is similar to those of the Rangoon assassination bombing in October 1983 and the bombing at the American Cultural Center in Taegu on September 1983, we view the explosion as having been perpetrated by the puppet North or committed by impure elements instigated by the puppet North, and we are mobilizing all investigative forces.

Having intensified their guard up to the present, 6 days before the opening of the Asian Games, the police authorities consider the occurrence of this undesirable incident as very regrettable, and express deep condolences to the victims and their families. It is obvious that the explosion incident was perpetrated with the impure and bestial scheme to block the successful holding of the Asian Games.

Because of the increased special guards, the explosive was not planted inside the airport, but in a garbage can outside the building.

Because of this incident, the police authorities will even further strengthen their guard posture, thus smashing all impure plots in advance, preventing social disturbances, protecting the lives and property of the people, and perfectly ensuring the personal safety of the atheletes and officials participating in the Asian Games and other foreigners. All types of cooperation by the people are especially required.

Special Team To Settle Problems

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 14 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government has established a special team to settle problems caused by the Sunday blast at Seoul's Kimpo International Airport that killed five people and injured 19 others. The team, headed by Yun Il-kyon, president of the Korea International Airports Authority, is now working on measures to restore the damaged area of the airport and to compensate for the dead and the wounded.

Meanwhile, the Kimpo International Airport on the western edge of the capital resumed normal operations soon after the blast. With security measures stepped up in and around the airport, all flights are operating as scheduled.

Compared to Rangoon Bombing

SK150225 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 14 Sep 86

[Text] The police investigating the bomb blast at Kimpo airport have found that the explosives used in the bomb blast were TNT. In trying to locate the source of the explosives the police are concentrating their investigative effort on whether puppet North Korea was involved in the bomb blast incident. Based on data provided by a team of bomb experts who searched the bombing site for clues, the police believe the explosive used in the crime was TNT due to the dark smoke produced by the blast and the fact that vending machines were convered with dark soot.

Particularly in light of the fact that the concrete wall near the bombing site had a whole shaped like a hole created by a mortar blast, with a width of 20 cm at the top and 15 cm at the bottom, the police believe that the explosives used were a kind of high-powered time-bomb designed less for killing than for blowing things up. The police believe that the criminals hurriedly planted the bomb inside a trash can outside the airport lobby because security inside the airport building was too tight and because they believed the bomb blast outside the airport would serve their goal of creating social unrest.

The police are concentrating their investigation, based on the belief that the bomb blast was a crime committed either by puppet North Korea or by impure domestic element instigated by puppet North Korea to impede the Asian Games scheduled to be held 6 days later. This is because puppet North Korea has continued operations designed to hinder the Asian Games and because various aspects of yesterday's bomb blast are similar to the assassination bombing in Burma in 1983.

Realizing that the trash can in which the explosives had been planted is usually cleaned every hour and that the contents of the trash can are searched without fail, the police believe the criminals must have infiltrated the airport to plant the explosives by disguising themselves as laborers. Thus, the police are looking for witnesses among the laborers.

At the bombing site the police found two 1.5 volt dry cells and electric chord and wire believed to have been used by the criminals. The police tested the materials they found to determine the power of the explosives and the type of explosives used and decided to thoroughly examine the shrapnel and the nature of the wounds sustained by the dead and wounded.

Police on Emergency Alert

[Text] The police have issued an emergency alert order to police forces throughout the country. As a result, the police are in an emergency duty posture. Immediately following the incident, the police issued the "Pongae" No 1 and No 2 emergency decrees in Seoul and in some parts of Kyonggi Province and are checking pedestrians by deploying more than 1,600 policemen at checkpoints, bus terminals, and important roads. The police have also strengthened security at the Kimpo Airport gate and are searching areas around the airport and checking anyone acting unusual.

In particular, the police have strengthened security by increasing the number of security guards at the athletes' village for the Asian Games; hotels where foreigners, including athletes and sports workers, are staying; and important facilities, including the sports grounds. The police have limited entry and exit to these facilities by ordinary people and are checking baggage carried by those who enter and leave. The police are also checking vehicles to determine whether they are carrying anything dangerous by mobilizing control teams. Meanwhile, the police are checking vulnerable facilities for safety and are preventing the approach to these facilities by suspicious persons by strengthening patrols. Presided over by Bureau Chief Yi Yong-chang, the Seoul Metropolitan Police Bureau held an emergency meeting last evening, rechecked security measures taken thus far, and took the emergency duty step to safely host the Asian Games.

Parties Denounce Bombing

[Text] Issuing a statement today in connection with the explosion of a bomb at Kimpo airport, DJP spokesman Sim Myong-po stated that the barbarous act committed at Kimpo airport -- an act seemingly committed by the treacherous and barbarous North Korean puppet group or by an impure force in the country under the instigation of this group -- has enraged and astonished the peace-loving people of the world, as well as our own people, because this incident was touched off following the Rangoon incident and the incident at the Taegu American Cultural Center.

The DJP spokesman Sim noted that the North Korean puppets and impure forces in the country, which have been instigated by them, should naturally be chastised by all the peace-loving people of the world for committing a heinous and barbarous act in an attempt to hinder the Asian Games, a peaceful sporting festival of the 3 billion Asian people. Spokesman Sim urged all the people to unite and cooperate with one another with new resolve to protect the country's security by themselves, using their wisdom, and to successfully host the Asian Games.

Commenting, Hong Sa-tok, spokesman of the New Korea Democratic Party, stated that he was astonished at the occurrence of such an incident at Kimpo International Airport, which was heavily guarded against maneuvers to hinder the Asian Games. He urged the government to take satisfactory measures to disclose the background of the barbarous act at the earliest possible date.

In a statement, Choe Yong-han, spokesman of the Korea National Party, remarked that the explosion of a bomb at Kimpo airport was similar to the barbarous act committed in Rangoon and that he was astonished and enranged by this incident. Spokesman Choe Yong-han urged government authorities to quickly disclose the truth of the recent incident, to thoroughly denounce, on behalf of the 3 billion Asian people, the wicked and barbarous act of the North Korean puppets or by impure elements, and to take preventive measures to safely and successfully host the Asian Games.

Security Tightened

SK150220 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0100 GMT 15 Sep 86

[Text] Following the bombing incident at Kimpo airport, the National Police Headquarters today instructed concerned officers to block any obstructive maneuvers of the puppet North or impure leftist-leaning elements by tightening security for the safety of athletes participating in the '86 Asiad and for the protection of facilities concerned, such as the sports grounds.

The National Police Headquarters urged in this instruction that areas inside and outside major facilities, and various types of buildings should be searched as a whole, and that at the same time, areas inside of concerned facilities and buildings, manholes around them, sewers, trash cans, vending machines, kiosks, ashtrays, flower pots and gardens, public toilets, and other places deemed to be weak in terms of security should be checked and searched more than twice daily.

The National Police Headquarters also instructed concerned officials to increase the number of guards and security officers in places deemed to be weak in terms of security, to allocate certain areas to security officials with a sense of responsibility, and to be thorough when transferring responsibility during shift changes. It was further stated that passages to concerned facilities and buildings should be manned by security officials around the clock and patrols around these areas should be tightened, while at the same time, suspicious passers-by should be thoroughly checked.

The National Police Headquarters also instructed that people going in and out of the athletes' village should be rechecked, even if they carry identification cards or similar registration cards, if they are acting suspiciously.

In addition, the police headquarters ordered the thorough examination of foods delivered to the athletes' village to determine whether they are sealed or not, and for security personnel to stand by when foods are distributed to the athletes in order to prevent accidents from happening.

Asian Countries Reassured

SK150311 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0100 GMT 15 Sep 86

[Text] In connection with the bombing incident at Kimpo airport, the Foreign Ministry sent urgent cables to all overseas missions to explain the bombing incident and instructed missions in Asian countries which have not yet sent their athletes to Seoul for the Asiad to assure them that the bombing incident will have no impact at all on the Asiad and to make sure that they understand this.

In this cable, the Foreign Ministry instructed the missions overseas to specifically assure the governments of the countries where they are stationed that the athletes already in Korea are safe and protected by the Korean Government, which is making every effort possible for their safety.

Government, DJP Meetings Held

SK150257 Seoul YONHAP in English 0241 GMT 15 Sep 86

[Text] Seoul, Sept. 15 (YONHAP) — The South Korean Government and the ruling Democratic Justice Party held separate meetings Sunday evening to discuss steps to take in the wake of the bomb blast at Kimpo International Airport Sunday afternoon. Five persons were killed and 19 injured in the bomb blast on Sunday afternoon.

A government spokesman said that the government will do its utmost to thoroughly investigate the bomb blast and will deal with the situation in part by strengthening security to prevent the incident from affecting the Asian Games.

Following an emergency meeting of related government ministers, the spokesman said the terrorist bomb blast is believed to have been carried out by North Korean agents or by those instigated by North Korea, which is apparently determined to sabotage the Seoul Asian Games, slated for Sept. 20 to Oct. 5.

The emergency meeting, chaired by Prime Minister No Sin-yong, also dealt with ways to boost security at various facilities, including the Asiad village. Among those attending the meeting were the ministers of foreign affairs, home affairs, national defense, sports, transportation, and culture and information.

Before the meeting began, No went to the airport and asked the relevent officials to swiftly restore the damage caused by the blast. He was accompanied by Justice Minster Kim Song-ki, Sports Minister Yi Se-ki and Transportation Minister Cha Kyu-hon.

In a meeting of senior party leaders, the ruling Democratic Justice Party concluded that the bomb incident was conducted in a move to obstruct the successsful staging of the Asian Games. The DJP leaders also decided to strongly counter such "barbarious acts of violence." The meeting was chaired by DJP Chairman No Tae-u.

In a statement, DJP spokesman Sim Myong-po said that Sunday's blast at Kimpo caused indignation and astonishment not only to the Korean people but to all peace-loving people. The spokesman said that North Korea, which committed the barbarous act of terror in an effort to sabotage the Asian Games, deserves to be condemned by all the peace-loving people of the world. The DJP statement said that the government should redouble its security efforts to prevent similar incident from occurring in the future.

The opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP) and the Korea National Party (KNP) issued similar statements. The NKDP said that the government should thoroughly investigate the blast and take steps to ensure that the incident not affect the Asian Games.

Ministers Issue Statement

[Joint statement issued on 15 September by the ROK home affairs minister, justice minister, and defense minister; read by Justice Minister Kim Song-ki -- recorded]

[Text] Dear people: The government thinks it very regrettable that the bombing incident, which took place at Kimpo International Airport on 14 September, only 6 days before the opening of the 10th Asian Games, brought about the loss of precious human lives and troubled the people.

First of all, the government will redouble its efforts to thoroughly clarify the truth of the incident, to clarify its background, and to prevent such an incident from recurring.

The bombing incident is thought to be an antinational atrocity perpetrated by a spy of the puppet North or by an impure left-leaning element instigated by it to block the Asian Games by resorting to all means and method. This incident, whose occurrence we have worried about and which is a realistic manifestation of the puppet North's bombast that it will hinder the Asian Games, is further increasing national indignation and apprehension.

As is well known, the government, with heavy, pressing state tasks on its shoulders, has made all-out efforts for social stability with the cooperation of the people. In the future, the government will also take strong and resolute measures against the maneuvers of impure forces at home and abroad to impede the successful holding of the Asian Games and affect social stability.

From now on, the government will mobilize all police forces to strongly counter the impure forces' rash act of disturbing public order and causing social chaos by perpetrating antistate maneuvers and direct or indirect subversive activities under any pretext. To this end, it will strengthen control over and punishment for using all kinds of explosives, molotov cocktails, and illegal weapons, whose use is aimed at social disturbance, until these devices are rooted out by strictly applying the laws concerned to them.

In particular, the government plainly makes clear that, by paying grave attention to the fact that molotov cocktails arbitrarily used by radical left-leaning elements within and outside campuses have recently been used for rural guerrilla-style subversive maneuvers and antisocial terrorist activities, it will regard acts of manufacturing, possessing, delivering, and throwing them as acts benefiting the enemy and will strictly punish such acts from now on.

As you well know, molotov cokctails, which radical students involved in on-campus demonstrations have used without exception as fighting tools in street demonstrations, the seizure of public buildings, the destruction of furniture and equipment, and arson, have already been utilized as weapons for murder, injury, arson, and subversion, and are in reality used as a weapon to attack tanks by the army in case of an emergency. In this way, molotov cocktails belong to the category of weapons which can kill or injure human beings and animals. For this reason, the government is convinced that the peoploe will also extend cooperation in rooting out the use of molotov cocktails.

In defiance of the puppet North's atrocities, which enrage men and heaven, and whatever maneuvers the impure elements use to obstruct the Asian Games, the government will successfully hold, without a hitch, the games to be held 5 days from now.

Since it is difficult to realize substantial preparations for and the successful holding of the games, which can be called a festival of 300 million Asians, only with the efforts of the sports-related organizations and the government, our people's voluntary participation and cooperation are regarded as most important. It is believed that all people should pool their strength in smashing the maneuvers of impure elements seeking social disturbances.

In particular, the government urges the political parties, social organizations, and other walks of life to exemplarily participate in maintaining social stability and public order and render cooperation to this end during the Asian Games; and the government also calls on our students, who should engage in studying, to restrain themselves from using explosives such as molotov cocktails and from committing turmoil by recognizing the historic importance of the Asian Games once again and by displaying genuine patriotism so that the games will be successfully concluded.

In conclusion, the government again appeals to the people to be alert against antistate terrorist activities of impure forces at home and abroad and, at the same time, to render active cooperation by giving play to national potentials and by displaying their pride so that the Asian Games, which are directly linked to the successful holding of the 1988 Seoul Olympics, can be excellently hosted.

CGDK PRESENCE AT INTERNATIONAL MEETING PROTESTED

BK120420 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1114 GMT 9 Sep 86

[Text] Phnom Penh, 9 Sep (SPK) -- Kong Korm, first deputy foreign minister of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, has vehemently protested against the presence of the representatives of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea" at the 10th international conference of [the] permament committee for diffusion and inventions. In a message to [the] president of the conference, Kong Korm said: "As everybody knows that that 'coalition government' is in fact a monstrous clique which has systematically destroyed Kampuchea's economic and social infrastructures, massacred millions of Kampuchean people and deceived the public opinion by styling itself the representative of the Kampuchean people who have overthrown it since early 1979."

SPK COMMENTS ON BEIJING SUPPORT FOR CGDK LEADERS

BK121244 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1118 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK September 12 -- After their failure in the attempt to get the Kampuchean seat at the 8th Summit of the Non-Aligned Movement, Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan were summoned to Beijing from Sept. 7-10 for appeasement by their masters.

Truly, their bosses have made greatest efforts in this. All the top party, state and government leaders in Beijing, including the number one figure Deng Xiaoping, have tried their best to breathe life into their henchmen, slander against the People's Republic of Kampuchea, the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the Soviet Union. Nobody is surprised at their deed because they only repeated their worn-out contentions on the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops, the so-called "Eight point proposal," etc.

But Beijing's stubborness in beefing up the genocidal Pol Pot clique is in sharp contrast to the three Indochinese countries' clear and well-meaning stance on finding a political solution to the Kampuchean issue and the question of peace and stability in Southeast Asia as confirmed once again at the recent 13th conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers. It is also a challenge to the world public opinion which has strongly demanded the elimination of the genocidal Pol Pot clique.

By refusing to abandon the genocidal Pol Pot clique and instead pouring more money and weapons for them in their attempt to sabotage the Kampuchean people's rebirth, the reactionary ruling circles in Beijing have once again proved themselves. [sentence as received]

All their efforts in the past seven years have proved to be futile, and their efforts this time, though greater, will certainly come a cropper. Over the past seven years, their lackeys have proved themselves to be useless. The more defeats they met with the more acute their desperation was.

So, how could Mr Deng's call for "greater unity" and "cooperation" as well as all his promises restore the sinking morale and the unity of the three factions which were once each other's enemy. The clear answer in the past seven years has of course not brought round Mr Deng.

By continuing to maintain the Pol Pot clique Beijing aims not only at using them as a tool to massacre the Kampuchean people but also at undermining peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Australian Foreign Minister Bill Hayden has put forth a correct proposal, that is to set up an international court to sentence the genocidal Pol Pot clique. Everyone knows that who have stood behind the Pol Pot gang and that the Pol Pot regime is a fatal mischief for the Kampucheans. [sentence as received] [Words indistinct], with their expansionist and hegemonistic interests, are running counter to the trend of dialogue prevailing in the relations among nations.

Anything [that] runs counter to the common trend will sooner or later goes bankrupt.

The Kampuchean people's just cause has enjoyed strong sympathy and wide support from the world public opinion. The decision made by the Harare summit attended by 101 countries and movements to leave vacant the Kampouchean seat is the victory of the Kampuchean people in particular and the three Indochinese peoples in general, and of the special relationship of militant solidarity of the three fraternal nations on this peninsula. The success of the recent visit to a number of socialist countries in East Europe by the National Asembly delegation of the People's Republic of Kampuchea led by Chairman Chea Sim has been another evidence for the fraternal countries' strong support for the Kampuchean people.

VODK COMMENTARY HAILS LEADERS' VISIT TO PRC

BK140154 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2330 GMT 13 Sep 86

[Station commentary: "The Democratic Kampuchean Delegation Has Concluded Its Visit to the PRC Successfully"]

[Text] The high-ranking Democratic Kampuchea delegation led by Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea; His Excellency Son Sann, prime minister of the CGDK; and His Excellency Khieu Samphan, vice president of Democratic Kampuchea in charge of foreign affairs, successfully concluded its visit to the PRC on 10 September.

During this visit, our delegation held talks and conversed with His Excellency Zhao Ziyang, premier; His Excellency Li Xiannian, president of the PRC; His Excellency Hu Yaobang, CPC general secretary; and His Excellency Deng Xiaoping, chairman of the CPC Central Advisory Commission. During this talks and conversations, our DK delegation informed the friendly Chinese leaders of the all-round development of our struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors, particularly the situation on the battlefield which has become more favorable to our struggle, and of the firmer and more splendid unity and cooperation of the CGDK's three patriotic forces both in the military and diplomatic fields. Our delegation also conveyed the profound thanks and sincere sentiments of friendship of the Cambodian people and the three patriotic armed forces to the Chinese Government and people, our brothers and comrades-in-arms who have firmly and unswervingly supported and given all kinds of aid to the Cambodian people and the CGDK.

The Chinese leaders expressed their elation over the all-round development of our struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors and the firm and intimate unity and cooperation of our CGDK's three patriotic forces.

They expressed their conviction that the just struggle waged by our Cambodian people under the CGDK's leadership would certainly score final victory over the Vietnamese aggressors. They reiterated their firm support for our Cambodian people's just struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors. Zhao Ziyang said: The Chinese Government and people regard support for the Cambodian people's just struggle as an internationalist duty that must be fulfilled and the Cambodian people's struggle and victories as their own. We will support the Cambodian people's struggle through to the end.

Zhao Ziyang went on: The CGDK's 8-point proposal constitutes a basis not only for settling the Cambodian problem through political means but also for achieving national unity in the future.

Li Xiannian said: China resolutely supports the Cambodian people's just struggle until final victory. After Cambodia is liberated, we will support the Cambodian people in building an independent, peaceful, neutral, and nonaligned Cambodia. China definitely will not interfere in Cambodia's internal affairs. China will never seek a sphere of influence in Cambodia. China's sphere of influence stays only in the 30 provinces, municipalities, and autonomous regions within its boundaries.

Hu Yaobang said: Since the first day that Cambodia began its struggle, the Chinese Government and people have declared clearly that they will resolutely stand by the Cambodian people's side because this is a matter of principle involving the diplomatic policy of a country. This is why we have no other choice but to give unswerving support to the Cambodian people's just struggle.

Concerning the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal, Hu Yaobang said: This proposal is very magnanimous toward Vietnam. Vietnam is the criminal because it has waged a war of aggression against Cambodia. But, the CGDK's 8-point proposal neither demands punishment of war criminals nor seeks war compensation from Vietnam but stresses its desire to restore good relations with Vietnam after it withdraws its aggressor troops from Cambodia. Through all this, the whole world should realize that the CGDK has been very magnanimous toward Vietnam.

Deng Xiaoping said: China's support for the CGDK's three patriotic forces is firm, unconditional, and permanent.

During talks as well as when our delegation visited any area, the Chinese leaders and people warmly and intimately welcomed our delegation. They expressed their profound sympathy and friendship with our Cambodian people.

Therefore, this visit to China by our DK delegation has achieved brilliant success. This visit has further strengthened and expanded the bond of traditional friendship and militant solidarity between the two countries and peoples and enabled them to understand each other more profoundly.

The Cambodian people, the DK National Army, and all patriotic forces of the CGDK express their warm welcome to and satisfaction with the brilliant outcome of this visit. All of us are encouraged by the Chinese leaders' valuable words of firm and unswerving support for the Cambodian people's just struggle and the CGDK's 8-point peace proposal.

SEMINAR ON ASIAN PACIFIC PEACE HELD

BK131039 Vientiane KPL in English 0904 GMT 13 Sep 86

[Text] Vientiane, September 13 (KPL) -- The U.S. Administration is trying to bring the Asian-Pacific states under its influence, economically and politically, said Thongsavat Yamani, vice-chairman of the State Committee for News Agency, Newspapers, Radio and Television. Speaking at a seminar on Asian-Pacific peace and security opened here yesterday, T. Yamani, who is also acting president of the Lao-Soviet Friendship Association, exposed the U.S. scheme of restricting the socio-political development of "third World countries" and of pressing its allies to increase their defence expenditure in an attempt to weaken the regional states' economic and political status.

In connection with the U.S. neo-global strategy, T. Yamani said Washington is escalating its arms race to force the socialist community to augment its military build-up, a wicked trap to undermine the peace policy of the socialist community.

EDUCATION SERVICES STUDY POLITICAL REPORT

[Text] Cadres of education services both at the central and local levels throughout the country are reported to have actively engaged in study sessions to study the Draft Political Report of the party Central Committee, which will be presented to the Fourth Party Congress. Professor Bountiam Phitsamai, acting minister of education, gave an interview to our station reporter on the issue as follows:

[Begin Bountiam Phitsamai recording] In many localities, education cadres of the education services of various districts and provinces, school directors, and school teachers have engaged in study sessions organized by the party and administrative committees in those respective localities. As for in the ministry itself, two study sessions have been organized so far for 1,639 cadres. The first study session was organized especially for leading and key cadres, department directors and deputy directors, chiefs of sections, and directors of the institutes, schools, and factories under the management of the Ministry of Education. The second study session was organized generally for cadres, school teachers and professors, and education functionaries from many offices within the ministry, institutes, schools, and factories.

In these political life campaigns, our education cadres have devoted themselves to profoundly study the Draft Political Report in order to appreciate more deeply the line, policies, and plans of the party. They have positively contributed views to this draft report with a sense of enthusiasm. Relying on their appreciation of the contents of the party Central Committee documents, they have set out to organize political life campaigns among themselves by scrutinizing the work of their respective departments and offices. They have reviewed their past political performance and have commented on and criticized one another with the aim of pointing out strong points for further implementation and weak points for rectification.

After engaging in these study sessions, our education cadres, school teachers, state employees, and education functionaries have come to appreciate more profoundly various issues. For example, they have clearly appreciated and understood the achievements and victories of the Lao revolution under the talented and clear-sighted leadership of the LPRP. At the same time, they have also drawn lessons from the sessions and have managed to identify the remaining weak points and shortcomings of their own and of their departments and services which must be urgently rectified. They have also gained more knowledge and new understanding concerning the reality of our social and economic situation, especially production forces, production relationship, and social structure. They have come to understand the basic economic and social tasks of the bypassing period and the orientation of the economic and social development from now to the year 2000 and that of the Second 5-Year State Plan from 1986 to 1990. They have grasped the direction of the new economic management mechanism. They have also appreciated the direction of party building and cadre training in the new period of the revolution, which are the decisive factors for scoring victories in the socialist transformation and construction in the years to come. They have pledged to train and build themselves along the party so as to serve the revolution, the country, and the people of all tribes to the full. [end recording]

CHAWALIT ON ARMY MODERNIZATION, 'THREATS'

BK141430 Bangkok NAEO NA in Thai 14 Sep 86 p 10

[Army Commander in Chief General Chawalit Yongchaiyut's address to a dinner gathering of the Foreign Correspondents Club of Thailand at Dusit Thani Hotel on 11 September; "rendered into Thai" by NAEO NA]

[Text] Ladies and gentlemen. I am speaking without paper in my hands tonight, because I am speaking as a friend to all of you present here. The topic of tonight's address is the development and modernization of the Army. I realize that most of you here do not care much to listen to such a topic. I will therefore spend only about 30 minutes on the topic and then give you a chance to ask questions.

First of all. I must say that my English is very poor. I went to the United States 33 years ago to study electronics. Back then we had to queue up for school lunch. There was a woman behind the counter; she asked everyone what they would like to eat. When it was my turn, I asked for tuna salad and steak. She said, "sorry sir" because she could not understand what I told her. I repeated to her "steak please." Everybody stared at me. I then shouted to her "hot dog please." (laughter) She said: "Okay, next person please." (laughter) I had to eat hot dogs for 6 months. That's a true story.

Okay, I do not think I will have to eat hot dog again tonight.

Let me embark on the subject of modernization of the armed forces. Each unit of the armed forces must think about this. Modernization of the armed forces involves many factors.

First we must define the "threats" to our country. Each country has its specific problems. As for Thailand, threats to the country mean threats against national independence and security. They can present themselves in various forms. For some, threats to the country may include anything endangering the political, economic and social stability of the country.

We must be careful regarding this. Based on the above criteria, we must hold the United States as our enemy at present because its dumping of 50,000 tons of sugar is causing trouble for us. The Americans have the right to do so, while we must do whatever we must to protect our interests, too. Please be assured that all Thai people consider the United States our best friend.

If we talk about military threats, we do not have any external threats at present. We realize that Vietnam is trying its best to remain in Cambodia. ASEAN meanwhile believes that a negotiated peace should be achieved. But if we comply with Vietnam's demand for the removal of the Khmer Rouge from Cambodia, we may have to listen to its call for a removal of Son Sann's Khmer Serei faction later on, and finally Vietnam may want an expulsion of all the Cambodian people from their own home. It is therefore difficult for us to comply with Vietnam's wishes. Still, we do not think of Vietnam as our enemy.

The greatest concern for Thailand at present comes from the south. There has been a report that Australia will shift to a new strategy and withdraw itself from the Southeast Asian continent in order to concentrate on protecting its own island. We are very worried about it. We are also worried about the split between New Zealand and ANZUS, as well as the rift between Indonesia and Australia, both our friends.

These events would leave a vacuum to our south. You may realize that we have a vacuum on our east side. We are on the frontline next to the socialist states of Indochina. Although we do not think that they are our enemy, we still do not know what is in Pham Van Dong's mind.

Most people see such threats surrounding Thailand, but for me I still do not want to draw any conclusions. We are trying to be freinds with all countries. Please understand our line of thinking. Now let me talk about another factor. We think that we have no external threats at present. We have a good understanding of our friends in Vietnam, and we hope that one day they will withdraw from Cambodia and settle the problem through peaceful means. As for the Cambodian resistance forces who are fighting for independence, they are also trying their best. In 1978-1979, the non-communist groups had only 5,000 men. Now they are 18,000 strong and fighting hard. Eight years ago their activities were limited to the border area near Thailand. Now they are fighting deeper inside Cambodia -- as far as Phnom Penh and other big cities. We used to have many problems at our border. Now the border situation has improved.

Well, I do not mean to say that our Vietnamese friends behave themselves better now. What I mean is that they have not expanded the opportunities. What I would like to tell all of our distinguished guests here is that the Cambodian people will fight to the last man. I have great confidence in them. That is why I do not think other people can solve the problem for the Cambodians. This is our firm conviction at present.

Distinguished guests, you may think that the Thai people, government, and armed forces have made great accomplishments over the past several years. I am concerned, however, because conditions still exist which are threatening, which encourage our people to join the communists in the jungle. The communists are always trying their best to exploit our weakpoints and achieve their goals through their front strategy.

In fact, the theory of front advocated by our good friend Mao Zedong is hard to understand, even for the Chinese themselves. They struggle to win power through the armed struggle and the front tactic. At present, conditions are very conducive for their front tactic, and they have been exploiting them to the fullest and have acheived successes. We must therefore adjust our struggle strategy. This is easy to understand. We must know how to reorganize our strategic organization for struggle. We must expand our strength and make it greater than theirs.

This is difficult. I am not very pleased with the success we have made. We must think of new approaches and theory for our struggle. We are also concerned about our friends in the Philippines, Indonesia, and Malaysia. In the Philippines, the (communist) problem is serious at present. As friends, we must try our best to help them if we are requested. The same with Malaysia. I think the problem (communist threat) still exists in the ASEAN countries.

Concerning the development of the Army, I think it is necessary in order to counter possible threats from outside. Our national defense budget is high compared to the gross domestic product. In 1978-1979 -- I like to refer to this particular year because there was a great deal of change in this part of the world then -- our GDP increased only 2 percent while our defense budget rose by 8.5 or 8.6 percent. Our defense budget now stands at 3.5 percent of the GDP.

Concerning the development of the Army, there are four or five problems we must pay attenntion to: manpower, training, weaponry, and structure. In order to achieve systematic development, we must carry out measures to improve the four simultaneously. This is difficult as it all involves the army structure. We need money. Presently we spend 20 percent of our budget on salaries. We therefore must cut down our expenses in this area. This is what we have already said about reducing the size of our army while making it more competent. We could save about one billion baht by trimming the size of the Army, and we could spend that money in other areas. That is all I have to say today.

CHAWALIT VIEWS BOMB THREATS, PREM MEETING

[Text] Army Commander-in-Chief General Chawalit Yongchaiyut yesterday promised stern action against perpetrators of bomb threats.

Police and military intelligence officers are investigating two bomb threats made early this week against the Government House and the Agriculture Ministry.

Gen Chawalit asserted without naming names that a group of "irresponsible people whose personal interests have been hurt" was behind the bomb threats.

The Army chief said he was upset but did not think these bomb threats would affect the country's political stability.

However, he said such threats could cause panic and might hurt the economic situation.

The general then appealed for an end to all forms of violence for the sake of the nation.

Gen Chawalit called on Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon at his Si Sao Thevet residence yesterday morning.

Prem was concerned about the Army chief's safety. Gen Chawalit was involved in two Army helicopeter accidents on Tuesday and Wednesday but escaped unhurt.

The Army chief said Gen Prem wanted the Army to improve the maintenance of its helicopters.

Gen Chawalit said he also sought Gen Prem's opinions on the Army's modernisation plan.

He praised Gen Prem for his "extensive experience in military affairs and wide-ranging interests in the technical problems the Army faces."

On the upcoming reshuffle of Army officers from the rank of colonel downward, Gen Chawalit said he allowed commanders of the army regions, divisions, regiments and smaller units to pick their own men and submit their names for him to review.

Gen Chawalit expects the list to be announced by mid-October.

PAPER CRITICIZES U.S. 'PHOBIA' TOWARD IMPORTS

BK151022 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 14 Sep 86 p 2

[Unattributed article]

[Text] Thailand's great ally, the United States, shows more of its fangs with each passing day. In the first 6 months of 1986, U.S. rice exports deprived Thailand of 4 billion baht in rice export income, and this had grave effects on Thai farmers. Thailand tried to appeal to the U.S. Government for help, but the latter claimed that there appeared to be little impact, if any, on Thai rice exports.

After having dealt Thai rice exports a heavy blow, the United States has launched a new game, this time against Thai corn, by cutting prices below production costs and then nonchalantly taking away major buyers of Thai corn. The domestic price of Thai corn immediately dropped to only 1.30 baht per kilo, really victimizing corn growers. But this was not enough, the United States then dumped 150,000 tons of sugar by selling to China at only half of the world price. Thailand has appealed to no avail to the United States to slow down sales for the sake of a friend. The United States reportedly will dump another 200,000-250,000 tons of sugar. On this subject, the U.S. ambassador merely said Thai sugar was too expensive.

Such U.S. acts of vengeance against major Thai exports have not been limited to rice, corn, and sugar; a long list of Thai industrial products are waiting to go on the slaughter line, beginning with textile products. The United States had hoped to knock Thai textiles out of its market through the Jenkins Bill, but President Reagan had to veto it as a result of pressure from many foreign governments. However, the United States has not given up, and it will not be long before new measures are formulated to deal with Thai textiles.

Ceramic tiles will be next on line to be slaughtered. Some 400 trade protectionist bills against imports reportedly await U.S. congressional action. Former Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman has said that passage of these bills will cripple the Thai economy and completely stunt its growth. Thanat said the U.S. Congress has been afflicted by a phobia, striking indiscriminately against friends or foes.

Both the Thai public and private sectors and the Thai people are very disappointed with the United States because we have always regarded it as our friend both in good times and bad. Thailand has appealed as a friend to the United States to limit measures that strongly affect the Thai economy, only to hear that the U.S. was sorry and the measures were not intentional; after which it continued to launch more campaigns against Thai products.

The U.S. phobia has victimized various agricultural countries, and having failed to talk sense into the United States, these countries agreed to bring the matter up in GATT. The United States has challenged these countries by again reducing its rice prices just 5 days before the GATT meeting. It has also resorted to a new tactic, announcing that it will not participate in the GATT meeting if the meeting does not put the subjects it wants to discuss on the agenda. It wants to discuss a number of subjects, but one which adversely affects developing countries is the U.S. call for international laws to protects U.S. patents on goods ranging from toilet paper to space vehicles. This means that developing countries will have to pay royalties for every U.S. product they copy. The result of this is that it will make developing countries unable to stand on their own feet.

Yes, the United States has indicated to Thailand that it will relax its measures against Thai agricultural export markets and Thai industrial exports to the U.S. if Thailand agrees to protect U.S. patents. This is a fair exchange of benefits, says the U.S. But it is nothing more than blackmail by a bully.

U.S. fangs have been increasingly evident with every passing day. As for why more and more people have come to hate the United States, the answer is because a phobia has hit it — making it bite everyone, friend or foe.

NO ACTION TAKEN ON U.S. DRUGMAKERS PATENTS

BK120936 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] Public Health Minister Thoetphong Chaiyanan told reporters at the National Assembly building yesterday about the request made by U.S. drug manufacturers to patent their products imported by Thailand to prevent the copying of their products. The minister said that there are no patent rights for medicines in Thailand; and after having consulted officials concerned, the Public Health Ministry deemed it improper to take any action in this regard; besides, some of the drugs on the list requested by the U.S. manufacturers could be produced locally.

Asked about the regulation which requires drug stores to hire full time pharmacists, the minister replied that this regulation will be relaxed until the end of September. He added that drug stores are already prepared to comply with the law.

PHAM VAN DONG COMMENTS ON USSR PEACE PROPOSALS

OW141638 Hanoi VNA in English 1559 GMT 14 Sep 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept 14 -- Pham Van Dong, Political Bureau Member of the Communist Party of Viet Nam Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers, has granted an interview to the national daily NHAN DAN on the new Soviet peace initiatives. Following are questions and answers:

Question: Since August 1985, the Soviet Union has many times extended its unilateral nuclear moratorium. What do you have to comment on the significance of such a decision.

Answer: To firmly preserve world peace and to save mankind from the catastrophe of an extermination nuclear war are always the noblest and highest concern of the Soviet party, government and people.

Over the past more than eight months of 1986, the International Year of Peace, the Soviet Union has repeatedly put forth new initiatives of utmost importance. The especially important statement made by Comrade M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union Central Commitee [CPSU] on January 15 on an overall program to totally eliminate nuclear weapons by the year 2,000 as well as a series of recent Soviet initiatives aimed at reducing and gradually abolishing other kinds of mass destruction weapons and consolidating peace, security and cooperation in Europe and the Asian and Pacific region, have opened to mankind great hopes in the future of a nuclear-free world and the prospect in which mankind is eternally rid of the danger of a nuclear holocaust.

Nuclear test ban is one of the foremost conditions to prevent the manufacture of new nuclear weapons, the perfection of the nuclear arsenals and a new arms race, thus step by step reducing the dancer of a nuclear war.

Since August this year, the Soviet Union has four times officially announced extension of unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests. The great significance of this decision has been explained clearly in Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's statement of August 18 and in his recent interview with the editor-in-chief of the Czechoslovak paper "RUDE PRAVO". The Soviet Union's decision to continue prolonging its unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests till January 1st, 1987 is not only an act of good will but also a demonstration of courage and a high responsibility toward mankind.

The courageous act of the Soviet Union has received wide support from progressive people across the world, particularly of the leaders of the "Delhi six" and the 8th Summit of the Non-Aligned Movement held recently in Harare, capital of Zimbabwe. In response to this highly responsible act of the Soviet Union, the United States is continuing with its its nuclear tests, seriously challenging progressive opinion in the world.

Having fallen victim to imperialist wave of aggression over the past three decades and more, the Vietnamese people, more than any other peoples, understand the value of peace and are determined to struggle for peace for all nations. I take this opportunity to once again affirm the unswerving resolute support of the party, government and people of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for the important peace initiatives of the Soviet Unions, including its decision to continue its unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests. We call on the United States and the other nuclear powers to follow the Soviet example by halting all nuclear explosions, stopping the arms race on earth and refraining from taking it to outer space so as to preserve the peaceful life on our planet, the common home of all of us.

Question: In his interview with the editor-in-chief of RUDE PRAVO of Czechoslovakia on September 8, Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union Central Committee, spoke about the coming summit meeting between the USSR and the United States. What is your opinion on this issue?

Answer: The Soviet Union has made it clear that the coming Soviet-American summit must achieve a concrete result which would mark a clear step forward in the settlement, even of one or two issues concering international security, with the aim of improving the relations between the Soviet Union and the United States and reducing tension in the world. We welcome the principled stand and goodwill attitude of the Soviet Union with regard to this summit meeting which has once again been strongly reaffirmed in Comrade Mikhail Gorbahev's interview with RUDE PRAVO. On the contrary, the United States has said one way and acted in another. It said it wanted to have an early summit, but it has continued with its nuclear explosions and continued to take the arms race into outer space, sticking to the outmoded policy of gaining military supremacy over the Soviet Union. We call on the United States, a nuclear power in the world, to have a serious attitude so that the USSR-USA summit meeting may materialize and achieve positive results.

NHAN DAN HAILS USSR SECURITY TALKS PROPOSAL

OW130845 Hanoi VNA in English 0715 GMT 13 Sep 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept 13 -- The proposal made by the Soviet Union and other socialist countries to discuss the establishment of a common system of international security at the coming session of the United Nations General Assembly demonstrates their consistent policy and also their sincere hope that peceful coexistence become the common norm accepted and respected by all, says NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

The paper goes on:

"The establishment of a common system of international security is not a simple process, for security must prevail in all fields of international relations. All sober-minded persons know that the most important thing to ensure a secure world is disarmament, elimination of the danger of war and eventually abolition of all weapons. There lies actually the great significance of the overall program to eliminate nuclear weapons by the end of the century put forth by Soviet Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in his Jan 15, 1986 statement as well as in many other peace initiatives of the Soviet Union including its decision to prolong its moratorium on nuclear tests and its call upon the U.S. to do the same".

The Vietnamese people demand that the United States Government change its way of thinking and opt for a realistic and responsible policy toward the future of this planet, NHAN DAN says.

"They support the Soviet Union's stance on the convening of a new Soviet-U.S. summit which should mark a clear stop forward in the settlement of even one or two major issues of international security," the paper says in conclusion.

NHAN DAN CITES PRC POLICY OF 'HOSTILITY'

OW140739 Hanoi VNA in English 0701 GMT 14 Sep 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept 14 -- "The recent gathering of the reactionary Khmer factions in Beijing pointed to the Chinese authorities' stubborn policy of confrontation and hostility against the Kampuchean people and the people of the three Indochinese countries as a whole" says NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

The paper says: "After the failure of the 'eight-point proposal' farce staged in Beijing half a year ago, the Chinese authorities recently summoned the leaders of the reactionary Khmer factions to give them new instructions. During this meeting they did the following things:

"First, on the basis of their 'commitment to extend resolute, unconditional and long-term support' to the genocidal Polpotists and the other Khmer reactionaries, the Chinese rulers provided them with more dollars and weapons, urging them to commit more crimes against the Kamphuchean people. This is a serious act, showing that the Chinese authorities are still pursuing a military solution to oppose the revival of the Kampuchean people so as to materialize their scheme of big-nation hegemonism and expansionism. They have not reconciled themselves to the lessons of the past eight years and are frantically breathing life into the Polpotists with the illusion of enabling them to reverse the irreversible situation in Kampuchea. They have also turned a blind eye to the goodwill peace proposal of the three Indochinese countries, trying to use the language of arms to impose their will on a whole nation and use the genocidal Polpotists as a means for confrontation. They still want confrontation, not dialogue.

"Secondly, they continue to advertise the so-called 'eightpoint' proposal which has been rejected by world-wide public opinion. The core of that proposal is the abolition of the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the restoration of the Polpotists, something they have failed to achieve by military means over the past eight years and will fail to in the coming period despite their additional supply of money and weapons for the Khmer reactionaries. Such things are absolutely contradictory to morality and the realities in Kampuchea. They also prove that the Beijing authorities still stubbornly commit themselves to supporting the Polpotists, sticking to the policy of using them as a means to oppose the three Indochinese countries and sabotage stability and security in Southeast Asia.

"Thirdly, the Chinese authorities again loudly blared their demand that 'Vietnamese troops withdraw from Kampuchea'. This replay contains nothing new. It only sheds more light on their absurd attitude. It proves that they have never wished to see a proper solution to the Kampuchean issue. While persistently demanding that Vietnam withdraw its troops, they have increased their supplies to the Polpotists so as to help them intensify their criminal acts. By refusing to stop nurturing and controlling the genocidal culprits, they still nurture the illusion of restoring the genocidal regime in Kampuchea.

"The stance of the three Indochinese countries, as expounded in recent conferences of their foreign ministers, is clear and correct and is winning support from more and more nations and governments. The stance draws a clear line between the national and international aspects of the Kampuchean issue and puts forth solutions to both aspects. Public opinion in the region and elsewhere in the world is well aware that the elimination of the genocidal Polpotists is an unquestionable necessity. At present, if all the parties concerned agree that the two fundamental questions are the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops and the elimination of the Polpotists, it is possible right now to start negotiations on plans to settle those two questions so as to reach a political solution to the Kampuchean issue in the interests of lasting peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

"By stubbornly demanding that Vietnam withdraw its troops while refusing to give up their efforts to nurture and use the Polpotists, the Chinese authorities are intentionally putting up a big obstacle to the search for a political solution on Kampuchea.

"Such a policy is the cause of the present tense situation in Indochina and the region, and the main obstacle to peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia. In response to the goodwill and constructive stance of the three Indochinese countries, the Chinese authorities have chosen a very negative stand and attitude which run counter not only to realities and the aspiration of world-wide public opinion but also to the interests of the peoples in the region, including the Chinese people.

"The revolutionary cause of the Kampuchean people is progessing firmly. The situation in Kampuchea is irreversible. The militant solidarity between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea is as firm as a steel bastion. The friendship and comprehensive cooperation of the three Indochinese countries with the Soviet Union and the other fraternal countries in the socialist community are unshakable.

"However stubbornly they may sustain the genocidal Polpotists and the other Khmer reactionaries and whatever divisive and slanderous tricks they may use against the three Indochinese peoples, the Chinese authorities cannot avoid failure".

DO MUOI MEETS HON GAI UNION OF COAL ENTERPRISES

BK150520 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 14 Sep 86

[Text] In early September, Comrade Do Muoi, member of the CPV Central Committee Political Bureau and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers, held a working session with the Hon Gai Union of Coal Enterprises and Quang Ninh Province on the question of stepping up coal production in the final months of the year.

Generally speaking, over the past 8 months the coal sector has made efforts in the production and supply of coal. It is now resolutely struggling to fulfill the 1986 plan for coal exploitation, for dirt and stone overburden removal, and for coal shaft digging. It is especially noted that in the third quarter of 1986, despite numerous difficulties caused by natural calamities, the sector has made remarkable efforts in production. It is now striving to overcome various obstacles to ensure the extraction, selection, water cleaning, and transportation of coal for prompt delivery to various key economic sectors.

Comrade Do Muoi aired his opinions on the need to provide guidance for production and management work and on guaranteeing basic economic units' right to autonomy. This is aimed at ensuring fulfillment of the coal production plan for the 4th quarter of 1986, in particular, and for all of 1986 in general, while making good preparations for the coal production plans for 1987 and ensuing years. Emphasis must be placed on consolidating production organization and renovating leadership methods in accordance with the spirit of the Political Bureau's draft resolution No. 306 which calls for ensuring enterprises' autonomy in production and business, boldly vesting enterprise directors with more power and duties, and clarifying the management role of directors and the mastery of workers.

First, effective steps must be taken to overcome the state of imbalance between dirt and rock overburden removal and coal exploitation, satisfactorily carry out the repair of vehicles and machinery and ensure road and rail transportation in order to meet the requirements of production and the need for better coal quality, consolidate the coal delivery link, and put this link under planning. Close cooperation must be achieved with the communications and internal affairs sectors in the struggle against coal theft as well as against negative phenomena surrounding the distribution of coal. This is to ensure the delivery of coal to the localities which need it, especially those key units such as electricity, cement, fertilizer, and textile establishments.

The vice chairman especially urged the leading cadres of the Ministry of Mines and Coal and of the Hon Gai Union of Coal Enterprises to maintain constant cooperation with the Quang Ninh Provincial People's Committee in mapping out plans and specific measures to care for the lives of the cadres, workers, and civil servants in the coal mining area.

VNA DESCRIBES RELIEF EFFORTS IN TYPHOON-HIT AREAS

[Text] Hanoi VNA Sept. 14 -- Urgent measures have been taken to overcome the consequences of the recent tropical storm "Wayne" which ravaged several coastal provinces of northern Vietnam on Sept. 6 causing substantial losses in lives and property.

In Tien Hai District, Thai Binh Province, east of Hanoi, 112 persons were reported dead, 1,380 other injured, all dwelling houses pulled down or demolished, more than 60,000 people left homeless, 460 classrooms demolished, 1,200 ha of rice at its earing stage inundated. Great havoc was also done to the orchards and forests.

In Ha Nam Ninh Province, "Wayne" cut a wide swath of destruction in 17 districts and townships including the provincial town of Nam Dinh. Up to Sept. 10, 191 persons were reported dead, 839 injured and 19 missing. This is the strongest hurricane to hit Ha Nam Ninh in the past 57 years. First aid teams have been set up and hundreds of tons of rice and tens of thousands of bamboo trees have been sent by the provincial authorities and tens of thousands of workdays spent on repairing the damaged schools and houses, restoring agricultural production and searching for the missing. Environmental hygiene is being intensively carried out to prevent the possible outbreak of epidemics. Many ministries and public offices have also provided the victims with emergency relief in food and other necessities.

The Ministry of Light Industry has sent ready-made clothes to Thai Binh. The Ministry of Agriculture has decided to supply Thai Binh and Ha Nam Ninh Provinces with vegetation seeds, fertilizers, insecticides, stock feeds and veterinary medicines. The general department of technical equipment under the Ministry of Agriculture has sent a group of cadres and skilled workers to the stricken provinces to help repair hundreds of tractors and other farm machines wrecked by the hurricane.

A delegation of the central Vietnam province of Nghe Tinh has gone to Tien Hai District, bringing along condensed milk and sugar for the injured under treatment at the local hospital. Hai Hung Province, southeast of Hanoi, has sent million dong worth of commodities to the victims.

AFP CITES 'OBSERVERS' ON ECONOMIC DIFFICULTIES

BK150216 Hong Kong AFP in English 0154 GMT 15 Sep 86

[By Laurent Maillard]

[Text] Hanoi, Sept 15 (AFP) — A year after the launch of ambitious economic reforms, Vietnam's economy is still suffering from serious difficulties which the country's leadership is apparently unable to overcome, observers here say. Mistakes in carrying out the reforms, designed to lieberalise the country's stagnating economy and stimulate growth, have provoked an acute economic crisis, they say.

The most spectacular problem is inflation. It refuses to ease and has caused the price of certain goods to increase tenfold in the past year, erasing the benefits of a devaluation and currency reform last September. The annual rate, estimated by some Vietnamese officials to be running at an unprecedented 700 percent, has eroded the meagre buying power of wage earners. Most wages have not been upwardly adjusted to take account of inflation in the past year and are still around 400 dong a month (27 dollars at the official exchange rate).

During the same period, the price of a bowl of soup in the streets of Hanoi has risen from four dong to 40 dong (from about 27 cents to 2.70 dollars), a kilogramme (2.2 pounds) of beef from 70 dong to 300 dong (4.67 dollars to 20 dollars) and a kilogramme of rice on the free market from five dong to 30 dong (33 cents to two dollars). Free-market prices for most manufacturered goods, often unavailable in state shops, have generally followed black-market prices for dollars and gold, which have soared in the past few months. A dollar, which was worth 35 dong on the black market after last September's monetary reform, today buys 350 dong.

"Purchasing power is one-tenth of what it was a year ago," a recent letter published in the army QUAN DOI NHAN DAN said. "Today, two wages is not even enough to buy sufficient rice for a couple with three children — not to mention other things, like food, clothes and school stationery." The letter continued: "In future, even the most honest people will have to sort things out for themselves and negative phenomena have increased in response to unpredictable circumstances."

To overcome soaring inflation, which has taken off again in the past few weeks, the only measure proposed by the authorities until now, it seems, is the development of consumer-goods production and state trade. A resolution giving even more autonomy to enterprises and allowing the development of small private industry was adopted earlier this year after a lively debate. "But it will take months and years before its effects are felt," a Western analyst in Hanoi said.

Meanwhile, companies still lack competent managers to assume new responsibilities brought about by the reforms. According to reliable source, some are slow to change their management style and hide in a maze of old regulations which still exist. "More than three hundred regulations concerning the economy were published in 1985. I don't even have the time to read them, so how can I apply them?" a disenchanted economic official from a southern province recently told a foreign visitor.

The effects of confusion in enterprises and state trade caused by new accounting procedures are still being felt. The procedures place an additional burden on enterprises, which, according to official figures, still operate at 50 percent of their capacity because of raw-material and energy shortages. In Hanoi, state shops are still unable to fix prices for a number of products, including bicycles, electric fans and watches. It is still impossible to buy a vacuum flask, a blanket or a fan in a state shop in the capital. Shortages have, however, led a growing number of consumers to use the free market. In southern Vietnam, where more dynamism and less bureaucratic sluggishness prevails, the situation is decidedly better, although prices, even in the state shops, are much higher.

The reforms abolished the rationing of essential goods — rice, meat, sugar and petrol for instance — although it was re-established at the beginning of the year to overcome the inflationary effects on the standard of living, and remains in force in most of the country.

Faced with these problem, and with the Vietnamese Communist Party Congress not far off, the press here has virtually ceased writing about the economy. Government officials are barely visible and most foreign observers are wondering what action will be taken. "At the moment, the government is flying by sight," an official from the south recently told a foreign delegaton. "There's no longer any overall economic strategy since the reforms got stuck with difficulties."

BASIC PARTY ORGANIZATION CONGRESSES REVIEWED

[Text] As of 11 September, nearly all provinces, cities, and special zones countrywide have basically completed their basic party organization congresses. Some provinces and cities, which are slow, have continued to hold the congresses extensively. Some 50 district and town party organizations have thus far convened their congresses. From 3 to 9 districts and towns in each of Ha Nam Ninh, Thanh Hoa, and Lang Son Provinces have conducted or are conducting their congresses.

All the basic party organization congresses of districts and towns in all provinces, cities, and special zones have been prepared urgently and scrupulously. The congresses have devoted a proper amount of time to discuss the two draft documents of the Sixth Party Congress and the draft reports of the provincial, city, special zone, district, and town party organization congresses. They have made specific and realistic comments on the issues of concern to all our party members and troops, especially the objectives and measures to develop the socioeconomic situation, step up production, stabilize, and gradually improve the people's livelihood, oppose negativism and sluggishness in socioeconomic activities, and purify and consolidate the party organization.

In these congresses, the district, town and basic party organizations paid special attention to the task of referring to and applying the fundamental viewpoints and spirit of the two draft documents of the Sixth Party Congress in order to determine the operational guidelines of the party organizations and the urgent measures to resolve the problems in production and life in time ahead. Many basic party organizations such as the ones of the Hanoi eastern ward, Hai Dong villages of Ha Nam Ninh Province, Tan Long foundary of Haiphong, Quynh Luu District of Nghe Tinh Province, Hoa Vang District of Quang Nam-Danang Province, Kien Binh District of Hoang Lien Son Province, Go Dau District of Tay Ninh Province, have created some new changes in their thinking and action.

They have adopted resolutions to establish and develop the new economic structure, improve the management system, boldly remove difficulties and obstacles in distribution and circulation, redivide labor and trade, struggle againt negativism, and achieve democracy and social justice.

AUSTRALIA

HAYDEN ON CHILEAN REFUGEES, PNG AID CUTS

BK121046 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] The foreign affairs minister, Mr Hayden, has foreshadowed the possibility of Australia accepting more refugees from Chile. Speaking in Port Moresby, where he has been having talks with senior members of the Papua New Guinea Government, Mr Hayden described the regime of Chile's ruler, General Pinochet, as violently repressive. AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATED PRESS said Mr Hayden predicted accelerating violence in Chile where a state of seige had been imposed in the wake of this week's attempted assassination of General Pinochet. It said Mr Hayden described the general as a tin pot tyrant besotted with power. The office of the immigration minister, Mr Hurford, has confirmed that Australia will respond to the Chile refugee situation on a need basis through the special humanitarian program. Mr Hayden said that in 1984 several hundred Chilean miners were allowed to come to Australia under the program after being involved in a bitter strike protesting at General Pinochet's policies.

Meanwhile, Mr Hayden has given a broad outline of the formula under which Australia will reduce its aid to Papua New Guinea in coming years. The foreign minister refused to give special figures on the aid allocation, but said the aid package would have a substantial minimum base below which it would not fall and a maximum contribution of about $330 million [Australian dollars]. Mr Hayden said the aid allocation would be reduced by 3 percent a year over the next 4 years and it could be anywhere between a minimum base and the maximum figure depending on the health of the Australian economy.

A Radio Australia correspondent in Port Moresby, Peter Cotton, said under the aid memorandum signed last September, Australia was to give Papua New Guinea about $340 million in the next financial year. Cotton said that according to Papua New Guinea's foreign minister, Mr Vagi, under the new Australian proposal, aid to his country could drop by about 15 percent.

SOLOMON ISLANDS PM WANTS CYCLONE AID SPEEDUP

[Text] The visiting prime minister of Solomon Islands, Sir Peter Kenilorea, says he wants to speed up Australian aid in the wake of cyclone Namu, which hit his country in May. The cyclone left thousands homeless with many buildings and bridges destroyed and roads washed away. At a news conference in Sydney, Sir Peter said current aid deliveries were not causing any problem, but recovery from the cyclone would be faster if deliveries were accelerated. Sir Peter said schools were still very much in disarray. He expects to have talks in Canberra next week with the prime minister, Mr Hawke, and foreign affairs minister, Mr Hayden, and the defense minister, Mr Beazley.

GOVERNMENT PROTESTS PRETORIA SPY RECRUITMENT

[Text] A Foreign Affairs Department spokesman in Canberra says the Australian Government is deeply concerned by reports of an attempt to recruit as a South African spy a member of the Australian Embassy in Pretoria.

The Australian Embassy in South Africa has lodged an official protest and the matter is being considered by the foreign affairs minister, Mr Hayden. It was alleged that a 23-year old South African receptionist employed by the embassy, Miss Venessa Twine, was approached by two men last month. The men allegedly offered to make it worth her while to supply information gained in the visa section where Miss Twine had worked for (?3) months. The woman was told that she could be the first South African woman to become a James Bond.

TREASURER ON DOWNGRADING OF CREDIT RATING

[Text] The treasurer, Mr Keating, has said he does not believe the downgrading in Australia's credit rating for borrwoing money overseas will have any effect on domestic interest rates, but he conceded that Australia's loss of the prestigious AAA credit rating could lead to an increase in interest rate in the government's treasury bonds. Mr Keating was commenting on the announcement in New York that the international credit research group Moody's Investors Services has dropped Australia to the second highest rate, AA-1. Moody's said continued weakness in world commodity prices threatened to place heavy pressure on Australia's future foreign currency earnings.

A Radio Australia reporter in New York, Andrew Krueger, says the value of the Australian dollar slipped by half a cent to 60.8 cents against the American dollar after the announcement. Krueger says the lower credit rating will affect borrowings by major institutions such as the Commonwealth Bank, Qantas, and the Australian Industries Development Corporation.

Earlier today, the treasurer issued a three-page statement defending the federal government's economic policies and saying he did not believe that credit downgrading was justified either on the basis of Australia's overall economic strength or measures by Canberra to adjust the economy to international uncertainties.

CURRENT ACCOUNT DEFICIT DECLINES IN AUGUST

[Text] The federal government today received an unexpected boost with the announcement of a drop in the current account deficit for August. The improvement in the balance of payments position is reflected in the level of the current account deficit — more than $1,235 million [Australian dollars]. From Canberra, Graham Well:

[Begin Well recording] Yesterday, federal ministers warned of the likelihood of a high figure. The trade minister, Mr Dawkins, said an improvement in the monthly pattern was unlikely before the latter half of the financial year. But the August current account deficit is down more than $300 million from July, and the merchandise trade deficit for August was $416 million. In seasonally adjusted terms, a fall of nearly $200 million, reflecting increased exports and unchanged imports. Although exports rose by 20 percent in seasonally adjusted terms during August, rural exports fell 6 percent.

The most significant feature of that fall being a drop in wheat exports. Metals, machinery, and transport equipment export recorded good rises. [end recording]

ALP 'LEFT' WANTS HALFPENNY 1ST ON SENATE TICKET

[Text] A general meeting of the Victorian socialist left faction of the Australian Labor Party [ALP] has endorsed a prominent unionist, Mr John Halfpenny, for the No 1 spot on the party's senate ticket. The ticket is the order in which the party's preferred candidates appear on voting cards during general elections for the senate.

The decision to put Mr Halfpenny at the top of the ticket will be debated next week by the party''s public office selection committee which seems certain to endorse it. This would see the relegation of the federal industry and technology minister, Senator Button, from the top spot to the virtually unwinnable third position behind Senator Gareth Evans.

Radio Australia's Melbourne office says this would trigger intervention by the federal branch of the party in the affairs of the Victorian ALP. Last week, the national secretary of the party, Mr (Bob McMillan), said there may be a postal ballot of the federal executive to overturn any decision to put Mr Halfpenny at the top of the ticket. Mr Halfpenny has declined to comment on the prospect of federal intervention.

FINANCE MINISTER ANNOUNCES RUPIAH DEVALUATION

BK121625 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1512 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Indonesian Finance Minister Radius Prawiro's announcement on the government's new monetary policy — recorded]

[Text] Dear listeners of Radio Republic Indonesia! I would like to ask for your time and draw your attention to the new monetary policy adopted by the government today. The main objective of the government's new monetary policy is aimed at ensuring the continuity of national development, which has already been endorsed by the People's Consultative Council.

As has repeatedly been stressed by our president on various occcasions during the last 3 years, especially during his latest National Day speech on 15 August, our economy is now facing serious tests and challenges, which are caused by plummeting oil prices in a very short period of time. Besides, the prices of our agricultural and mining products on the world market continue to fall. We expected the drop in oil prices, but we did not expect them to fall that drastically in such a short time.

When we prepared our 1986-87 state budget, we expected oil prices to fall from $28 to $25 per barrel. Even if they dropped further, we only expected them to drop to $20 per barrel. In January 1986, oil prices were still over $25 per barrel. However, during the last 6 months, world oil prices have experienced a very drastic fall to less than $10 per barrel. At present, our oil is priced at about $12 per barrel.

The drastic fall of oil prices in such a short time is directly caused by an oil glut resulting from excessive production by a number of oil-producing countries unable to control their production. Despite preliminary signs that oil prices will return to normal and agreement on an oil production cut among OPEC member countries in September and October, the world oil market is still uncertain. The market has been so weakened that it is difficult to predict its future direction.

Even though we can boost our domestic revenue thanks to the new taxation system, state revenue from oil still constitutes a major source of income. Even though we can boost our nonoil and nongas commodity exports through our new economic policies, oil still constitutes our largest foreign exchange earner. For this reason, the drop of oil prices results in the reduction of state revenue.

There are hopes that oil prices in the 1990's will return to normal, but we cannot rely on these hopes because there have been many unpredictable events thus far. Even if the oil prices increase in the 1990's, we will still face two urgent problems: Namely, how should we cope with the serious impact of the current oil price fall and how should we safeguard our economy through a weakend world oil market from now to the 1990's.

We mentioned earlier that the drop in oil prices will directly affect our balance of payments and state budget. Without an early precautionary step to cope with this situation, the drop in oil prices would greatly affect the people's income, job opportunities, and economic activities.

We have not seemed to have felt the impact of the oil price fall for three main reasons: First, Indonesian economic resilience, which has been strengthened during the last 20 years; second, the government's uninterrupted efforts to protect the public from the impact; third, the increase in the state's income from nonoil and nongas commodity goods, the mobilization of the public savings, the support of our foreign reserves, the rescheduling of major projects, and other measures.

Taking all these factors into consideration, the government has come to the conclusion that the main step to be taken now is to maintain our balance of payments with a view to ensuring the continuity of national development. Therefore, the government has decided to devalue our rupiah by 45 percent against the U.S. dollar. The devaluation will take effect from tonight at 2400 West Indonesian Time [1700 GMT]. If the middle rate for $1 today is 1,134 rupiah, it will be 1,644 rupiah after the devaluation. With this devaluation, we will be able to maintain our balance of payments because we will be able to safeguard our foreign reserves to ensure the continuity of our national development and the country's economy.

While our nonoil and nongas commodity exports will be more competitive in the international market, our imports of finished products will decrease because their prices will be higher. As such, the domestic economy is expected to grow because we will make maximum use of existing production capacity, either to meet domestic needs or for exports.

This is an important step in providing efficient protection to domestic products and in boosting nonoil and nongas commodity exports. All these things will create more job opportunities and stimulate economic activities in general. In this way, we can ensure the continuity of national development in the years to come.

To make this devaluation of the rupiah attain its targets and objectives, the government will continue to stimulate the business world and economic activities of the public. Therefore, the government has no plans to raise electricity or telecommunications charges or train and city bus fares. The government is fully aware that an increase in commodity prices may follow this devaluation. However, considering the sufficient supply of basic necessities and services, the government believes that such a price increase will remain within a normal range.

In this connection, the government will continue to maintain the 1986-87 state budget with great caution and exercise austerity measures by checking on government expenditures and spending money on truly urgent matters. The government will also continue to seek other revenues from nonoil and nongas commodity exports. In this connection, the government will continue to implement the [words indistinct] policy with a view to supporting economic activities without endangering monetary stability.

All this shows the urgency of the new economic measures we have to take in our efforts to boost our nonoil and nongas exports. Thus, we have reiterated our determination to shift our foreign currency income to the nonoil and nongas sector. I would like to end this announcement by reminding all of you of the call made by the president during his National Day speech on 15 August that all of us, government agencies, businessmen, intellectuals, and others take part in the great efforts to overcome the challenges. If necessary, we must be ready to make temporary sacrifices for the benefit of our future. Farewell, and I would like to thank you very much for your great attention.

[Text] Finance Minister Radius Prawiro says the government decided to devalue the rupiah because of the drastic fall in oil prices on the international market. Speaking to the editors of several dailies about the background of the devaluation at the Information Department in Jakarta this afternoon, Radius Prawiro said that in January 1986 the government maintained that it would never devalue the rupiah because the price of Indonesian oil at that time was still relatively high -- $25.13 per barrel. In August, the price plunged to $9.83 per barrel and rose to $12.20 in early September.

The government had expected the price of oil to fall, but nobody could have predicted such a drastic plummet. The finance minister said the price fall had caused Indonesia's oil and gas exports to shrink from $12,437,000,000 in the 1985-86 fiscal year to $6,621,000,000 in the 1986-87 fiscal year. Meanwhile, Trade Minister Rakhmat Saleh made it clear that the government will do its best to maintain an adequate supply of commodity goods and will not pursue policies leading to shortages in the markets.

Also attending today's meeting with editors were several cabinet ministers including Industries Minister Hartarto and Information Minister Harmoko.

SUHARTO CHAIRS CABINET MEETING ON DEVALUATION

BK131034 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 13 Sep 86

[Text] President Suharto this morning in Jakarta led a special cabinet meeting at the National Secretariat Building in connection with the government's decision, announced last night, to devaluate the rupiah. As announced, the devaluation is 45 percent against the U.S. dollar. Starting from the announcement of the devaluation, the exchange rate is 1,644 rupiahs for 1 U.S. dollar. In the cabinet meeting, President Suharto said the decision on the monetary sector was made to defend the strength of the national economy from possible threats that could arise in facing critical prices on the global oil market.

Meanwhile, Finance Minister Radius Prawiro said the action taken and announced by the government last night is aimed at not tipping the scales on the balance of payments, which had been affected by sharply declining oil prices, so that the country's foreign exchange will not have to be used to cover a major deficit. Thus, it will be possible to avoid using a large amount of foreign exchange to cover the current accounts deficit. The current account is a figure derived from the value of exports less imports and less the [word indistinct] which could reach $6 bilion if the devaluation had not been carried out.

According to Minister Radius Prawiro, the decision was a positive one, especially considering the balance of payments, which can be stabilized. Nongas exports can be strengthened to face competition in the international market. Domestic production will be protected against the competition of imports. It is said that the 1986-87 national budget will be influenced by this, and people have been asked not to be confused when making calculations.

The government is aware that, by making the 12 September decision, prices may rise, but looking back on the experience of the 1983 devaluation, price increases will not be high. According to Minister Radius Prawiro, the most important matter accompanying the decision to devalue is to banish people's fears and suspicions concerning the credibility of the rupiah.

MOKHTAR ON PLANNED TALKS WITH FRENCH PRESIDENT

BK121455 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja has expressed his hope that France will be able to resolve the issue of New Caledonia's independence so as to enable the New Caledonian people to attain their aspirations for independence.

Speaking to newsmen in Jakarta this afternoon, Mokhtar said that Indonesia has always supported the New Caledonian people's aspirations for independence. The country currently remains under French administration. Mokhtar added that the issue of New Caledonian independence will not be raised during French President Mitterrand's upcoming visit to Indonesia 16-19 September. French nuclear policy in the South Pacific will not be discussed, either. Indonesia and France will hold talks only on bilateral relations, especially on matters related to economic cooperation because that is essential to support national development.

A French Government spokesman, [name indistinct], disclosed some time ago that a referendum on the issue of independence will be held in New Caledonia in 1987.

NO 'PERMANENT SHELTER' FOR SRV REFUGEES

BK150631 Kuala Lumpur BERNAMA in English 0554 GMT 15 Sep 86

["OANA/Pool" item]

[Text] Kuala Terengganu, Malaysia, Sept 15 (OANA-BERNAMA) -- Third countries were Monday urged to fulfill their moral obligation relating to the settlement of Vietnamese refugees receiving temporary shelter in Malaysia.

Defence Minister Abdullah Ahmad Badawi, who made the call, said Malaysia could not afford to provide permanent shelter for them. "With cooperation from international bodies like the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), we have been meeting our moral obligation. The time has come for us to say openly that this country cannot be expected to bear the burden forever," he said. Abdullah said this after visiting the refugee camp in Pulau Bidong near this capital of northeastern Terengganu State. Abdullah said the refugees had continued to land in this country and lately they had become a heavy burden owing to the decreasing number accepted by third countries of only about 600 a month. As a result, he said, there were still 8,039 refugees in the country and 5,557 of them were in Pulau Bidong.

The situation was further aggravated by the fact that only three countries — the United States, Australia and Canada -- were now prepared to accept them, he added. He said the slowdown in refugee intake by third countries had prolonged Malaysia's burden of caring for them. He added that some refugees had been living in Pulau Bidong for seven years and so far there was no indication from any third country to take them. Most of those left behind had no particular skill or knowledge of English. Abdullah also sympathised with the people of Terengganu, especially the fishermen, who looked upon the refugees in Pulau Bidong as a threat to their livelihood.

ARMY COMMANDER SAYS COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES DECLINE

BK130325 Kuala Lumpur BERITA HARIAN in Malay 5 Sep 86 p 20

[Text] Ipoh -- On Thursday, Commander of the 2d Infantry Division Major General Datuk Jaafar Mohamed said that the Security and Development Program (KESBAN) in the border region especially with the opening of new land schemes, has been successful in lessening the infiltration of communist terrorists and their activities in the country. He said that following the establishment of the program most of the enemy, which is based in the neighboring country, has found it difficult to infiltrate into the country. He told this to newsmen today after attending a commencement ceremony for a special training course for officers of the Army Reserve Unit (PSTD) at a training center for the territorial army near here.

According to him, the enemy is inactive due to several successes scored during a series of operations carried out by the security forces in cooperation with the Thai security forces. The Thai authorities successfully destroyed several communist terrorist strongholds in their region and crippled the logistics infrastructure. Datuk Jaafar said there has been less combat activity by the security forces due to the difficulty in finding the enemy. He said, "However, this does not mean that the national intelligence network has failed to do so but it is due to the absence of the enemy from the country." The security forces during their operations found long-abandoned signs of communist activity in the jungle.

Datuk Jaafar said the number of security forces positioned along the border is sufficient to prevent any infiltration into the country. He said studies are constantly being carried out to deploy the army according to the situation.

VOMD BROADCASTS PARTY ELECTION STATEMENT

BK121016 (Clandestine) Voice of Malayan Democracy in Malay 1215 GMT 11 Sep 86

[10 August 1986 Statement by the Central Committee of the Malay Nationalist Revolutionary Party of Malaya: "Set the New Direction of the Struggle."]

[Text] An undemocratic election suddenly took place on 2 and 3 August 1986. The Mahathir clique-led Barisan Nasional government had perpetrated various treacherous tricks unprecedented in the history of elections in our country to ensure its victory. In this regard, the Malay Nationalist Revolutionary Party of Malaya [MNRPM] condemns in the strongest terms the treacherous tricks perpetrated by the Barisan Nasional government as well as the undemocratic election system.

The public definitely wonders why Barisan Nasional, which won only 55.86 percent of the votes, could secure 148 seats of the 177 contested parliamentary seats, why the DAP [Democratic Action Party] winning 20.3 percent of the votes got 24 seats, why the PAS [Pan Malaysian Islamic Party] obtaining 15.26 percent of the votes won only 1 seat, and why independent candidates got only 4 seats. This was possible because the election system in our country is undemocratic. The distribution of seats was not proportional to the percentage of votes obtained by each party, and thus, did not fairly reflect the results of the election which were favorable to the regime but unfavorable to the partiotic and democratic forces.

Of 6,748,000 registered voters, as many as 4,717,000 cast their votes. Some 2.59 million of 55.86 percent voted for Barisan nasional, while about 2.12 million or 44.14 percent voted for patriotic and democratic opposition parties and independent candidates. Some 2.03 million or 30.1 percent of the registered voters did not cast their ballots. These figures point out beyond any doubt that only one-third of the voters voted for Barisan Nasional and another one-third voted for opposition parties and independent candidates.

The MNRPM extends its warmest congratulations to the DAP, PAS, PSRM [People's Socialist Party of Malaysia], SDP [Socialist Democratic Party], Nasma [Nationalist Party of Malaysia], and indpendent candidates who succeeded in winning the some 2.12 million votes. This fact has undeniable proven that one-third of the voters voted for them. The DAP has doubled the number of its parliamentary seats, the PAS won an additional 2 percent of votes, and the PSRM secured votes impressively.

The PAS gained 33 percent to 46 percent of the votes in Kelantan, Terengganu, Kedah, and Perlis. Apart from the undemocratic election system, the Barisan Nasional government perpeterated various treacherous tricks against opposition parties and independent candidates, particularly against the PAS which it considers its number-one enemy. The tricks included, among other things, the sudden announcement of the election. Earlier, Barisan Nasional had launched massive campaigns under the cover of government activities. It concentrated its attacks on the PAS and unleashed various slanders and allegations against the opposition. But, the opposition was unable to counter all these slanders and allegations because the mass media is controlled by the government. Moreover, the opposition had no opportunity to use any forms of the mass media. The new delineation of constituencies greatly worked against the opposition.

Barisan Nasional wasted money to buy votes and cripple the opposition and intimidated voters by mobilizing the police and Armed Forces throughout the country. To substantiate the intimidation, it caused an uproar that a riot might break out if the opposition won. Barisan Nasional committed vote-cheating by post, deliberately damaged ballot paper, deleted names of voters from the voting list, and perpetrated other treacherous acts.

Despite the undemocratic election system and treacherous tricks, the opposition parties could have achieved greater results had they been able to establish a broadly-based united front to immediately counter the Barisan Nasional propaganda. Even though Barisan Nasional is gloating over the victory it has achieved through various treacherous tricks under the undemocratic elections system, it will continue to face a bleak future.

Our country cannot achieve economic growth due to world economic recession. The prices of primary commodities continue to drop. Protectionist tariffs imposed by industrialized countries are hampering our country's exports. The country's debts are soaring, and inflation is becoming worse. The number of unemployed is swelling. The gap between the rich and the poor is steadily widening. Racial polarization is sharpening. Corruption and the abuse of power are prevalent.

Contradictions between the Barisan Nasional and the people are sharpening, as well as between the Barisan Nasional component parties, particulartly within the UMNO [United Malays National Organization]. The Mahathir regime will become more indifferent. All this will give new impetus to the people's struggle.

The MNRPM believes that a united front was not only very important before and during the election but also after the election. Accordingly, the partriotic and democratic opposition parties and people's organizations have an important task to establish immediately a broadly based united front to systematically counter the Barisan Nasional government. Such a united front must coordinate with one another, support the struggle of opposition representatives in Parliament and the state legislative assemblies, and systematically spread propaganda and educate the masses. The front must also lead the masses in launching an economic and political struggle and develop the patriotic and democratic movement.

To achieve these objectives, the MNRPM believes that a common program must be set through democratic consultations. This program must broadly represent the immediate ecomomic and political interests of the masses of all races and strata. Only by these means can we broadly unite, waken the consciousness of the masses, and force the Barisan Nasional Government to stop oppressing the people arbitratily and end the domestic war inherited from the colonialists. Thus, only then can we establish a patriotic and democratic coalition government to defend the people's interests.

SINGAPORE

LEE TESTIFIES BEFORE PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

BK131731 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 12 Sep 86 p 12

[Text] Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew yesterday went into the witness box to open himself to questioning under oath, and to "satisfy the whole of Singapore" — as well as Mr J.B. Jeyaretnam — that his charges of Executive interference were baseless.

"I am here to answer three specific allegations and any matter connected with them. He will have all the answers he needs."

But the MP for Anson disregarded this invitation and chose instead to focus on questions about Mr Lee's personal views and philosophy towards the Opposition.

The three allegations made by the Anson MP in Parliament and in the course of five days of hearing by the Committee of Privileges were:

— First, that Government made use of the three Public Service Commission [PSC] members and Attorney-General Tan Book Teik — making up four in the six-member Legal Service Commission — to arrange for judges to be removed from the Subordinate Courts.

— Then, there was the charge that Chief Justice Wee Chong Jin and Mr Tan were beholden to Mr Lee.

He had said that he never discussed the transfer of any member of the subordinate judiciary with the Chief Justice, Attorney-General, chairman of the PSC or any other member of the Legal Service Commission.

Later in the witness box, Mr Lee talked about how, in his view, Mr Jeyaretnam was directly or indirectly responsible for an ASIAN WALL STREET JOURNAL editorial which had done serious damage not only to the Government and the Judiciary, but also to Singapore.

When it appeared that Mr Jeyaretnam was unlikely to get to the three core issues, the committee decided on a five-minute adjournment at 5:05 pm.

On their return, Dr Yeoh announced that this stage of the proceedings had come to an end and that the hearing would be adjourned to a date to be fixed.

— The most recent was that Mr Tan was being groomed for high office by the Government. And the Chief Justice, being aware of Mr Tan's strong political backing, had to defer to him over who to transfer from the subordinate judiciary.

Having defined the allegations, and having asked the committee not to allow Mr Jeyaretnam to go on a "free-roaming" exercise, Mr Lee waited for the questions.

Mr Jeyaretnam started by asking whether the Prime Minister hated him, and then went on to ask why Mr Lee used strong words to describe him in Parliament.

Mr Lee, saying he was mindful of not wanting to deny the MP for Anson his time for cross-examination, gave this a lengthy reply.

He told the hearing the types of opposition politicians he could tolerate, and those he could not. He put Mr. Jeyaretnam in the latter category, and he explained why.

Committee members, who reminded Mr Jeyaretnam that his time was limited and that he should get down to the core of the matter, were told by the MP for Anson that he was trying to establish the background necessary to prove his case that there was indeed political motivation. He asked to be allowed more time.

But the chairman, Dr Yeoh Ghim Seng, was firm, stressing that the hearing would be concluded at the day's end. Four days had already been spent.

Mr Lee repeated the point that he was only offering himself to answer the three specific allegations of Government wrong-doing.

"I have not been asked (to be a witness) to begin with. I made myself freely available. It has taken five days out of my work. I am not here for a general discussion," he said.

Before he entered the witness box, Mr Lee said the issue before the committee was the basis for the charges against Mr Jeyaretnam.

The MP for Anson said they were politically motivated. The Government's view was that the charges were based on hard evidence and that they were tried fairly right up to appeal stage.

The Prime Minister reminded the committee that he made a statement to the Commission of Inquiry into Mr Jeyaretnam's allegations in June.

AQUINO COMMENTS ON ISSUES PRIOR TO U.S. TRIP

HK121113 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 12 Sep 86 p 16

[Text] Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo will be in charge when President Corazon C. Aquino leaves next week for her official working visit to the United States.

The President clarified this in a conference with newsmen at Malacanang yesterday.

Explaining her decision, the President pointed out that "it is the tradition in the past that all (Philippine) presidents who go abroad leave the executive secretary in charge."

The President's statement put into proper perspective an administrative order she issued last August 12 on who shall execise the functions of the president during her state visit.

Under Administrative Order No. 4, the President said the Vice-President shall preside over Cabinet meetings, represent the President in social functions, preside over official ceremonies, and receive as well as return the official calls of foreign dignitaries on behalf and in representation of the President.

The same order instructed the executive secretary to sign all papers which are ordinarily signed by him under the President's authority. The executive secretary is also asked to transmit all official communications to the President while she is abroad.

Yesterday, the President said: "Any urgent matter that needs my attention will be sent through either him (Arroyo), Vice-President (Salvador H.) Laurel or my private secretary (her daughter, Ballsy Cruz) who are all in the best position to get to me immediately."

Mrs Aquino also clarified that her authorizing the National Security Council [NSC] to convene after getting her approval while she is abroad "has nothing to do with an earlier proposal by Laurel for the council to act as caretaker in her absence. [quotation marks as published]

For the first time during her administration the President convened the NSC Wednesday. Its membership was expanded, as proposed by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos.

In the same meeting, the President said she feels confident that she has the full support of the people and her Cabinet as she leaves for a nine-day US trip.

She said while in the US she would like to be free from worrying about differences among members of her Cabinet who will stay behind. It was a comfort to her to be assured by Laurel that the Cabinet will remain united under her leadership, she said.

Earlier, she had also been assured by Enrile of his full support while he stays behind to keep an eye of the country's security.

The President was again asked on the report that the White House is a bit unhappy about how she is handling the local communist insurgency problems.

The President said if U.S. President Ronald Reagan bothers to ask her about the matter, she would tell him "politely that this is a domestic problem and we Filipinos know how best to solve our problems."

The more important thing, "is that personal friendship between Reagan and myself is establish [as published]," she said.

Mrs. Aquino said she hopes to convince the country's creditor banks based in the U.S. to give her government more liberal terms in servicing the country's $26-billion foreign debt.

"With 50 percent of our export earnings going to interest payments, it is impossible for the country to grow so I hope they (the credit banks) can see that there is no way we could repay them if they insist on terms that would make it impossible for us to do so," she said.

Current conditions are such that the government cannot even manage to launch a significant land reform program as envisioned by her administration, the President said.

There are indications however that the broad outlines of such a program may be announced by the President when she visits Negros Occidental upon her return from her U.S. trip in October.

The president said due to limited resources, "we cannot do as much as we would like to especially since we cannot just take over land without giving due compensation to the owners."

The least that they could do is to allow tenants in certain lands either owned by the government or foreclosed by government banks to implement projects which are funded mostly by outside financial assistance, she added.

The president yesterday also commented on the move in the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] to include in the new constitution a provision seeking to declare the Philippines a nuclear free zone and to remove foreign military facilities in the country.

She stressed that she will not interfere with the Con-Com and reiterated her position to respect the agreement earlier forged by the past administration and the U.S. government which leaves the U.S. bases free to stay here until 1991 "and keep my options open on the matter afterwards."

The president also commented on the forthcoming ceasefire talks between her government and the communist insurgents represented by the National Democratic Front (umbrella organization of which the Communist Party of the Philippines and its armed support group the New People's Army fall under).

Mrs. Aquino said she is looking into a proposal for a regional ceasefire but that the guidelines for implementing this would have to be approved by her before it becomes effective.

Warned of Possible Assassination Plot

HK140846 Hong Kong AFP in English 0835 GMT 14 Sep 86

[Text] Manila, Sept 14 (AFP) -- Philippine President Corazon Aquino has been warned that Filipino military officers loyal to her deposed predecessor could try to assassinate her when she visits the United States next week, newspapers reported here Sunday. Bonifacio Gillego, a U.S.-based official of a Philippine Government commission tasked with recovering ex-president Ferdinand Marcos's allegedly ill-gotten wealth, said he had received reports that some officers formerly assigned to diplomatic posts in the United States were planning to kill her.

Mr. Gillego said at least 10 Marcos loyalist officers with "managerial skills in clandestine operations" were capable of assassinating her, newspapers reported. "They are capable of doing anything," Mr. Gillego was quoted by the MALAYA newspaper as saying.

He said the officers were former members of Armed Forces' intelligence units and the Presidential Security Command sent by Mr. Marcos to the United States to monitor the activities of anti-Marcos groups there, using their diplomatic posts as cover, MALAYA reported. Mr. Gillego added that the officers were now on unofficial leave, having failed to return to the Philippines despite a recall order issued by Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos after a military-led revolt in February put Mrs. Aquino in power and sent Mr. Marcos into exile in Hawaii. He said he had alerted Mrs Aquino to the assassination danger, the SUNDAY TIMES reported. The presidential palace could not confirm the report. Mr. Gillego could not be reached for confirmation.

ENRILE, MARCOS SPEAK ON COUP PROSPECTS

[Text] In Manila, Philippine Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday brushed aside rumors that there would be power grabbing in the country as soon as President Corazon Aquino leaves for her U.S. visit. Minister Enrile said that the same old rumor is coming out again. The Philippines' top defense official told a group of lawyers that there is no danger in the country during President Aquino's absence, especially to her presidency. However, Mr Enrile warned that if any group mounts an attempt to take over the government by force, the government will see to it that they will be behind bars.

Meanwhile, deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos declared that an attempted coup during President Aquino's visit to the United States was improbable. Mr Marcos declared this during the celebration of his 69th birthday, his first in exile, in Honolulu. The deposed Philippine president likewise expressed his desire to be in the Philippines for his next birthday, and said that he wants to go back, but not to start a civil war.

METRO MANILA 'CONTINGENCY PLAN' DRAWN UP

HK121305 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 12 Sep 86 p 6

[Text] Metro Manila acting Gov. Joey Lina yesterday met with officers of the Capital Region Command (CAPCOM) to discuss a "contingency plan" during President Aquino's visit to the United States.

After a two-hour closed door meeting at the Metro Manila Commission's war room, Lina said drawing up the plan was "normal". He refused to elaborate.

Lina also tagged as "confidential" information on the alleged mobilization of Marcos loyalists.

The agenda of the meeting included an assessment of the peace and order situation in Metro Manila by CAPCOM chief Brig. Gen. Ramon Montano, as well as security arrangements during the President's trip.

Asked if the supporters of the deposed president are beginning to pose a threat to the stability of the metropolis Lina said "there are no indications," quelling speculations of a possible overthrow of the Aquino government.

As he kept mum on the delicate issues of the meeting, Lina readily disclosed information on plans to improve peace and order in the metropolis including the strengthening of the police force through improved pay scales. Policemen, on the average, have takehome pay of P800 a month, Lina added.

AQUINO, BALWEG SIGN PEACE ACCORD 13 SEP

HK140052 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 0030 GMT 14 Sep 86

[Text] President Aquino's quest for peace continued to gain headway yesterday when she signed a peace pact with renegade priest Conrado Balweg for an indefinite cease-fire in the war-torn Cordillera Region in the northern Philippines. The Philippine President again broke all protocol when she flew to Mountain Province to meet face to face with Balweg, who waged a relentless war against the government in the late seventies to protest the dislocation of the Cordillera people.

The President's historic meeting with Balweg culminated in the signing of a joint memorandum of agreement between the New Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Cordillera People's Liberation Army headed by Balweg. A presidential spokesman told reporters during a press conference that the President gave Balweg a Bible and rosary.

The historical meeting again demonstrated the sincerity of President Aquino to end immediately the bloodshed in the country. Under the joint memorandum of agreement, the government and Balweg's group agreed and committed themselves to a cessation of hostilities. However, both sides will constitute their respective panels for negotiations on the issue involved to be carried out immediately.

More on Accord

[Text] Manila, Sept. 13 KYODO — The Philippine Government and leaders of a guerrilla group fighting for greater autonomy for tribal minorities in the northern Philippines have signed a cease-fire pact and agreed to appoint envoys to peace talks, a presidential spokesman said Saturday. The agreement was reached Saturday morning during a meeting between President Corazon Aquino and Conrado Balweg, chairman of the Cordillera People's Liberation Army (CPLA), in a hotel in Benguet Province. Most of the CPLA's leaders, including the 42-year-old Balweg, are former members of the communist-led New People's Army (NPA) in the region. "The reason for this visit is to show that my government is different from the previous one. That is why I brought my ministers along to attend to your problems," Aquino was quoted by press secretary Teodoro Benigno as telling the CPLA's 10-man delegation. This is the second time in Aquino's seven-month presidency that she has broken protocol by meeting with a rebel leader. Two weeks ago, she met with Muslim rebel leader Nur Misuari in the southern Philippines, where another cease-fire accord was hammered out.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, who accompanied Aquino, "expressed concern that complete cessation of hostilities would not be possible" in parts of the Cordillera where the NPA guerrillas operate, the spokesman said. The NPA has said that it will not abide with any agreement that may be reached by the Aquino Government with the CPLA.

[Excerpt] The military yesterday [12 Sep] issued a shoot to kill order against a long-wanted hitman of the New People's Army who shot dead a soldier and wounded an army captain last Wednesday in front of gate 1 of Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City. Colonel Pedro Juanchon, Jr., Camp Aguinaldo commander, issued the order after it was established that Jose Aurelio Reyes, an NPA hitman, is also wanted for the killing of 11 other persons, mostly policemen, in Metro Manila during the past years. Reyes was arrested Wednesday by military police operatives near Camp Aguinaldo. He escaped after shooting to death Corporal Vicente Landicho and seriously wounding Captain Cecilio Palada inside a minicruiser jeep. Juanchon warned the public that Reyes is dangerous and armed with a handgun. [passage omitted]

ENRILE SAYS STEPS TAKEN TO FIGHT INSURGENCY

HK120943 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 12 Sep 86 p 16

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday said the military is fully aware of the insurgency problem, including the one in the Metro Manila area, and positive steps have been taken to ensure the security of the people.

Enrile made the remarks in reaction to the shooting of an Army corporal and a captain at the gate of Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City Wednesday, by suspected assassins from the New People's Army.

Capt. Cecilio Palada and Cpl. Reynaldo Landicho of the military police brigade were both shot in the head as they were bringing the suspect and his companion into the camp for questioning.

Enrile said the incident should not be the cause for alarm but it should be the starting point in recognizing that an insurgency problem exists even in the city.

"What we are saying is that we have a problem, the sooner we recognize the problem the better for us all," Enrile told newsmen yesterday.

He said the problem should be squarely confronted and "we should not pretend there is no problem and hope that it will blow away and leave us."

The defense chief also indicated that the Camp Aguinaldo incident could be the beginning of a protracted plot of the insurgents to sow violence in the city.

He however added that the military will not allow this to happen.

On the shooting incident, Enrile said military investigators are still looking into the case and that he has not received any report on the matter lately.

Meanwhile, Col. Pete Juachon, Camp Aguinaldo commander, told newsmen yesterday that he has sent several teams out to look for the suspect, a certain Ely, tagged as the gunman who shot the two government troopers.

Juachon said they have firmed up links as well as certain leads regarding Ely's reported ties with a sparrow unit of the NPA.

He, however, declined to give out details on these links saying that they do not want to preempt the investigation at this early stage.

LAUREL, GONZALEZ COMMENT ON PEACE TALKS

HK130050 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 12 Sep 86

[Text] Vice President Salvador Laurel yesterday [12 Sep] said a deadline must be set for the rebels to lay down their arms if they want a bloodless settlement of disputes. Laurel said a cut-off date must be set, and if no agreement is reached and they still want to topple the government, then they are considered enemies of the state.

Laurel added that the Aquino government is doing its best for peace to regain [as heard] in the country, and he added that the peace efforts of the president must bring about positive results.

Still on the government's peace moves, Justice Minister Neptali Gonzalez yesterday appealed for support for President Aquino's peace initiatives with the communists. He warned that the collapse of the ongoing peace negotiations with the rebels would result in fratricidal strife. In a speech before the Kiwanis Luzon district convention at the Manila Hotel, Gonzalez warned of terrible consequences should the present peace talks with the insurgents fail. He also said President Aquino is trying her best to seek a peace that is enduring, just, and honorable, not peace for the dead, but for the living.

NDF PRESSSED TO RESPOND TO CEASE-FIRE PROPOSAL

HK120945 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 12 Sep 86 p 16

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino wants "something concrete" from the National Democratic Front (NDF) on the government's proposal of a 30-day ceasefire before she leaves the country for the United States this Monday.

In what appears to be a stronger government stance, Agriculture and Food Minister Ramon Mitra yesterday said the president wants a "categorical position" from the NDF.

Mitra hinted that if NDF negotiators -- Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel -- fail to accept the ceasefire proposal, government's efforts to negotiate for peace might be aborted.

"If we cannot agree on this (ceasefire) we will not be able to agree on anything," Mitra told a group of reporters.

Mitra's statement has in effect given the NDF negotiators only three days to agree to a ceasefire without any specific conditions. According to the minister, President Aquino wants to issue "a statement" about the peace talks before she leaves for the U.S.

President Aquino wants an assurance that peace negotiators could "hold the hand that squeezes the trigger" when she issues any statements before leaving, Mitra said. "The president wants a cessation of hostilities."

The 30-day ceasefire was proposed by Mitra and Commission on Audit chairman Teofisto Guingona, the other member of the government panel, to the NDF negotiators last Saturday during a four-hour meeting "somewhere in metro Manila."

However, last Monday the NDF rejected the government's proposal saying that good intentions alone cannot guarantee that such an agreement will work.

In a press statement issued by the NDF Monday rebel negotiators said the Aquino government's proposal for 30-day ceasefire, without prior definition of its mechanics and safeguards may prove useless or a "mere scrap of paper."

The NDF negotiators explained that the current operational policies and heavy concentration of troops of the Armed Forces are the main deterrent to the government's proposal for a mutual declaration of ceasefire.

Irked by such a rejection, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile last Tuesday told the Publishers Association of the Philippines, Inc. (PAPI) that if the NDF does not want any ceasefire, "there will be no ceasefire."

'Opposed to Any U.S. Interference'

[Text] The National Democratic Front [NDF] says it is opposed to any agreements for a cease-fire if President Aquino will use these as a bargaining tool during her talks with President Reagan. At a press conference, NDF leaders said they are opposed to any U.S. interference in the peace negotiations. The government has been trying to obtain the NDF's agreement to a 30-day cease-fire prior to the departure of the president. However NDF negotiator Satur Ocampo says that the peace talks should not be subject to any deadlines.

RAMOS REITERATES MILITARY SUPPORT FOR PEACE

[By A. F. Soriano]

[Text] General Fidel V. Ramos, AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] chief of staff, reaffirmed yesterday the military's full support of President Aquino's peace initiatives, saying that he has encouraged similar efforts at local and regional levels.

He said even without the formulation of national guidelines on ceasefire negotiations, he has instructed his field commanders to establish contact with the insurgents in hopes of forging local or regional ceasefire agreements.

Reiterating his recent statement of support during a consensus among AFP officers, Ramos said the armed forces "continues to support fully and remain constantly under and to respond faithfully to civilian authority."

Ramos said the President in a statement last April at the University of the Philippines said, "I am offering the insurgents an honorable peace. One that will not ignore their demands, but also one that will not detract in any way from the security of the people, the stability of the government and the honor of the armed forces."

Ramos also cited another statement of Mrs. Aquino in which she made it clear that "there will be no ceasefire with return of the troops to the barracks that will lead the insurgents in a free zone within which to operate with impunity."

However, Ramos said the local peace pacts should not be accompanied by any pre-conditions.

He said that as much as possible, ceasefire and peace negotiations should involve the participation of all the sectors of the community -- the church, the professionals, labor and youth.

GOVERNMENT, MNLF NEGOTIATORS TO CONSULT FACTIONS

HK121223 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 12 Sep 86 p 13

[Text] Zamboanga City — Government emissary Agapito "Butz" Aquino and Nur Misuari, chairman of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), have drawn up their itinerary for the series of consultations with other MNLF and Muslim leaders in Mindanao.

Details of the consultations were worked out Tuesday in Maimbung, Sulu by Aquino, Misuari and Norberto Gonzales, chairman of the Partido Demokratiko Sosyalista ng Pilipinas (PDSP) [Philippine Socialist Democratic Party] who liaisons with the two panels.

For security reasons, the dates and places of the meeting were not disclosed by Aquino.

Upon their return to Zamboanga Tuesday, Aquino and Gonzales said that except for some "technical details," the scheduled consultations in other parts of Mindanao are expected to be completed, at the most, within two weeks.

The consultations were decided by Misuari after his dialog with President Corazon C. Aquino in Jolo, Sulu, last Friday to find a lasting solution to the 14-year-old Mindanao rebellion which resulted in the death of close to 50,000 people.

During the dialog President Aquino and Misuari had agreed on the creation of two panels — one representing the government and the other the MNLF -- to work out conditions for the settlement of the Mindanao conflict.

As to the final talks between the two panels, Aquino said there is a possibility the talks may be held in a foreign country for security reasons and to facilitate movement for Misuari who is "quite uncomfortable in Maimbung."

The name of the country was not mentioned but it could be nearby, Aquino said.

It was not said how Misuari will be commuting from his base at Miambung to other parts in Mindanao but Gonzales said the MNLF leader will make it to the places agreed upon on the dates of consultations.

The first-day Bangsa Moro Congress which ended last Friday gave Missuari a free hand in working out with the Aquino government ways to solve the Mindanao problem.

Misuari has told reporters in Maimbung that he considers Mindanao as historically and geographically not part of the Philippine Republic.

On the other hand, president Aquino said he will not allow the separation of Mindanao from the Republic as a condition for peace in Southern Philippines.

MILF Protests Accord

[Text] Cotabato, Philippines, Sept 14 (AFP) — Some 70,000 members and supporters of a Moslem rebel faction staged a rally in this troubled southern city Sunday to protest the recent peace dialogue between Moslem rebel leader Nur Misuari and President Corazon Aquino. Mr Misuari, who heads the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), forged a formal truce with Mrs Aquino after attending a Moslem congress in the southern island of Sulu in the first week of September.

Members and supporters of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), a breakaway group from the MNLF, came by the truckload from nearby Moslem provinces and gathered in a park here to attend what they called the MILF Bangsa Moro peace and consultation rally. It was the second such rally since Mrs Aquino came to power in Febrary.

The protestors, composed mainly of unarmed soldiers, farmers, laborers, and religious leaders, braved steady rains and chanted "allahu, Akbar" while speakers took turns in denouncing [words indistinct] and demanded that all Moslem factions be represented in peace negotiations for the Moslem south. Placards displayed at the rally also solicited support for the MILF under Hashim Salamat, and said any negotiations without Mr Salamat's participation would not be binding on the MILF and the Moslems in general. Speakers also demanded that negotiations between the Moslems and the Philippine Government be held under the auspices of the Organization of Islamic Conference and World Muslim League.

HK120931 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 12 Sep 86 p 14

[Text] Baguio City — Partido Cordillera [Cordillera Party] a political party envisioned to take the reins of the regional autonomous government in the Cordillera is now in its initial stage of formation.

This was dislcosed by Partido Cordillera preparatory committee member, James Balao, in an interview with the CORDILLERA NEWS AND FEATURES.

Balao said the organization of the new political party was initiated by a group of Igorot lawyers, professionals and government employees in preparation for the coming plebiscite and local elections.

He said that the preparatory committee has organized committees to plan for the formal launching of the party probably by October.

Members of the preparatory committee include Joseph Humiding of Ifugao; Joseph Facullo, provincial board member of the Mt. Province; Tomas Beneafin, former board member of the old Mt. Province; David Baoas, director of the Office of Muslim Affairs and Cultural Communities, and Joanna Carino of the Cordillera People's Alliance.

A draft platform of Partido Cordillera has been prepared containing its proposed program for the establishment of regional autonomy in the Cordillera.

In its draft platform, Partido Cordillera declares itself as "a political party which stands for the interests of the indigenous people of the Cordillera" having a general program of government aimed at "asserging the right to self-determination."

Its political program proposes "linkages among local, ethnic, sectoral and multisectoral organizations so that the constituency can directly participate in all levels of decision-making."

The installation of a regional police force to maintain peace and order as well as the codification of all positive customs and traditions as part of the law are other significant items in their program.

On culture, Partido Cordillera proposes to work for the recognition of indigenous cultural institutions, to resist the dominant foreign orientation in education, to promote freedom of media and arts, and to work towards the elimination of discrimination of chauvinism against ethnic minorities.

The party's social policy affirms a "preferential option for the poor, the weak and dispossessed in the programs of the autonomous region by establishing a network of social services that benefit the masses".

Its economic program emphasizes on the protection of ancestral land, comprehensive agrarian reform, progressive tax system, employment opportunities and job security and development of science and technology.

At present, Partido Cordillera organizers are inviting all Igorots who subscribe to the general program of the party for regional autonomy to become members.
